RICHARD HARDING DAVIS TELLS HOW THOSE BLINDED IN BATTLE ARE CARED FOR

Noted Correspondent Visits Asylums Both in England and France, Where Disabled Heroes Are Taught Useful Trades—Their Cheerfulness Is Amazing.

LONDON, Feb. 16.

THESE days the streets of Paris are filled with soldiers each of whom has given to France some part of his physical self. That his country may endure, that she may continue to enjoy and teach liberty, he has seen his arm or his leg, or both, blown off, or cut off. But when on the boulevards you meet him walking with crutches or with an empty sleeve pinned beneath his Cross of War, and he thinks your glance is one of pity, he resents it. He holds his head more stiffly erect. He seems to say, "I know how greatly you envy me."

And who would dispute him? Long after the war is ended, so long as he lives, men and women of France will honor him, and in their eyes he will read their thanks. But there is one soldier who cannot read their thanks, who is spared the sight of their pity. He is the one who has made all but the supreme sacrifice. He is the one who is blind. He sits in perpetual darkness. You can remember certain nights that seemed to stretch to doomsday, when sleep was withheld and you tossed and lashed upon the pillow, praying for the dawn. Imagine a night of such torture dragged out over many years, with the dreadful knowledge that the dawn will never come. Imagine Paris with her bridges, palaces and parks, with the Seine, the Tuilleries, the boulevards, the glittering shop windows conveyed to you only through noise, only through the shrieks of motor horns and the shuffling of feet.

MISS WINIFRED HOPE.
American Woman Who Organized France's "Blinded in Battle" Committee.

The men who have been blinded in battle have lost more than sight. They have been robbed of their independence. They feel they are a burden. It is not only the physical loss they suffer, but the thought that no longer are they of use, that they are a care, that in the scheme of things, even in their own little circle of family and friends, there is for them no place.

It is not unfair to the poilu to say that the officer who is blinded suffers more than the private. As a rule, he is more highly strung, more widely educated, he has seen more, his experience of the world is broader, he has more to lose. Before the war he may have been a lawyer, doctor, man of many affairs. For him it is harder than for the peasant to accept a future of unending blackness spent in plaiting straw, or weaving rag carpets. Under such conditions life no longer tempts him. Instead death tempts him, and the pistol seems very near at hand.

It was to save men of the officer class from despair, and from suicide, to make them know that for them there still was a life of usefulness, work and accomplishment, that there was organized in France the Committee for Men Blinded in Battle. The idea was to bring back to officers who had lost their sight, courage, hope and a sense of independence, to give them work not merely mechanical, but more in keeping with their education and intelligence. The President of France is patron of the society and on its committees in Paris and New York are many distinguished names. The French Government has promised a house near Paris where the blind soldiers may be educated. When I saw them they were in temporary quarters in the Hotel de Crillon, loaned them by the proprietor.

American Leads Movement.

THEY had been gathered from hospitals in different parts of France by Miss Winifred Holt who for years has been working for the blind in her Lighthouse in New York. She is assisted in the work in Paris by Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt. The officers were brought to the Crillon by French ladies whose duty it was to guide them through the streets. Some of them also were their instructors and in order to teach them to read and write with their fingers, had themselves learned the Braille alphabet. This requires weeks of very close and patient study. And no nurse's uniform goes with it. But the reward was great.

It was evident in the alert and eager interest of the men who perhaps only a week before had wished to "curse God, and die." But since then, Hope had returned to each of them, and he had found a door open, and a new life.

And he was facing it with the same or with even a greater courage than that with which he had led his men into the battle that blinded him. Some of the officers were modeling in clay, others were learning typewriting, one with a drawing board was studying to be an architect, others were pressing their finger tips over the raised letters of the Braille alphabet.

Opposite each officer, on the other side of the table, sat a woman he could not see. She might be young and beautiful, as many of them were. She might be white-haired and a great lady bearing an ancient title, from the faubourg across the bridges, but he heard only a voice.

Officers Again as Children.

THE voice encouraged his progress, or corrected his mistakes, and a hand, detached and descended from nowhere, guided his hand, gently, as one guides the fingers of a child. The officer was again a child. In life for the second time he was beginning with A, B and C. The officer was tall, handsome and deeply sunburned. In his uniform of a chasseur d'Afrique he was a splendid figure. On his chest were the medals of the campaigns in Morocco and Algiers, and the crimson ribbon of the Legion of Honor. The officer placed his forefinger on a card covered with raised hieroglyphics.

"N," he announced.

"No," the voice answered him.

"M?" His tone did not carry conviction.

"You are guessing," accused the voice. The officer was greatly confused.

"No, no, madamoiselle!" he protested. "Truly, I thought it was an 'M.'"

He laughed guiltily. The laugh shook you. You saw all that he could never see; inside the room the great ladies and latest American countesses, eager to help, forgetful of self, full of wonderful, womanly sympathy, and outside, the Place de la Concorde, the gardens of the Tuilleries, the trees of the Champs Elysees, the sun getting behind the gilded dome of the Invalides. All these were lost to him, and yet as he sat in the darkness, because he could not tell an N from an M, he laughed, and laughed happily.

From where did he draw his strength and courage? Was it the instinct for life that makes a drowning man fight against an ocean? Was it his training as an officer of the Grande Armee? Was it that spirit of the French that is the one thing no German knows, and no German can ever break? Or, was it the sound of a woman's voice, and the touch of a woman's hand? If the reader wants to contribute something to help teach a new profession to these gentlemen, who in the fight for civilization have contributed their eyesight, write to the secretary of the committee, Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, Hotel Ritz, Paris.

What is going forward at the Crillon for blind French officers is being carried on in London, at St. Dunstan's, Regents Park, for blind Tommies. At this school, the classes are much larger than are those in Paris, the pupils more numerous, and they live and sleep on the premises. The premises are very beautiful. They consist of 17 acres of gardens, lawns, trees, a lake and a stream on which you can row and swim, situated in Regents Park, and almost in the heart of London. In the days when London was farther away, the villa of St. Dunstan's belonged to the eccentric Marquis of Hertford, the wicked Lord Steyne of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair." It was a country estate. Now the city has closed in around it, but it is still a country estate with ceilings by the Brothers Adam, portraits by Romney, sideboards by Sheraton and on the lawn, sheep. To keep sheep in London is as expensive as to keep race horses, and to own a country estate in London can be afforded only by Americans. The estate next to St. Dunstan's is owned by an American lady. I used to play lawn tennis there with her husband. Had it not been for the horns of the taxicabs we might have been a hundred miles from the nearest railroad. Instead, we were so close to Baker street that one false step would have landed us in Madame Tousseaux's. When

Gen. Miles Tells Why He Believes No Foreign Nation Could Successfully Invade the United States

Former Head of the American Army Says Even a Force of 400,000 Men, Than Which No Smaller Would Attempt Such an Expedition, Would Dissolve Like Snow Under the Sun Before the Resistance It Would Encounter.

He Outlines Plan by Which Regular Establishment Could Be Kept at 150,000 and Quickly Increased to 400,000 or Even 1,000,000 in Case of Supreme National Emergency.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.

A REGULAR army of 150,000 men, organized to the minute and readily capable of expansion under the same officers into an army of 400,000 on a fighting footing, with the national guard organized on identical lines, and an ample number of submarines and seaplanes, constitute the fundamentals of the preparedness plan of Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles, veteran of the Civil War, Indian fighter and one time commanding General of the army.

Gen. Miles is confident that under his plan the peace strength of the regular army could be expanded into the war strength "without adding a single officer or a single regiment."

"This is no new theory," said the General, in explaining his plan to a congressional committee. "It is the result of years of observation, not only in our country, of the requirements and condition of our people, but experience and observation in every other army of the world."

The General's plan to the committee was but briefly touched in the news at the time it was made. It is here given at greater length.

"I am sure that it would be the most economical of any of the many plans now suggested, and I am sure that it would be the most effective organization that could be adopted by our Government," said the General. "It would also be capable of expanding into a military force of 1,200,000 men. This need only be done as the revenues of the Government would warrant. If you have the system and the organization and fill it up from the bottom, you have all the military experience and skill available to be used in the most effective manner.

Without Additional Burden.

"IT would require no special or extraordinary increases of taxes upon the people, or additional burdens. Of course, as you changed the organization there would be vacancies at the bottom of the list, which would have to be filled either from West Point or from the army or from civil life. The additional number of Second Lieutenants that would be required by this change I recommend be appointed from states and congressional districts in the course of four years, the same as the appointments now being made to West Point and Annapolis. This system would be purely American and there is nothing to indicate that a larger military force would be required in the near future and I hope never in the distant future.

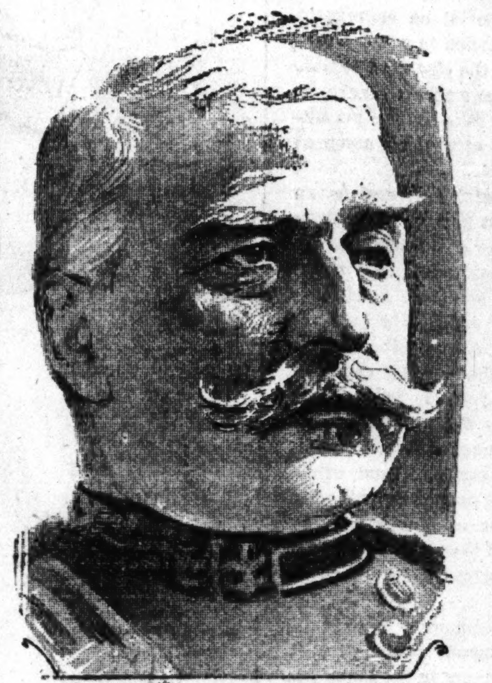
"With the perfected organization there would be no difficulty in securing the necessary men in case of imminent danger of invasion. You could not keep the men back. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War we asked for only 160,000 volunteers, but because of pressure and patriotic ardor, we actually enlisted 300,000 men. Only 52,000 of these were sent out of the country before it became apparent that peace was soon coming.

No Fear of Invasion.

"IT is true that I have no fear of a foreign invader landing on our shores in large force. The placing of an army on American soil is the last thing any European Government would attempt. It could never be re-embarked. It would dissolve like snow beneath the midday sun. Whenever it has been attempted it has resulted in disaster.

"An enemy, to make any show of strength, must land 400,000 men and 80,000 horses, with all the ammunition, transportation and munitions of war required, with supplies enough to feed the men and animals for at least 90 days, because it would be easy to burn anything within their reach. Then, supposing our own navy at the bottom of the sea, it might be possible for an invader to reach our shore.

It would require a tremendous amount of transportation to embark an army of 400,000 men and 80,000 horses, together with all equipment and supplies. If such an army should land and the ships that brought them could not be destroyed by the patriotism and valor of the American people before they could be sent back for another load, then I would want to live in some other country.



GEN. NELSON A MILES.

His Plan of Organization.

"UNDER my plan the infantry regiment would be 3000 men for war; coast artillery, 2000; field artillery, 1540; cavalry 1840. This is much larger than the cavalry regiments of Europe. That gives a total of 394,920 men and 7439 officers.

"I believe that would be all we will ever need, but in case a war should continue, or should be more threatening, and you wished to increase it still more, utilizing the skill and experience of all the officers and noncommissioned officers of your army, this is also suggested: Should the condition of the country require it, these organizations can be increased to more than 1,000,000 men by converting each regiment into a brigade, each battalion into a regiment, each company into a battalion and each platoon into a company, and assigning the officers temporary commissions according to the requirements of the service, at the close of the war they returning to their proper station in the army as organized under the law. The national guard should be organized in the same way. That would give you a peace force of nearly 300,000 men and a war strength of 2,000,000 men."

Federalizing the Guard.

GEN. MILES does not concede any great difficulty in the way of federalizing the national guard.

"Under the Constitution," he said, "if you want an army for conquest, to carry on a war with some other country, the national guard would not be easily federalized. But for maintaining law and order at home, maintaining the civil government of the states and the nation, and to repel invasion, it is available instantly. Under the Constitution to that extent it was wisely federalized 129 years ago.

"Section 8 of the Constitution specifically bestows upon Congress the power to organize, arm and discipline the militia. It reserves to the states only the appointment of the officers and the 'authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress.' National defense means resisting a possible invader, not a war of aggression.

"The language of this section of the Constitution is clear. Congress has power to prescribe rules for training and disciplining the militia, and no limitation was placed on those powers by the makers of the Constitution, which embodies more human wisdom than any other public document devised by man. Congress can require the national guard to be organized and maintained on lines identical with those laid down for the regular army, thus making it a thoroughly effective reserve force. My observation is that the men in the national guard are a patriotic, brave, intelligent body of young men, and entitled to high consideration and commendation and to the gratitude of the American people.

Doesn't Favor Swiss Plan.

"THEY talk about making an organization similar to that of Switzerland. Switzerland is a little country up in the snows of the Alps. There is not a nation in Europe that would care to expend the amount of life and treasure to conquer it; and there is no comparison with that community and a great nation covering a continent like ours, with a hundred millions of free people. It is absolutely useless. They have no regular army, and I hope Congress will not destroy the organization which has been perfected and is authorized by the Constitution and has been in existence for over a hundred years, but improve the organization so as to make it most effective. I would say the same as to the militia. Both are recognized by the Constitution of the United States, but the Constitution does not recognize an unorganized mass or horde of men without any control, without any commissioned or noncommissioned officers."

Spanish War Veterans.

GEN. MILES called attention to the fact that most of the men who volunteered during the Spanish-American War are now within military age.

"Including the men in the army and those who have enlisted since (during the last 17 years)," he said, "400,000 have passed through all the drill, instruction and discipline of the military service. Approximately the same number have received military training in the national guard. During that time about 136,000 young, educated men have received military instruction at our agricultural colleges under regular army officers. These figures make a total of nearly a million men in our country who have received military instruction either in the regular army, the national guard or the agricultural colleges, for which Congress appropriates money and furnishes officers for drill and instruction. This does not include the men in other military institutions, like the Virginia Military Institute, the institutions in Georgia, Vermont and other states where young men are drilled and disciplined.

"To say that these brave, patriotic men would not respond in case their country was invaded or a serious attempt to invade it, and their Government and liberties endangered, would be a statement as unjust as it would be untrue. Added to tho above number there are between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 men in our country who have passed through all the drill, discipline and instruction of European armies and are now, in the main, earnest, patriotic citizens of this great republic.

"In addition to these there are many officers on the retired lists of the army who have seen more actual warfare than any body of men in any part of the world. In case of emergency they are capable of organizing and commanding large bodies of men, as is now being done by the Generals in the German army, some of whom have been several years on the retired list and are now called back and are winning victories for that nation. One of the most brilliant Generals in Europe was six years on the retired list."

What Would Happen to an Invading Army as Gen. Miles Foresees It

IT is true that I have no fear of a foreign invader landing on our shores in large forces. The placing of an army on American soil is the last thing any European Government would attempt. It could never be re-embarked. It would dissolve like the snow beneath the midday sun. Whenever it has been attempted it has resulted in disaster. An enemy, to make any show of strength must land 400,000 men and 80,000 horses, with all the ammunition, transportation and munitions of war required, with supplies enough to feed the men and animals for at least 90 days, because it would be easy to burn anything within their reach. Then, supposing our own navy at the bottom of the sea, it might be possible for an invader to reach our shore. It would require a tremendous amount of transportation to embark an army of 400,000 men and 80,000 horses, together with all equipment and supplies. If such an army should land and the ships that brought them could not be destroyed by the patriotism and valor of the American people before they could be sent back for another load, then I would want to live in some other country.—GEN. Great "Wild West" Army From Australia Now in Cairo to Defend Canal

A Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent Graphically Describes Life in Egypt's Capital as Hordes of Soldiers Gather From the British Empire's Remotest Corners.

By ARNO DOSCH,

CAIRO, Jan. 31.

EGYPT is waiting. It is waiting with the patience of a country aged old that can afford to wait. It is quite conscious of its position in the war. It expects the German-Turkish forces to plunge toward the Suez Canal, and it is ready for them. But it awaits the event with an Eastern calm on which is superimposed a British calm.

Here in Cairo I feel I am in closed territory. After being raced across the Eastern Mediterranean in a P. & O. liner with an honest fear of submarines, I was dropped at Port Said, and there was an ordinary train, dining car and all, which hustled us on to Cairo, skirting the canal and the desert, which were not at all as ordinary. Once in Egypt, I or anyone can move about anywhere. It is easier to knock about on the delta of the Nile than in France or England. Still, one is never quite unconscious of the desert that hems us in and all the unknown things which are going on in that desert.

Once you are off the delta, the triangle with Cairo at the apex, you run into military zones. The secretive desert lies beyond, and even the trains of padded-footed camels snooping off across the skyline, no doubt on quite ordinary errands, and their Arab drivers, add to the mystery. As to the Arabs, most of them could tell a good deal if they cared to talk.

No Uprising Is Likely.

ONE can spend four and a half days going to Khartoum as easily as any tourist ever traveled the Nile, but if there is one thing extremely unlikely to happen in Egypt it is an uprising between here and the Soudan; nor are any of the desert tribes likely to create any havoc along the river. Trouble can come but from two directions, east and west. Both are under active military control, and I am for the present not permitted to write about them.

But there is enough going on in this small, intensely vivid world to keep one from getting restless. For, remote from the war as we are here, we are in it in a strategic position, and the part of Egypt which counts strategically in a military sense is really quite small. It is only three hours from here to Alexandria and five to Port Said. The situation has dramatic compactness. Beyond that there are only the considerable outpost forces at the oases in the desert.

600,000 Men Guard Suez Canal From Invasion

IT is estimated that there are 600,000 British troops in Egypt. The Suez Canal is lined with great masses of them. All the Australian and New Zealand soldiers that have been sent out since last October, when the abandonment of the Dardanelles expedition became inevitable, have been assigned to this service, and not only has Britain sent an important portion of Kitchener's new army to the canal, but she has combed her possessions to the ends of the earth to get enough men of all races to help to hold her gateway to the East inviolable.

Of the 600,000 troops now assembled in Egypt, 500,000 are white and the remaining 100,000 brown or black.

The fortifications along the canal have been made as nearly impregnable as they can be and the defensive works extend far into the desert on the Turkish side.

Egypt is staged in Cairo. Cairo has has not given up any of its ordinary life, except the tourist trade, and is carrying off its military honors with quite an air. It can afford to let the tourist go, because it has the Australians, and they are worth more in a month than the tourists of 10 years.

I happen to be waiting for something that lifts the curtain and reveals a corner of the stage. A British officer has located an Arab somewhere in the depths of Cairo, and this Arab has just come off the western desert and knows more than any other man on the delta about the doings of the most talked of man in Egypt, the head of the Senussi, the desert chieftain who is the unknown quantity in Egypt, and that officer's report will mean much. I have seated myself, as many thousands of Americans have done, on the terrace of Shepheard's Hotel, but I have quite another sight from the usual one before me.

Heroes of Western Romance.

IMAGINE the most European of Cairo's streets filled from the steps of the hotel to the arcade across the way with swaggering men in khaki. They walk with a swing and a "cheero," their spurs jangling, the emu feathers in their hats waving, their level eyes a head above even the tall Egyptians. To anyone used to the areas of Europe they strike you like a fresh wind off the mountains. For those are the Australians; the roughest, toughest, fit and fighting body of men I believe the world has ever seen. All the vari-colored, fascinating life of Cairo is swept away by their virility. They seem fairly to swell through the streets. I for one have never seen such men outside a cow town in our own West.

Imagine this ancient and secretive city bursting with the heroes of Western romance, with their pockets full of money and itching to spend it—to blow it in in a large and conspicuous manner. They fill the sidewalks, flicking with the swagger sticks at the bare legs of the sons of the Prophet who wriggle among them, keen on baksheesh and offering to sell them what they will. The sons of the Prophets rub their smarting calves and follow them with voluble curses that fall on indifferent ears. The streets, too, are full of gharrys, bearing forth imperial Australian privates out for their evening's entertainment.

The steps of the hotel are lined with military police, soldiers wearing the red and white brassure of the P. M.'s Guard. They are here every night. For that matter, they are to be found everywhere in Cairo to the number of 1500 to keep the same imperial Australian private in order. But tonight they are particularly vigilant, as an order has been issued declaring Shepheard's and the Continental Hotels out of bounds for anyone under the rank of an officer. The order was issued because the Australian privates were monopolizing the two best places in town to dine.

News From the Senussi.

TWO of these Australian boys, lean-flanked horsemen from the plains, free men in the very carriage of their heads, started to mount the steps. "Pull them up!" the Lieutenant of the P. M.'s Guard snapped out. For a moment I thought we would have a scene, but the two boys, who had not heard the official order, listened with faces as cold as marble, and, without losing a trace of dignity, turned and walked down the stairs. I wanted to cheer. The landing at Anzak was easier for them than to walk down those stairs, but they did it like cowboys and men.

Once the first overwhelming effect of the Australians has passed

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Objectionable Films.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There has been exhibited within the last few weeks in this city films that are a disgrace to any civilization. The titles are many times misleading or harmless, so that very many people, young and old, are actually trapped into seeing these disgusting pictures. What good does it do to raise a row with the show house manager? He may have been taken in himself as well as the public, not knowing the contents of the films. Raising a row does not prevent the showing of the same pictures elsewhere, by virtue of the same film exchange. The trapping of people into seeing these disgusting shows ought to be stopped by censorship at the source—namely, at the exchanges.

We spend a tremendous amount for churches and schools. Why, then, permit demoralizing schools of vice to also exist and to undo the good work? It is not necessary for any man of sense to develop this point further. Doubtless many boys and girls are started on the downward path by these immoral films, plays and by filthy pictures, etc.

Do the authorities expect to surrender the city to these evil influences and then expect especially that the children will be saved by Sunday sermons and Sunday schools? Is character to be formed by swinging between vice and virtue? The lines of Pope may be appropriate to the subject:

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

There is a great truth contained in the old adage, "Prevention is better than cure." Therefore, why not crush out such evils at their source and override the influences that seem so determined to insult an entire community and make money out of its degradation?

Why is the censorship measure that we have read so much about delayed in the Municipal Assembly, when the urgent necessity for it is so apparent?

PATER FAMILIAS.

The Cause of the War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

At the present time it should be evident to any person of average intelligence that if the German armies has been massed on the borders of our highly esteemed grandfather land, and had waited until it was invaded, there would have been no war.

Who is responsible for the sorrow which has invaded the homes of Europe? Read the history of the seven years' war, beginning in 1756. You will find there a spectacular character who has come down to us as Frederick the Great. You will find that his tactics bear strong resemblance to those which have been used in the present war. Then ask yourself the question, what was the cause of this war?

FLEB.

Where Might Makes Right.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

As there is so much talk about the segregation law being unconstitutional, I would like to ask the Post-Dispatch this question: How is it that there are towns in the State of Illinois, within 100 miles of St. Louis, which I would consider very much segregated for the reason that a negro is not allowed to set foot or inhabit their towns. Are the people of these towns under any state or constitutional law that says they are breaking said law by keeping the negro out?

J. D. WHITE.

The Prejudice Against Brandeis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Allow me as a Southern man to suggest to your correspondent in your issue of 21st inst., that he seems quite as illiberal as those he arraigns. He tells of the first instance of a Jew being named to the high office of Justice of the Supreme Court, and then inveighs against the South, but he wholly omits to state that a Northern man as President has made this appointment. He rightly condemns the protest of the "Northern Gentiles," but he omits to say that they are no more likely to represent Southern opinion than our Southern President does. Will he now say that they do, when he does not even know who they are, and he does know who the President is? And will he say that the Tom Watson infuriated Gentiles of the South better represent the South than Mr. Wilson does?

The truth is, as your correspondent ought to know, that many ignorant people in this country, regardless of the latitude in which they live, are prejudiced against Jews as they are prejudiced against Catholics. Their type may not be better illustrated than by the career of Tom Watson, both a Catholic and a Jew baiter.

SOUTHERNER.

CONGRESS FOMENTS TROUBLE.

The atmosphere of Washington is calmer. Excitement in Congress over the submarine issue has abated. For the present, at least, the foreign affairs of the United States will not be taken out of the hands of the President.

The report that a strong majority of Congressmen oppose congressional interference in this diplomatic crisis indicates that saner judgment has overcome hysterics and demagogery. Even the wild asses of Congress see that the resources of diplomacy are not yet exhausted. The question of the validity of former German pledges and the question of the kind of arms that may be classed as defensive or offensive have yet to be settled.

The net result of the outbreak is an amazing exhibition of congressional folly and demagogery and increased danger of trouble with Germany. The President is embarrassed and the force of his contention weakened by the evidence that a large percentage of Congressmen favor yielding the vital point for which he has contended.

When Senator Stone, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, weakly pleads for surrender of American rights on the sea for fear of trouble; when Chairman Flood of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Speaker Clark warn the President that the House will oppose him on account of fear that we might have to defend American rights by force, it is no wonder that Germany banks on support of Congress against the President for her policy of conducting submarine warfare regardless of neutral rights, law and humanity.

If Germany is misled into disregard of the President's stand and into acting on the belief that Americans are too timid and sordid to defend their rights and protect American lives, it will be due to the demagogic folly of Congress. Americans are peaceful, patient and forbearing. They are inclined to be exceedingly generous to Germany and exceedingly anxious to avoid being involved in the European conflict. But Americans are quickly aroused by actual wrong; their resentment, when aroused by injury or by inhumanity, is fierce and uncompromising.

Certainly there was no foundation for the alleged congressional fear that the President might unnecessarily drag this country into war. He has kept peace under the most trying difficulties and a storm of criticism. We believe he will maintain it if possible. We hope Germany will not be misled by congressional politics and hysterics.

Back of Congress is the American people. A great majority of them approve the President's course and will support him in refusing to abandon or abridge American rights.

SENTIMENT IN ALSACE-LORRAINE.

It is reported that Alsace-Lorraine desires Germany to win and that the provincial legislative bodies have made a formal expression on the subject. The authenticity of the expression need not be impeached. Doubtless it is not easy for residents of Alsace-Lorraine entertaining different sentiments to become members of the legislative bodies.

Doubtless, also, it would not be particularly healthful just now for any resident, legislator or unofficial person, to wish for anybody else to win.

LESSON IN CONSERVATION.

Peru, once so rich that the wealth of its Incas and people had a place among the proverbs of modern languages, has become so poor that she cannot even afford a diplomatic service. The personnel of the service was gradually reduced until the country had but two representatives at foreign capitals, and one of these, the Minister to Washington, is now to be withdrawn.

There seems to be a lesson in this on the conservation of natural resources. It is true that those who stripped Peru of its wealth were foreigners, which may be a lesson on preparedness also. But what they did has a bearing on conservation because it shows what may happen when a rich territory is despoiled of its heritage in indigenous riches. Bad as Pizarro's conquistadors were, however, they did not ship the Andean water power of the Peruvians back to Spain for their own use and profit, though probably they would have liked to do so if they could.

We have native conquistadors with fewer limitations. From the water power of the people they are gobbling wealth greater than the Incas ever dreamed of and they lay a hand of truly conquistador touch on mines of metals, oils and valuable minerals.

MAN'S RIGHT OVER HIS BODY.

Has an army (or any other) surgeon the right to perform an important operation, by order of a superior officer or on his own volition, without the consent of the one to be operated upon?

Thousands of cases of complaints were crowding the desk and files of the Reichsmilitaergericht of Berlin.

Cases of amputations of arm or leg especially seem to have been preponderant. Many of the wounded preferred to take their chances, rather than be absolutely crippled for life.

But the surgeons usually obeyed the soldier's immediate superior, and performed the operation against the will of the subject.

The various cases finally were crystallized into a test case, which was argued by the best available talent, with the result that the Court rendered the following decision, which is final and will have its definite bearing on the future conduct of the war, as far as surgical aid is concerned:

An unconscious patient is in the hands of his surgeon—not his officer—he has fallen out of rank. That surgeon must use his judgment as to the need of an immediate operation; or a probable rehabilitation of the patient to consciousness, if that is at all likely. A conscious patient must not be operated upon except by his own request. No man has the right, even for a good purpose, to infringe upon the body rights of the individual. An officer presumes when he orders an operation; and no surgeon can be held to obey such an order; is in fact compelled by natural law to disobey it. Life is not the property of anyone except its possessor; nor is the body.

This clear definition of the right of the individual over his own life and person is creditable to German law. We in America need the establishment of this right.

THE REPUBLIC CONDEMNS SEGREGATION.

Having up to date printed 19 "Segregation Talks," the whole tenor of which was to aid the passage of the segregation bill, our esteemed contemporary, The Republic, is doubtless too modest to print its editorial opinion on segregation, as this might to some extent undo the work of its "Talks." We, therefore, take pleasure in setting this opinion before its readers, so that they may be fully informed on the subject. Here is The Republic's best editorial on segregation:

> St. Louis is being importuned to adopt a segregation law, under which the city is to be partitioned between the whites and the blacks, so that no member of either race will be permitted to move into any part of the city assigned to the other
> All such plans are carefully dressed in an appearance of fairness, but no man who thinks his way through the matter can avoid the conclusion that race segregation means a negro "ghetto," with all the revolting conditions now associated with that word. The negro is the poorer, the less numerous, and the weaker race. As the city grows the stronger race will make room for itself as room is needed, and none but the worst places will be left for the weaker. In those places negro population will congest, negroes will degenerate, and crime will flourish. Disease and pauperism will come in their turn, and disease is no respecter of color. It will not observe the segregation law, nor can its ravages be blotted out of the city's vital statistics.
> The conduct of this community toward its negro members now commands the respect of the whole country. The negro in St. Louis has a fair chance under the law to show what he can do for himself, and it is possible to show by statistics of crime, pauperism, the school records and otherwise that, all things considered, he is doing very well indeed. As a member of the community he fills his useful place, and no man who views the question in a large way can say that there is any friction or antagonism between the races.
> Segregation means that all of this will change for the worse, and St. Louis, now proud of its record, will be put upon the defensive. Finding excuses for a rising death rate among negroes and a degenerating negro community will not be pleasant business.
> It is never pleasant to seek excuses for doing wrong.

The editorial quoted appeared in The Republic of April 26, 1915, before the segregation issue became acute. Its reasoning is timely today. The writer of the article knew the truth and expressed it well.

WHAT OF IT?

It is doubtless true that ammunition makers are in favor of a policy of preparedness on the part of the United States, but what of it? Do arguments in behalf of good roads become entirely worthless if they are uttered by men who sell shovels or manufacture road scrapers? The only thing to guard against is the control of road-making to shell-making by the makers of shells and roads.

POSTHUMOUS REWARDS OF AUTHORSHIP.

Stevenson received but $100 for his "Virginibus Puerisque," though a letter he wrote about that charming work brought $250 at a sale in New York City last week. For "Treasure Island" he received only $500, but at this same sale a letter in which he mentions "Treasure Island" sold for $225.

Stevenson was by no means a struggling author, tortured by poverty and lack of recognition. His family was well-to-do. Success came speedily. There were years during the latter part of his life when he was considered to have the largest audience of any English writer of the times. He had much renown and large financial rewards.

But the fact that he received a total of only $600 for two of his most widely read and most admired works shows that the path of authorship is not much less difficult than it was two or three generations ago. Probably for works that have ceased to exist so far as the public mind is concerned, inferior authors received at the time tenfold, perhaps a hundredfold, more than he received for these two. What would have been the effect on Stevenson's literary career had he been less independent of the rewards of his literary labors?

Perhaps there are now prospective Stevensons whose letters will never command a high posthumous price, because their work at present has an appraisal relatively so low as to furnish no incentive for continuing. It is a consoling thought, however, that a survey of contemporary writers does not disclose very many who betray any ambition to be Stevensons.

A TEST OF INTELLIGENCE.

Justice Mullen in New York applied a novel literacy test of citizenship when he read the President's letter to Senator Stone to 30 applicants for final papers in his court. But was the fact that 14 of the number could not understand it sufficient ground for rejecting them?

Apparently the proportion of these newcomers who "could not tell what the letter was about" was no greater than the proportion of Congressmen who are equally dense, if we are to credit some of their expressions

THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES.

WHEN the ocean liner's lookout
Sees the dread torpedo's trail,
And the women and the children,
Panic-stricken, line the rail,
When they face man-made destruction
Will their prayers to God avail?
Yet, the poets say the female
Is more deadly than the male.

Does woman favor bloodshed
Caused by bayonet and gun?
Did she instigate this slaughter,
Just to sacrifice a son?
Does she sanction the reprisal
By the airship's deathly hail?
Yet the female of the species
Is more deadly than the male.

True, they sometimes smash a window
In a shop along the Strand,
And are straightway put in handcuffs—
That's the justice of the land;
But the men that shattered Belgium—
Will they all be sent to jail?
Is the female of the species
More destructive than the male?

When the wounded from the trenches,
After hours of bloody strife,
Smell the nauseating stenches
And await the surgeon's knife,
There's a woman there to soothe them,
When the thoughts of death assail.
Is the female of the species
Then more deadly than the male?

So its General this, and Major that,
By whom war's work is done;
A man to guide the aeroplane,
A man behind the gun;
But the woman's lot is sorrow
And to hush the infant's wail.
Yes, the female of the species
Is more human than the male.

AS TO "UNCLE SAM."

MEYER.—There is no record of the phrase Uncle Sam being used prior to 1812, but the expression Uncle Sam's men occurred in the Lansingburg Gazette of September, 1813, and in the True American on Oct. 7, 1813. The American Daily Advertiser of Aug. 15, 1816, attributed the origin of "Uncle Sam" to the letters U. S. L. D. Just a year later the Albany Gazette said it arose during the war from the letters U. S. on the soldiers' knapsacks and "has come into general use." This was in 1817. The Albany paper added: "The Indians at the West, from hearing the term Uncle Sam often used, have imbibed the idea that it is actually the name of the President and while at Sackett's Harbor a considerable number of Indians and squaws crowded around the President, wishing, as they expressed it, to shake hands with Uncle Sam." This story seems more probable than the other, for it is easier to trace Uncle Sam directly to the letters U. S. on soldiers' caps and knapsacks than to trace it through Uncle Sam Wilson, as soldiers are much given to nicknames. The letters were used from an early date to mark military equipment, and it was only a step from U. S. to Uncle Sam. Careful investigation leads to the conclusion that the modern and current cartoon picture of Uncle Sam originated in England as a caricature of Brother Jonathan, and was adopted and transplanted as Uncle Sam by Thomas Nast, the special artist of Harper's Weekly during the Civil War. ("John Bull," the typical Englishman—a bluff, corpulent bullheaded, irascible man, with leather breeches, top boots and carrying a stout stick—was derived from a satire by Dr. Arbuthnot, 1712. In this satire the Frenchman is termed Lewis Baboon, the Dutchman Nicholas Frog, etc.)

HEALTH HINTS.

X.—Chronic diarrhea: Diet should be nutritious, but restricted to most digestible food. Mutton, pigeon, chicken, game and whitefish are generally suitable. Avoid beef, pork, veal and all tough portions of meat. Old rice, well cooked, with milk, taken directly it is prepared, is nourishing. If milk agrees, drink plenty of it. Milk and lime water is good in these cases. Take mucilaginous drinks, such as barley water, gum water and linseed tea, instead of clear water. Rice water also valuable. Get best Carolina rice. Wash it in cold water, then boil in good measure of water 10 minutes. Strain water off and add more, and so on until nutriment is boiled out. It is ready to drink when cold. Cream may be added, and pinch of salt if desired. Usually zwieback or pulled bread, in small quantities, is harmless and grateful. Avoid green vegetables, raw acid fruits, dried fruits, nuts, shell fish, pork, veal, foods prepared with rich gravies or very sweet sauces, coarse breads, pastries and desserts in general. Injection for chronic diarrhea: New milk, with thick mucilage of slippery elm, of each 1 pint; sweet oil, 1 gill; molasses, half pint; salt, 1 ounce; laudanum, 1 dram. Mix and inject what the bowels will retain.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

SUNDAY READER.—"The dandiest lemon pie." Take one thick slice of bread, pour over one cup cold water, let stand 20 minutes. Beat smooth, add one cup sugar, the rind and juice of one lemon, yolks of two eggs and two tablespoons melted butter. Mix well and bake in one crust. When done cover with meringue made of white of the two eggs. Brown in the oven.——Woodrow Wilson's mother's book says: Moisten a tablespoon of corn starch with a little cold water and pour on boiling water sufficient to thicken it; while hot, put into this a cup of sugar, so as to melt it; add the beaten yolks of two eggs and the grated rind with the juice of a lemon. This will make one large pie. Bake with a bottom crust. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth and add two tablespoons of sugar. When the pie is done spread the frosting over it and return it to the oven.

J. M.—Corn pone was made by the colored people of the South in a crude manner. They mixed the hand-ground cornmeal with salt and water to a soft dough, molding these cakes in their hands, which show the finger marks as they pressed them into shape. They were often baked on a hoe, made hot by being held in the coals of a temporary fire that they would build. This cake was also called hoe cake. We are not as successful in making the corn pone and the hoe cake with the cornmeal of today as of former times, because it is not milled as it was then; neither is the corn the same variety as that from which the Southern cornmeal was formerly made. To one part of white cornmeal (Southern milled) add one and one-half teaspoonfuls salt, one teaspoonful melted lard, and sufficient scalded milk and boiling water (equal parts) to make a mixture that can be molded with the hands into oblong cakes six inches long, three inches wide and one inch thick: they should be thin on the edges and ends. Before molding them the mixture should be worked well with the hands, then shape the cakes, place them on a hot, well-greased tin sheet, brush over with melted butter or milk and bake 25 minutes in a hot oven. When done, split each one, butter and lay a thin slice or two of crisp bacon on each. Serve immediately.

SOCIALIST.—It may be said that the "Wealth of Nations" certainly operated powerfully through the harmony of its critical side with the tendencies of the half-century which followed its publication to the assertion of personal freedom and "natural rights." It discredited the economic policy of the past and promoted the overthrow of institutions which had come down from earlier times, but were unsuited to modern society. As a theoretic treatment of social economy, and therefore as a guide to social reconstruction and practice in the future, it is provisional, not definitive. But when the study of its subject comes to be systematized on the basis of a general social philosophy more complete and durable than Smith's no contributions to that final construction will be found so valuable as his.—Ency. Britannica.

CONSTANT.—For their invitations the girls obtained souvenir cards on which were vivid green pipes, hats and other objects peculiar to the traditions of St. Patrick's day. On the cards were these verses:

St. Patrick lived many long year ago,
His service for Ireland you very well know.
The snakes were all banished, but, alas! we folk find
That we have no St. Patrick for work of that kind.
Our house is just filled, there's a hundred and more;
They hang from the walls, and they lie on the floor.
So on March seventeenth we beg and entreat,
That you come and catch snakes at Thirty North Street.
Come to luncheon at one, and later we'll work;
A prize to the one who shall faint not, nor shirk.

The luncheon was chicken served on toast from chafing dishes, by the two larger girls, at each end of the table. Saratoga potatoes, olives, ice cream, nuts and homemade cake completed the menu. The table centerpiece was a handsome silver tray on the center of which stood a pot of shamrock in a green jardiniere. Surrounding this was a bed of cut smilax, on which rested Irish potatoes of uniform size, one for each guest. These had been hollowed out and wrapped in oiled paper, and in each was a favor, a shamrock pin of green enamel. Green ribbon, an inch wide, long enough to reach to the plate of a guest, went from each potato, where it was fastened by being put over the end of a white clay pipe-stem, from which a shamrock leaf protruded. As place cards, green pasteboard frogs were used, instead of any of the too realistic snakes that are on sale.

The Armed Merchant Ship Controversy

WILSON FOR COUNTRY'S HONOR.

New York Times: No nobler deliverance by tongue or pen has come from the President, none more faithfully expressing the thought and will of the people of the United States, than his letter to Senator Stone. It is an utterance of encouragement and reassurance. It makes us certain that the honor of the country is to be resolutely upheld; it gives reason for confidence that peace will be maintained. We shall remain at peace, our relations of friendship with all foreign countries will continue. President Wilson can compass this end. But honor is uppermost in heart and thought of every true American. We do not covet peace at the cost of honor, or right and of our place in and respect of nations. It's a deep note and a grave one the President sounds, but it rings true. It will be of priceless service as a uniting adjuration to the people, and it will put faith and confidence into the hearts of those who have doubted or feared.

SUPPORT THE PRESIDENT.

New York Herald: President von Bernstorff! How does it sound? There is not much poetic fancy in it, but there is a world of truth.

A German Ambassador in 1900 endeavored to control the votes of Americans of German descent for William J. Bryan because he advocated the "scuttle" policy in the Philippines. A German Ambassador in 1916, having within a month suggested that the Senate might intervene and take the management of foreign affairs out of the hands of the President, is now attempting to make his words good. It is the crowning act of audacity and insolence of this eel-like diplomatist. Officially particeps criminis in the murder of American men, women and children and pledged to keep this country from interfering with Germany's submarine warfare and at the same time to prevent a break of diplomatic relations—driven into a corner, he is now trying to carry out his program announced on Feb. 4.

The time has come to support the President in a contest in the Senate which has no parallel in American history. There has been nothing approaching it in arrogant effrontery since that time when Dupuy de Lome made pretensions to be greater in the United States Senate than William McKinley.

But Dupuy de Lome's hands were not stained with American blood.

WILSON TO BLAME.

New York Press: President Wilson himself is responsible for the bitter spirit of members of Congress that represent, or by some distortion of moral sense imagine they represent, hyphenated constituencies instead of American people. Mr. Wilson and his State Department floundered and blundered so bewilderingly with this question of armed merchantmen that they led the German Ambassador to understand, they led the Berlin Foreign Office to understand, they led the allies to understand, they led their own newspaper organs and personal spokesmen to understand that they were going into this very business of indorsing the new doctrine that a submarine should torpedo armed merchantmen without warning.

This was one of the worst mistakes ever made in the history of our State Department. It was a mistake which compromised Mr. Wilson's foreign policy as scarcely anything else could have compromised it.

President Wilson, seeing how his meditated course had aroused the American nation, could flop back again and did flop back again; but Senators and Representatives of his party, who, because of what they expected the President to do in behalf of the Berlin doctrine, had made, or as good as made, commitments with hyphenated constituents, couldn't get out of their predicament either with the agility or with the immunity of the President. They are enraged with him for the trap into which he put them and they are in despair for themselves.

HOLD GERMANY TO HER PLEDGE.

New York World: "Does the Congress of the United States purpose to cancel the solemn pledge that Germany has made to the Government of the United States and relieve Germany of all obligation to keep faith with this country?

That is the only question involved in the so-called "revolt" of certain members of Congress against the President's foreign policy.

After the sinking of the Arabic the German Ambassador, acting under instructions from the German Foreign Office, gave the following pledge to the State Department:

"Liners will not be sunk by our submarines without warning and without safety of the lives of the passengers, provided the liners do not try to escape or offer resistance."

This pledge was not restricted to unarmed liners. It applied to all liners that did not try to escape or offer resistance.

In its new submarine order the German Government has attempted to tear up this promise. It threatens to treat all armed merchantmen as warships, whether they offer resistance or not, meaning that they will be sunk without warning and without provision for the safety of passengers. Naturally enough, the President has refused to acquiesce in Germany's action.

"Congressional protests against the President's firmness in this matter must be a comfort and a consolation to Berlin. It is no small triumph for German diplomacy to have arrayed an element in Congress on the side of the German Government and against the American Government on the issue of whether Germany's pledges to this country should be kept. The attitude of these members of Congress might well justify the German Foreign Office in repudiating its promises and in defying the President, but the seeming advantage that Berlin has won in Congress is an advantage that easily may be pushed too far. If the issue ever comes to a vote, the President will be sustained. If it does not come to a vote, he will be sustained anyway.

Germany has invaded Congress, but Congress is not yet another Belgium.

DUTY OF REPUBLICANS.

New York Tribune: Not since Abraham Lincoln was chosen to sit in the White House has there been a graver crisis than that of the moment. The crisis in our relations with Germany is nothing. The question of war or peace abroad is of comparative insignificance. The real crisis is domestic, the real peril is at home. The party which, at the moment controls a majority in the United States Senate and House of Representatives, for the sake of the political profit it expects to bring home, has deliberately betrayed American interests and is seeking to surrender American rights to Germany. This thing has been done openly and shamelessly, without the smallest semblance of regard for decency or the outward color of honor. The Democratic party leaders need the votes. They believe that the German-American agents can deliver the votes. This being true, they are prepared to deliver the American rights which the German agents demand; they are willing to sacrifice American lives, honor, everything, if only they can be assured of the votes.

It is now the simple duty of every Republican legislator to face this peril and this danger with courage, with firmness, with patriotism. The Democrats have sold out to the Germans; will the Republicans sell out?

TAKES VON JAGOW'S VIEW.

New York American: The question at issue is important to the safety of the United States, not alone in this war, but in all the future. Rules of war at sea were formulated in the treaty of Paris in 1856. The facts upon which the law was based have changed. The submarine has since arrived. It is an American invention. Our national safety requires that we shall not now commit ourselves to the rule that a merchant ship, armed with rapid-fire rifled cannon, capable of sinking any submarine and manned by trained gun crews, shall be regarded only as a peaceful merchantman.

CONDITION MIGHT BE WORSE.

New York Sun: "It is useless to speculate at length on what might have been the situation had Congress possessed authority to call Secretary Lansing before it and confer with him. The eruption in Congress will certainly be interpreted abroad in the manner most comfortable to each commentator. But it must be recognized that the management of our controversies with foreign Powers, however badly they may be managed by one man and his few advisers, would be worse managed if submitted to the vagaries of 533 Senators and Representatives.

CONGRESSIONAL HYSTERIA.

St. Louis Globe Democrat: "The just rights of the citizens of any nation cannot be maintained by their surrender," said Senator Lodge the other day in an address to the Senate on armed merchant ships. Either Americans have a right to passage on any merchant vessey, armed or unarmed, belligerent or neutral, or they have not that right. This Government has maintained the right for a century or more and it is supported in its maintenance by the uniform rulings of international law. The insistence upon the recognition of this principle is the basis of all our diplomatic controversies with Germany, and that country has recognized it in effect. To warn Americans to keep off of armed merchantmen is to serve notice to the world that we are unable or unwilling to take care of our own, and that we are receding from a position involving not merely our own rights, but the rights of neutral citizens throughout the earth, because we are afraid of the risk incurred by standing firm for the principle of a free sea.

But, after all, is there any adequate reason for the hysteria of Congress in this matter? None of the British merchant ships sailing between this country and England are armed, and the French merchant ships are not armed at all, so that the danger, if Germany actually puts its sinking order into effect, will be limited to British ships plying between ports wholly outside of the United States, and therefore not likely to carry American passengers. Moreover, although Germany has been exceedingly dilatory in coming to a definite agreement in relation to submarine warfare, it has at no time shown a hostile disposition toward the United States, and the President is probably justified when he expressed the belief that "explanations will presently ensue which will put a different aspect upon" the notification as to sinking armed merchant ships without notice. It is to be remembered, too, that submarine warfare against merchantmen has not been at all active for some months, and there is much reason to think that the purpose of the notice is mainly psychological. If the Democratic leaders in Congress will remain calmly in their seats we have no doubt that the situation will be cleared without loss of American lives or American honor.

Appointment of Francis

THIRD ST. LOUIS AMBASSADOR.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: In accepting appointment as American Ambassador to Russia, David R. Francis assumes a high honor that is not without great responsibility. The post is one of the most distinguished abroad and there are special conditions which add to its present importance. All the American Ambassadors to belligerent countries are discharging the most delicate duties for their own country and also acting for Ambassadors who were sent home at the outbreak of the war. Our relations with Russia, up until the abrogation of the treaty of 1832 during President Taft's administration, because of Jewish discrimination against American citizens of the Jewish race, had always been exceptionally pleasant. The court at St. Petersburg was exceedingly friendly to the United States during the Civil War, when European friends were few. Resumption of these cordial relations will depend to a great degree on the skill and disposition of the American Ambassador.

There are some very complicated commercial relations which need attention. In case of a speedy end of the war, a new treaty with Russia will be a certainty. Mr. Francis takes to the post a wide and varied experience. He has been Mayor of St. Louis, Governor of Missouri, Secretary of the Interior and president of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. He is a man of affairs, with long and successful experience in business. While at the head of the World's Fair, he formed international acquaintances which should be of great advantage to him in discharging his new duties. While not technically trained in diplomacy, Mr. Francis has cultivated the essentials of the profession in his business and official career and will bring to the post an unusual equipment. He is the third St. Louisan to be appointed an Ambassador and the city and State naturally appreciate the distinction.

EXPERIENCED AND ABLE.

New York Times: Mr. David R. Francis is admirably fitted to be Ambassador to Russia. He is worthy of a great post in the public service. He has had long experience in public affairs, and with public men. Governor of Missouri, Secretary of the Interior, head of the St. Louis exposition, he has shown energy, competence, tact in political and civic undertakings. A trusted counselor of Grover Cleveland, a man of cultivation and leisure, a man of judgment and discretion who knows how to hold his tongue, a man of the world, urbane, traveled, capable, he has both force of character and personal charm.

AN ELEMENT OF DOUBT.

New York Sun: The names of so many candidates have appeared upon the President's slate for Secretary of War, only to be erased, that the Hon. David R. Francis must have misgivings about his appointment as Ambassador to Russia.

Significance of Erzerum's Fall

CHEERING NEWS FOR ARMENIA.

Chicago Herald: The Russian capture of Erzerum is the most cheering news that has come to London, Paris and Petrograd in many months. If the Russians are able to press on even a little the pressure upon the British force in Mesopotamia will be relieved and the German project of an attack through Syria upon Egypt must be indefinitely postponed.

From humanitarian viewpoints a Russian occupation of Armenia is welcome, regardless of opinions as to which side ought to win the war in Europe. It assures the rescue of the Armenian survivors of the Turkish savagery which has well-nigh destroyed a Christian people.

VICTORY CAN BE PUSHED.

New York Evening Post: In considering the chances of Russia vigorously following up the victory at Erzerum, the question of railways is important. A swift rallying of the Turkish forces through the rushing up of reinforcements is impossible in a country devoid of railroads. Such reinforcements coming from Constantinople must leave the railway at Angora and march 450 miles across country to Diarbekr, if that should turn out to be the Russian objective. From the Russian rail-head at Sary Kamysh in the Caucasus to Diarbekr is about 150 miles. As against the Turks the Russians have therefore an enormous advantage in communications, a factor which the Austro-Germans have used repeatedly with striking results. In other words, while Russian successes on their European front have regularly failed to be driven home because of railroad inferiority, in Asia Minor there is every reason to believe that victory can be steadily pushed.

RUSSIA PREFERABLE TO TURKEY.

Philadelphia Record: If Armenia is conquered by Russia it must be the wish of all good Christians that the latter nation shall retain this distracted and devastated region when peace shall be declared. Russian rule is by no means perfect, but it is heaven itself compared with the methods of the unspeakable Turk. There are great possibilities for Armenia under a stable administration. So there will be for Mesopotamia, if it passes under British control, as now seems quite likely. In the interest of cizilization Turkey in Asia ought to be dismembered, just as that portion of Europe has been. It is within the realm of possibilities that the fall of Erzerum is an important step in this direction.

MAY CUT BAGDAD RAILROAD.

New York Sun: The strategy of the Grand Duke Nicholas presents no difficult problem. It may be assumed that he will endeavor to take Trebizond with as little delay as possible. Its possession is necessary to the security of Erzerum. Whatever Russia's intentions with regard to Constantinople may be, to push an army south from Erzerum by way of Diarbekr to Nisibin on the route of the Bagdad railroad, seems imperative. The distance from Erzerum is about 200 miles, as the crow flies. Success in the operation would put an end to the Turkish campaign in Mesopotamia and the Bagdad corps engaged with the British at Kut-el-Amara would be cut off if it did not fall back in time.

It should be remembered, however, that Aleppo is only 200 miles southwest of Nisibin, and Aleppo is the headquarters for the Turko-German preparations to invade Egypt. At that point there is a large concentration of troops, and heavy reinforcements would naturally be hurried east to strike the Russians at Nisibin. The fall of Erzerum will halt the Egyptian enterprise probably, but there should be a tremendous fight for the Bagdad railroad route.

A PRIZE WORTH KEEPING.

Pittsburg Press: That the allies will stop at no sacrifice to retain their prize hardly needs to be said. It must have cost a huge effort to win it, for the city is defended by a line of the most modern forts constructed and equipped under German direction. There has never from the first been any mistaking its value to whoever held it. It commands both the Tigris and the Euphrates valleys, and its capture is the natural prelude to an advance on Bagdad and the delivery of a staggering blow at the Turkish power. It is this aspect of the matter, evidently, that most interests the military experts. Some of them agree that the capture of 100,000 prisoners and 1000 guns of the most modern artillery is no mean advantage. But after all this is not what will make the joint strategy board of the entente allies rejoice. Their satisfaction hinges, rather, on the fact that Russia now has access to the Black Sea in Turkish Asia, and the whole morale of the entente cause has been strengthened in consequence of what appears by all accounts thus far to be a disabling defeat for Turkey and the most important event of months.

THE POLITICAL EFFECT.

Philadelphia Press: Politically, the capture of Erzerum has fallen like a bombshell in the camp of the Teutonic alliance. Reports from Constantinople indicate conditions of great unrest. Rumania, inspired by the Russian victory, is said to be making final preparations for intervention. To meet this contingency Austria is understood to have withdrawn troops from the Balkan region and massed them along the Rumanian frontier. Turkey, on the other hand, has withdrawn her forces from Bulgaria and Servia to meet the new menace of Grand Duke Nicholas, and has left Bulgaria apprehensive under the threat of a joint invasion by the Anglo-French from Saloniki and Rumania from the north. The allies, on their part, are believed to be bringing the reorganized Servian, Montenegrin and Albanian troops around by sea to Sakoniki for use in the contemplated offensive on that front.

THREATENS CONSTANTINOPLE.

Detroit Free Press: For several days now part of the consequences of continuing and complete success by the Russians has been apparent. The relief of Amara, the cutting off of the Teutonic troops in Southern Mesopotamia, the saving of Egypt from danger of attack, and a march northwestward through Asia Minor have unfolded themselves naturally to the imagination.

Yet it is only the announcement of advance by sea toward Trebizond and the systematic bombarding of the Ottoman coasts that have revealed the full magnitude of the Russian plans. The approach on Constantinople, obviously the real objective of the campaign, is not to be by land alone, but by sea and land, with a complete sweep of the intervening territory and waters that will leave no enemy in the rear and will minimize the problem of obtaining supplies and reinforcements. At the crisis, imagination sees the City of the Golden Horn lying under the command of siege guns mounted along the Asiatic banks of the Bosphorus and perhaps threatened in the rear by co-operating French and British forces from Saloniki.

"FAMILIAR PATHS THROUGH OLD FORESTS"

Light Talk Nowadays Is Intermingled With Charity, National Defense, Preparedness, and Sewing for the War Wounded—It Is the Fashion to Belong to Ambulance Commissions, to Be Studying Nursing or Contemplating Red Cross Work—Women Are Talking Politics, Policies.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

SO mixed up is SOCIETY with charity, national defense, preparedness and sewing for the war wounded that it is difficult to tell where one begins and the other ends. Scarcely anything of importance is given now except in the name of some charity, either at home or abroad. To be in the fashion a woman must now belong to the Ambulance Commission, be taking a course in nursing, belong to the Red Cross Commission, be a member of the "Women's Section of the Movement for Preparedness" or something of the kind.

Even the various chapters of the patriotic societies are having themselves addressed on the subject of preparedness. Between times most everyone, belles and matrons, meet two or three days in the week to make surgical dressings, and perhaps two days more wherein they sew for women and children of almost all nations, even their own.

Almost every home charity organization is giving or planning some kind of entertainment for their own benefit and each affair is so attractive that no one can resist it.

Added to the sewing, first-aid training and numerous occupations, are the rehearsals for the aforesaid entertainments, so that the average woman has her day so filled that there is hardly time for sleep.

BESIDES, there are the Monday night theater dances and little dinners all during the week, that have nothing to do with charity, to fill in the times between.

Everywhere women are talking politics, policies and preparedness. Everyone seems to be interested in everything going on in the world.

Some talk "nationally," some "provincially," but all talk big talk. Over the telephone, in letters, everywhere, national topics are under discussion. Women who have not cared much for such things before, want to know all about everything and all at once.

Others have gone along quietly keeping up with the times. It is surprising the amount of information they have absorbed. It is all very interesting.

If all the affairs for charity were put on the weekly calendar, and all the meetings of the commissions, which are quite smart affairs, were put there, too, it would be a curious synopsis.

Call up anyone you know, and before the conversation is well under way you find yourself talking about some of the acute topics of the moment.

If the society editor could put down all the conversations, arguments and discussions she gets into over the telephone now, when she merely wants to know about some party or other, it would make curious reading, indeed.

MISS VERA TEICHMANN'S wedding to William H. Nolker Wednesday evening was such an elaborate affair and the bride so pretty that everyone who was there is still talking about it and the wonderful diamond circle the bridegroom gave her, a circle of perfect stones that cost away up in four figures.

The bride is almost an Italian type, and thought to look like the painting of Beatrice Cenci in prison. She made her debut last winter as one of the special maids of honor to the Queen at the Veiled Prophet's ball and has been very Morris M. White.

The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto L. Teichmann, at 3401 Longfellow boulevard. The house was entirely stripped of furniture, the floors covered with white tarpaulins, and every room, up to the third story, hung with smilax with great bunches of yellow jonquils everywhere.

The presents which filled two rooms are said to have been among the handsomest received by any bride in years. There were more than 200 of them and included everything from antique furniture to silver, crystal, lamps, china, books and pictures. There were two complete chests of silver, one from Miss Laura Nolker, another from the Teichmanns.

The east porch was enclosed in canvas and steps led down into a room added for the occasion, lined with cactus and vines and more jonquils and box trees. The table for the bridal party was laid there.

The bride's gown was white satin covered with tulle, one skirt over another. Her train was of tulle weighted with silver and orange blossoms. The bodice was cut into a square in front and outlined with pearls and silver. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley, with a shower of tulle knotted with lilies that reached almost to the edge of her skirt.

Mrs. Theodore F. Meyer Jr., the bride's only sister, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of yellow taffeta made with full skirts. There was a girdle of porcelain blue cloth and silver, and the bodice was of the same lace and a bit of silver. She carried a bouquet of violets and yellow roses.

Little Virginia Becker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pihlip A. Becker, was flower girl and wore a Greenaway costume of white tulle. Her flowers also were violets and yellow roses.

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by the Rev. R. Calvin Dobson of the Church of the Unity, during which the bridal party stood under a canopy of greenery studded with yellow roses. At each side were huge gilt vases filled with yellow roses. A large reception followed.

Mr. Nolker is the son of the late William H. Nolker. He is a member of the Racquet, St. Louis, Noonday and Bellerive clubs.

He has taken his bride to Honolulu. Upon their return they will take a house on Berlin avenue.

Mrs. Vernon Castle is a critical and discriminating judge of good cleaning. During her engagement in St. Louis she patronized Schuck's and wrote them that their work was excellent, and she had never received better satisfaction anywhere.—ADV.

THE Oriental bal masque of the Friday Dancing Club will be held Friday evening at the Kirkwood Country Club. The guests have been invited to appear as the various characters of the Thousand and One Night's Tales. This being the final ball of the club's forty-fourth season, the Executive Committee has planned to make the evening memorable.

Two orchestras have been engaged to play Oriental as well as modern dance music. The clubhouse will be decorated after the fashion of Maxfield Parrish's conception of the Caliph's Gardens at Bagdad.

As soon as the guests have unmasked they will be greeted by the club's hostesses, who include virtually all the representative matrons of suburban society.

The Executive Committee in charge of arrangements includes Messrs. William G. Lackey, John K. Broderick, John C. Wilkinson, William S. Bryan, Percy R. Blackmer, Letcher C. Compton, Theodore B. Entz, Arthur L. La Vigne, Norman H. MacMillan, Laurence G. Miller, Stratford Lee Morton, Myron D. Obernier, Walter R. Skinner and Morris W. White.

THE girls and men of the fashionable set have been as busy as bees this last week rehearsing for the play, "Love in a Toyshop," to be given at the Victoria Theater Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Junior League. Drawing rooms have been denuded of rugs and furniture to make room for the dance groups to practice, and motors have sped hither and yon, collecting persons, carrying messages and costumes.

The Lennox Club, the Buckingham, and everybody's house, have been the scenes of the various rehearsals. Sometimes there were as many as four going on at the same time. Everybody connected with the event has been on the rush, because there were only 10 days, all told, to get the production ready for the first performance.

The St. Louis performance is the premiere of the piece. Nobody knew that at first. And when it was announced, stage fright became a veritable epidemic among the 100-odd actors and dancers. But the cast is virtually the same as that in "Campus Mouser," given two years ago, and there isn't much chance that the play will be anything but a huge success.

Miss Edith Whittemore and Virgil Lewis have the principal parts, with Will LeBeaume, Huntington Smith, Mrs. Huntington Smith and Miss Anna Benoist in the comedy parts.

William Crowell is cast for the "heavy" and everybody who can dance, and that means everybody in the cast, will be in the specialty dances and songs.

Miss Ann Talbot Day will do a whistling specialty and Mrs. Lewis Rumsey, as leader of "The Flirts," will sing "Here Comes Tootsie."

Audiences at all the performances are expected to be large and the members of the Junior League hope to realize a good sum for their charity work.

Box holders for the first evening are Percy Orthwein, Mrs. H. G. Pettingill, Mrs. W. K. Bixby and Walter McKittrick.

Scott's Dyeing and Cleaning Co.'s methods of cleaning white coats insures them against becoming gray and dingy looking. Scott's are also cleaning lace curtains now. O! such wonderful work.

Miss Laura M. Johnson of 3018A Henrietta street entertained Tuesday evening with a Washington's birthday party. The table decorations and favors were in red, white and blue.

The guests were: Messrs. and Mmes. L. M. Little, E. A. Kurgas; Misses Mary Bourne, Katherine Brannegan, Maymie Levan; Messrs. T. J. Skinner, P. J. Gordon, J. A. Lavan and Dumont Jones.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be easily made at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—ADV.

To Remove Roughness, Chaps, Freckles, Lines

If your skin is chapped, rough or harsh, dab a liberal amount of mercolised wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine, flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer film skin is soon absorbed, but so gradually, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the ugliest complexion yields to this treatment. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only reliable way to actually discard an aged, faded, freckled, blotchy or weather-beaten complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

If wind and cold make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel.—ADV.

When the Face Is Lifted

It takes off years at once—does not show, restores shape to chin, lessens the flabby skin and jowls around the cheeks and neck, restores a youthful, pleasing contour. Make your face attractive. The only successful method.

ST. LOUISANS HAVE ACTIVE SEASON IN FLORIDA RESORTS

Card Parties, Dances and Other Entertainments Keep Winter Colony on the Move.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 26.—Mrs. W. A. Varnadoe was hostess to a large number of guests at a reception in honor of Mrs. A. Edgar Asbury, of Kansas City, last Friday in her beautiful home here. The reception was one of the most brilliant society events that Tampa has enjoyed this season. The decorations were typical of the winter months in Florida. Calendulas, hybiscus and poinsetties were a few of the many flowers that adorned the reception hall, music room and dining room.

Mrs. Asbury is visiting with Mrs. Varnadoe and is the guest at many social functions.

On Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Herman Baer, of Bradentown, Miss Helen Brown, of Kansas City, was guest of honor at a party, to which only her intimate friends were invited. The entertainment included cards, music and refreshments. Mrs. Kirkhuff was the champion card-player of the occasion, with Mrs. Singletary second. The invited guests were: Miss Helen Brown, Mrs. B. TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo quite so frequently if your hair is properly cleansed each time by use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers may be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox, obtained from your druggist, in a cup of hot water. This rubbed into the scalp creates a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as very beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing, the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—ADV.

"Don Quixote" at the King's.

King's. DeWolf Hopper in "Don Quixote," and three other films.

New Grand Central. Frederick Warde in "Silas Marner."

American. Billie Burke in "Peggy," second week, and two other films.

Nearly every stage attraction that comes this way is proudly heralded as a New York Success. But "Town Topics," which comes to the Shubert Theater tonight, began its career by being a New York Failure, simply because it was too big, costly and elaborate to be a success.

One Ned Wayburn, with aspirations to be a Napoleon of the musical show business, and backed by a citizen of Utah with an astonishing amount of actual money, undertook last September to turn the Century Theater, formerly the New Theater, on Central Park West, New York, into a continental music hall. He prepared "Town Topics" with a lavishness of expenditure that was sheer recklessness. The prodigality of the settings and of the costumes was a show in itself, and the production as a whole had the effect of a three-ring circus.

Notwithstanding big attendance, "Town Topics" was a money loser, and late in November, following the suspension of the show, the properties and costumes were sold at auction. The Shuberts bought them for a song—for a lyric, one might perhaps say. The sale was private, but a statement was printed in a theatrical publication to the effect that the Shuberts paid $6250 for a collection of properties and costumes which had cost $80,000.

The Shuberts proceeded to revamp the show, using the bargain-sale properties to their best advantage, and introducing some improvements, for which there had been noticeable room, in the action. The revised "Town Topics" was successfully produced at the New York Winter Garden and is now here for a week on its way to the Chicago Theater.

As now presented, "Town Topics" has 22 scenes, including the New York subway and the polo grounds, a Mississippi River steamer, a fashion show with a gorgeous gown display, a "back stage" theater sketch, and the launching of the Peace Ship. Leading members of the large company are Trixie Friganza, comedienne; Bert Leslie, king of slang; Lew Hearn and Bonita; Wellington Cross and Lois Josephine; Lillian Herlein, Artie Mehlinger, Marie Lavarre, Peter Page, Carberry Brothers, Mabel Elaine, John Johnson and Jimmy Fox. The chorus has 80 members

"Young America," which comes to the Olympic Theater tonight, is, to return to the familiar phrase, a New York Success of the present season, and the New York cast is to appear, except for one of the juvenile actors, who outgrew his part. Most important, the dog Jasper, close contender for the honor of being star of the performance, is to be here. "Young America," which was written by Frederic Ballard on the basis of Pearl Franklin's "Mrs. Doray" stories, is not a weighty work, but it has several interesting phases, and touches deftly several problems, particularly the boy problem. Peggy Wood, formerly of the musical comedy stage, is to appear as Mrs. Doray; Otto Kruger as the husband who objects to her plan to take a "bad boy" into their home, and Charles Frohman Everett as the boy.

William Faversham, one of the foremost of American stars, will appear at the Shubert next week, beginning Monday night, March 6, in "The Hawk," a French play which has been enthusiastically received in the East. "The Birth of a Nation," photoplay of Civil War and Reconstruction, will return to the Olympic next Sunday.

The Park Opera Company will change its offerings from musical comedy to light opera, beginning tomorrow night with its production of "The Chimes of Normandy," at the Park Theater. Frank Moulan will be the miser, Gaspard, and Mabel Wilber will be Germaine, while Louise Allen will fit the role of Serpolette snugly. Francis J. Boyle will be the bailiff, and George Natanson, Sarah Edwards and Arthur Burckly will have other leading parts. "The Yellow Ticket," with Florence Reed and Malcolm Williams in the chief roles, will go to the Shenandoah Theater for this week.

Sam Chip and Mary Marble, in "The Clock Shop," a vaudeville novelty, will head this week's Columbia Theater bill. They appear as little Dutch clocks, whose love is opposed by a false alarm clock, with the further intervention of the cuckoo clock and other time pieces. Cecil Cunningham, singing comedienne, has second place on the bill, and Long Tack Sam, Chinese magician, is another performer.

It Is True

perhaps that insurance money may be invested at a higher rate of interest than will be earned under a Monthly-Income Policy. But the question is, WILL it be SAFELY invested? WILL it be CONTINUOUSLY invested? WILL IT NET a larger return after all taxes and expenses are deducted? The Monthly-Income Policy of the Missouri State Life removes all doubt on these points. It is sure and certain income and it cannot be lost. It means perfect protection to the beneficiary. Ask a Missouri State Life Agent.

The Doctor's Advice

By Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Clerk" writes: "I feel tired and worn-out all the time. I have no inclination to do anything, and I suffer with headache, trembling and dizziness. I am only 28, but I feel more like 60. What may I do to overcome this condition? I feel restless and discontented."

Answer: I would suggest regular habits of living; avoid excesses and dissipation and start at once using three-grain cadomene tablets. These tablets act as a bracing, stimulating tonic for the nerves and blood, and have benefited thousands. Regular use of them should build you up and revitalize your system.

"Cured" writes: "A couple of years ago your prescription permanently relieved me of a terrible case of rheumatism. My joints were all swollen and I had lumps and bumps on my hands and feet and suffered terribly. Now I want the same formula for my sister, who suffers from rheumatism."

Answer: I have always prescribed the following in the treatment of rheumatism, and my records show it is the one you used with so much success: have your sister get 2 drams of iodide of potassium, 4 drams of sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 5 ozs. of syrup of sarsaparilla comp. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again before going to bed.

"Atlas" writes: "I am losing flesh constantly. I am all run down and weak, and exercise tires me. I want a good builder and tonic."

Answer: Three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets taken regularly with your meals should increase your weight, your strength, and overcome the tired feeling. They are the greatest flesh builders I could suggest.

"L. E." writes: "I want something to relieve me of a cold, tonsilitis, bronchitis and a severe cough."

Answer: To relieve you of cough and cold affecting the tonsils, bronchials or the air passages, I suggest that you secure from your druggist 2½ ozs. concentrated essence mentho-laxene and mix with a pint of syrup made of pure sugar and water. It should break up your cold in a very little while. I have known cases of chronic bronchitis and severe coughs to be permanently relieved with this simple and inexpensive remedy.

"Madame" writes: "I have pains in my back, headache, and chills and fever all the time. My ankles swell and I have dark, sallow skin and puffs under my eyes. A friend of mine suggests, I might have some kind of kidney trouble."

Answer: Your symptoms clearly point to a diseased, inactive condition of your kidneys. What you need is a kidney stimulant and tonic. The best thing you can take is balmwort tablets. Start using at once.

"Run Down" writes: "I'm all run down, have fever, and my complexion is a sight. I have a boil coming on my face and I have had one on my hand. I don't sleep well at night I am so nervous and headachy. I am always constipated—have coated tongue and bad breath."

Answer: Your blood is impure, as indicated by the boils and bad complexion. Three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) will clean your system and tone your blood. Start using them at once. They are sold in sealed tubes.

"Ella" asks: "What do you suppose is the matter with my hair? It is all coming out and my scalp is covered with a kind of rash. It itches terribly. I am afraid I will lose all my hair."

Answer: Wash the hair, and while still wet apply by rubbing thoroughly into the scalp some plain yellow minyol. Rinse out and continue this treatment after washing for about two weeks, at which time your scalp should be healthy and your hair bright and glossy.

"Plump" writes: "I weigh 175 pounds and I am much too plump for my height. May I safely reduce to about 135 pounds?"

Answer: You may safely reduce your weight several pounds by using five-grain arbolone tablets. They are a harmless and successful flesh reducer. Sold in sealed tubes, with full directions.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Davis Tells How Blinded Soldiers Are Cared For

the war broke out the husband ceased hammering tennis balls and hammered German ships of war. He sank several; and is now waiting impatiently outside the Wilhelmshaven for more.

St. Dunstan's also is owned by an American, Mr. Otto Kahn, the banker. In peace times in the winter months Mr. Kahn makes it possible for the people of New York to listen to good music at the Metropolitan Opera House. When war came, at his country place in London, he made it next to possible for the blind to see. He gave the key of the estate to Mr. C. Arthur Pearson. He also gave him permission, in altering St. Dunstan's, to meet the needs of the blind, to go as far as he liked.

Rival Magazine Collectors.

When I first knew Arthur Pearson, he and Lord Northcliffe were making rival collections of newspapers and magazines. They collected them as other people collect postal cards and cigar bands. Pearson was then, as he is now, a man of the most remarkable executive ability, of keen intelligence, of untiring nervous energy. That was 10 years ago. He knew then that he was going blind. And when the darkness came, he accepted the burden; not only his own, but he took upon his shoulders the burden of all the blind in England. He organized the National Institute for those who could not see. He gave them of his energy, which has not diminished, he gave them of his fortune, which happily for them has not diminished; he gave them his time, his intelligence. If you ask what the time of a blind man is worth, go to St. Dunstan's and you will find out. You will see a home and school for blind men, run by a blind man. The same efficiency, knowledge of detail, intolerance of idleness, the same generous appreciation of the work of others, that he put into running the Express and Standard, he now exerts at St. Dunstan's. It has Pearson written all over it just as a mile away there is a building covered with the name of Selfridge, and a cathedral with the name of Christopher Wrenn. When I visited him in his room at St. Dunstan's he was standing with his back to the open fire dictating to a stenographer. He called to me cheerily, caught my hand, and showed me where I was to sit. All the time he was looking straight at me answering questions.

Blindness Not an Affliction.

"What we teach them here," he said, firing the words as though from a machine gun, "is that blindness is not an 'affliction.' We won't allow that word. We teach them to be independent. Sisters and the mothers spoil them! Afraid they'll bump their shins. Won't let them move about. Always leading them. That's bad, very bad. Makes them think they're helpless, no good, invalids for life. We teach 'em to strike out for themselves. That's the way to put heart into them. Make them understand they're of use; that they can help themselves, help others, learn a trade, be self-supporting. We trained them to row. Some of them never'd had oars in their hands except on the pond at Hampstead Heath on a bank holiday. We trained a crew that swept the river."

It was fine to see the light in his face. His enthusiasm gave you a thrill. He might have been Guy Nickalls telling how the crew he coached won at New London.

"When did you leave Saloniki? How many troops have we landed. Our posions are very strong, aren't they?"

He told the stenographer she need not wait, and of an appointment he had which she was not to forget. Before she reached the door he remembered two more things she was not to forget. The telephone rang, and still talking he walked briskly around a sofa, avoided a table and an arm chair, and without fumbling, picked up the instrument. What he heard was apparently very good news. He laughed delightedly, saying: "That's fine! That's splendid!"

"Blindness Not an Affliction."

A secretary opened the door, and tried to tell him what he had just learned, but was cut short.

"I know," said Pearson, "So-and-So has just phoned me. It's fine, isn't it?"

He took a small pad from his pocket, made a note on it, and laid the memoranda beside the stenographer's machine. Then he wound his way back to the fireplace, and offered me a case of cigarettes. He held them within a few inches of my hand. Since I last had seen him he had shaved his mustache, and looked 10 years younger, and, as he exercises every morning, very fit. He might have been an officer of the navy out of uniform. I had been in the room five minutes, and only once, when he wrote on the pad, and I saw he did not look at the pad, would I have guessed that he was blind.

"They were the best crews, too. University crews. Of course, our cox could see, but the crew were blind. We've not only taught them to row, we've taught them to support themselves, taught them trades. All men who come here have lost their eyesight in battle in this war, but already we have taught some of them a trade and set them up in business. And while the war lasts business will be good for them. And it must be nursed and made to grow. So we have an 'after care' committee. To care for them after they have left us. To buy raw material, to keep their work up to the mark, to dispose of it. We need money for those men. For the men who have started life again for themselves. Do you think there are people in America who would like to help those men?"

I asked, in case there were such people, to whom should they write.

"To me," he said, "St. Dunstan's, Regents Park."

Matting as Guide.

I found the 17 acres of St. Dunstan's so arranged that no blind man could possibly lose his way. In the house, over the carpets were stretched strips of matting. So long as a man kept his feet on matting, he knew he was on the right path to the door. Outside the doors, hand rails guided him to the workshops, school rooms, exercising grounds and kitchen gardens. Just before he reached any of these places a brass knob on the hand rail warned him to go slow. Were he walking on the great stone terrace, and his foot scraped against a board, he knew he was within a yard of a flight of steps. Wherever you went you found men at work, learning a trade, or having learned one, intent in the joy of creating something. To help them, there are nearly 60 ladies who have mastered the Braille system and come daily to teach it. There are many other volunteers who take the men on walks around Regent's Park and who talk and read to them. Everywhere was activity. Everywhere someone was helping someone, the blind teaching the blind, those who had been a week at St. Dunstan's doing the honors to those just arrived. The place spoke only of hard work, mutual help and cheerfulness. When first you arrived you thought you had over the others a certain advantage, but when you saw the work the blind men were turning out, which they could not see, and which you knew with both your eyes you never could have turned out, you felt apologetic. There were cabinets, for instance, measured to the twentieth of an inch, and men, who were studying to be masseurs, who, only by touch, could distinguish all the bones in the body. There was Miss Woods, a blind stenographer. I dictated a sentence to her, and, as fast as I spoke she took it down on a machine in the Braille alphabet. It appeared in raised figures on a strip of paper like those that carry stock quotations. Then, reading the sentence with her fingers, she pounded it on an ordinary typewriter. Her work was quite faultless.

Singing as They Worked.

What impressed you was the number of the workers who, over their task, sang or whistled. None of them paid any attention to what the others were whistling. Each acted as though he were shut off in a world of his own. The spirits of the Tommies were unquenchable.

To Present "A Merry Cobbler."

The St. Agatha Young Ladies' Sodality will present a four-act comedy-drama, "A Merry Cobbler," at their hall, Ninth and Utah streets. Dancing will follow the entertainment.

PIANOS

Mason & Hamlin Co.

Dear Sirs:—I have never before been so completely satisfied with any piano at my public concerts or in my private use as I have been during this season with the Mason & Hamlin.

I believe the Mason & Hamlin Pianos are remarkable in all the essential qualities which go to make up an artistic instrument of the very first quality; they are, in my opinion, in advance of all others because of certain important structural features (notably the Tension Resonator) invented and developed by yourselves, which in my judgment give the Mason & Hamlin Piano an exceptional position among the pianos of the world.

AUSTRALIAN ARMY GIVES CAIRO TASTE OF "WILD WEST" LIFE

one sees from the terrace more of the ordinary life, the racing gharries with their shouting drivers bearing along Egyptian women with fine eyes and the thin white veils, more a provocation than a protection, now in vogue in the East. Some of the ladies of the Sultan's palace have also just passed in a French limousine, going three times as fast as anyone else, and I note they, too, wear the gossamer yashmaks.

On the sidewalk immediately below the rail of the hotel an Arab woman is squatting, telling the fortunes of two Australians. A water carrier, dirty beyond belief, pushes along through the swarming porters. Officers are arriving, bag and baggage, every half minute, and through the red fezzes comes a brighter touch of color as two British Generals, red bands on their caps, red tabs on their lapels and strips of service ribbons with every color of the rainbow, pull up.

But through all this distracting color comes a figure in a white turban and a white bernous who dominates the sidewalk. A staff officer who has just descended the steps sees him and thrusts out a hand for him to shake. He gives it a quiet, dignified shake, and they pass a few compliments before they pass on. It occurs to me that this is the first time I have seen an English officer shake hands with a native and the explanation is being expressed right behind me.

"A Bedouin," an officer is saying, "the first I've seen for some time; right off the desert, too. Isn't he a specimen for you? A man, by Jove, and a gentleman!"

And so I begin to understand why everyone in Cairo talks only of the leader of the Senussi, the Chief of all the Bedouins.

At Helipolis, Cairo's model and sanitary suburb, with its enormoue tourist hotel, now the biggest hospital in the world, I heard a roar yesterday like the stock exchange of the curb selling war brides. So I made my way down a palm-bordered, suburban-like street, led on by howls and shrieks of exultation and despair. Suddenly at a corner I came upon what had been an open-air music hall.

"Come on, you Australians, here you are," a huge roughneck bushman was barking at the door; "play yer native game. Crown the maker and ye get it fair. Come on in, ye blighters."

In Australian "Bush."

Inside the thin barrier the roar was at crescendo. I stepped in, and, though I had never been there, I knew where I was. I was back in the Australian "bush," the fevered, restless frontier. Our own mining towns and cow camps never touched the wild, eager excitement of this, everyone gambling like mad, no one caring whether he won or lost, but all absorbed in the intenseness of a life that had been whipped into a frenzy. All about were little tables, behind which soldiers were rolling special dice made for the game of "crown the maker."

Soldiers running the games; soldiers touting, soldiers gambling. I was the only civilian out of hundreds of men there. The winners, after cleaning out the bank, took the chair and banked for the crowd. An enormous fellow, in glad exaltation of winning, picked up a handful of Egyptian "dollars" and threw them into the air, watching delighted as they fell on other tables, disturbing the game. Then he stood on a chair, and in sheer exuberance of spirits, howled his glee at the Egyptian skies.

These men were not drunk, mind you. They had hardly had a dozen drinks apiece. The night was yet young, and they would not "feel their licker" for hours, yet I never saw anything to compare to this virile, this male atmosphere, and, after all, it was only a little afternoon diversion on the way into Cairo.

These Australians will go down in Egyptian history along with the Ptolomies and the Pharoahs. Cairo certainly will never forget them. It will certainly never forget this night. For the Australians are loose in it, and even though there are 1500 of their own men and the entire police force trying to stop them, they are cutting and burning their way through the toughest native quarter.

Amuck in Native Quarter.

Early in the evening I felt there was trouble coming. The Australians were preternaturally quiet, and they went along the streets with a fixed look on their faces. Though the night was warm, many of them were wearing coats, and it did not appear just what they had beneath them. But now they have them out—axes, and with them they are walking right through the houses.

Something like this happened once before since the Australians were landed at Alexandria from Gallipoli, on Christmas eve, but nothing so well organized and on so large a scale, though much rougher.

I first heard what was going on when an orderly came into a restaurant full of Australian officers and shouted:

"Orficers all report to headquarters for duty. The blighters is on the ruck again."

In two minutes the restaurant was half empty, and I followed the Australian Captain I was with on the double run. He knew where to report. He knew "his blighters," and he headed with unerring judgment toward the right district, without stopping for orders I noticed the others did the same. In the Australian army one does not wait for unnecessary orders.

Half a mile, partly on the run, partly rocked along behind galloping ponies in a gharry, brought us over to the southeast, where the streets are the narrowest and the population the most disreputable in Cairo. The howl I heard yesterday in Heliopolis was entirely absent. I expected to find a frenzied mob of Australians roughing the quarter. But there would have been no outcry except for the shrieks of the natives, as axes crashed through doors, furniture fell crashing into the alleys and bedding tumbled out of windows.

The Captain jumped out of the gharry and seized by the shoulder a big fellow who was swinging his ax at the corner post of a ram-shackle old building. The whole structure was shaking under his mighty blows.

"Leave off and carry on with you!" the Captain shouted at him.

"What for?" the big private demanded. "Didn't they rob me mite and me on this dump? Didn't they rob our mites in this whole district?"

I cannot even suggest the picturesque expletives of his language, but he left off and went back under arrest.

Down through the alleys we raced, dodging the crashing furniture and plunging up every flight of stairs where we heard shrieks or saw tumbling furniture. My friend, the Captain, is an Australian of sorts himself, and he made them stand about.

"Carry on, ye drunkards," he shouted at them, and the usual response was: "What's the matter with ye? We're not drunk."

Only Gathering Some Kindling.

We met a tall boy who had hardly enough beard to shave, coming down a flight of stairs, jumping from floor to floor, and bringing the railing with him. Pieces of it were splintering into the hall below.

"What ye think you are doing?" the Captain called out.

"Getting some kindling for me fire. What did you think I was doing?"

"Well, come out of that and carry on with you. You're under arrest, and I have a notion to knock your fool young head off first."

We saw the street light up around a turn and abandoned the boy to race on to the bigger excitement. A house was afire, quite deliberately and consciously set afire, and as carefully guarded to keep the fire from spreading. There was a gang of Australians doing a thorough job.

"You're all under arrest!" the Captain shouted. They went on about their work as if he were not there.

He shouted again, seizing two men by their shoulders.

"Easy, Captain," said the man on his left. "We heard you. But we had to finish our work first, though I can't see it would do any harm to let the whole of it burn."

The fire was controlled with astonishing ease, and the Captain stayed to exert his authority and put them all under arrest. So I went on among the excited, gesticulating natives, Egyptians, Arabs, negroes.

Most of them were women, and there was real tragedy in their voices as they saw their few possessions wrecked as half a dozen burly Australians plunged through.

Before long I was hopelessly lost, but everywhere I turned there were Australians cooly and methodically taking vengeance on certain marked spots. The coolness of it impressed me most. They were not drunk. They were just teaching a lesson.

It took hours to round them all up. For all I know they are at it yet in remote alleys, and the most remarkable part of it is that I don't think a single Australian has come to any harm, though they have charged straight through dark alleys and black hallways.

If this were happening anywhere else there would have been a riot, but the wreckers have been picked up in parties, submitting themselves cheerfully to arrest.

I have been astonished by the attitude of the population as a whole. Everyone is interested, of course, but except for those whose places have been wrecked no one seems to care. The explanation given me is that the row on Christmas eve was of so much spectacular a nature that this is mild in comparison. On that occasion a number of Australian privates made off with their Colonel's automobile and, moreover, wrecked and burned it. In the morning they sent around a brand-new car which they had chipped in for out of their bank accounts, and the Colonel accepted their apology.

Many of those arrested gave the names of men killed at Gallipoli and had the papers to prove it.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR INDIGESTION OR A SICK, UPSET STOMACH

Instant Relief from Pain, Sourness, Gases, Acid Stomach, Heartburn and Dyspepsia—No Waiting!

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—ADV.

I may be Your Eyes

"I AM THE EYES OF A CHILD"

* * * * *

I am brown, or blue, or green, or black, or gray.

I have faith in every One and every Thing. I trust the world.

I look out upon the business of Life and wonder what it is all about.

I still possess the crystal clearness of Innocence. I see nothing sordid or unlovely. The pictures I throw on the baby brain are magical.

I am not for sale or exchange, nor can I be bought. I am Priceless.

I am sensitive. I require Care and Thought and attention, on which I thrive. I grow weak with Overwork, or Ill Health, or Strain. I resent Indifference or Neglect.

When I am not as Strong as I was Intended to be I protest against over Exertion in the School Room. I rebel against long hours of Study or Reading at Home where the Lights are so Dim that I cannot see.

I sound my Warnings daily. I cause Misery to the Brain, and a throbbing Head. I produce a countless score of ills that are blamed on Everything but Me.

I worry myself into aching, twitching, burning coals of fire. I cannot work. I weep. I will not Sleep. I will not stop until my Cry is Heeded.

The Parents of the Baby Body in which I Dwell blame Fretfulness, Illness, Apathy, Dullness and a Stumbling Gait on a score of things.

But I AM THE CAUSE.

I Fairly Sing and Dance and Thrill with Light and Joy and Gladness when I am Healthy and Strong and Rested.

If I get Aid from the Skilled Hands of Men who Know what I Must Have, then I respond in Sheer Gratitude.

If I have Behaved Badly it is only because I have needed Help.

I speak that ALL Parents may hear.

REMEMBER I am the EYES of a Child.

I MAY be the Eyes of YOUR CHILD.

"I AM THE EYES OF AGE"

* * * * *

I am bleared, or clear, or bright, or dull.

I have faith only in those I have learned to love and trust.

I look upon the World and know its joys and pains—the good and the bad—the lovely and the unlovely.

I possess the wisdom of Experience. I know that Life is not all happiness, nor yet all misery. The pictures I present are tinged here and there with brightness—anon with sorrow and regret.

Though old in Service, I am still as priceless as the eyes of Youth—aye, more, for as Youth recedes, Mortals depend more and more upon Me. When treated with thoughtfulness and care and attention, I will repay bountifully.

I cling to Sight even though I may be dimmed with years, and go only when I Must.

I have grown weak, not because of Age, but through Overwork and Ill Health and Strain imposed by the relentless age of War and Work and Worry and Man's Neglect and Abuse.

I rebel against four prison walls of the Office, Home or Factory, the Great White Ways and Nightless Days. I weep at the poorly lighted and poorly ventilated shops. I plead for Pure Light, Pure Air, Pure Life.

I Speak that Eyes of Age may Heed.

When Illness and Physical Distress assail my Home of Clay, I worry and work and strive with might and main against the Ignorance of Men while Life's energies ooze through my Weakened Tissues. Ofttimes Relief comes only when My Lids are closed in the Realm of the Sightless.

Now with Age need of Valiant Service grows apace. When Men of Skill give me such, I repay with a profound Gratitude Youth can never Know.

Remember! I am the EYES of Age—and Age comes to ALL.

I May be YOUR EYES—some time I WILL be YOUR EYES.

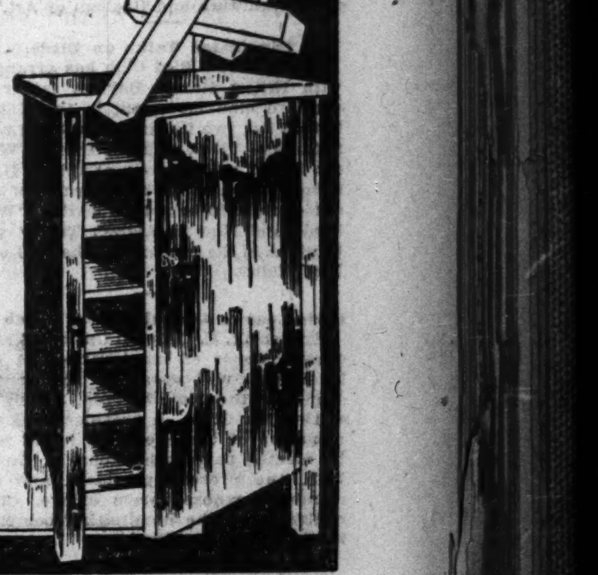

Exhibition

of China Painting and Ceramic Decoration Will Be Continued for

One More Week

Ending Saturday, March 4th.

SO much interest was manifested in this charming and instructive display of the handicraft of St. Louis artists that, by request, we have agreed to allow this exhibition to be conducted on the Main Floor of our Office Building, at 11th and Olive Sts., for another week.

More than fifty artists are showing many beautiful products of their talent, some of which are for sale—although the object of this Exhibition is to show the progress locally in China Painting and Ceramic Decorations.

Exhibition Hours Will Be From 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Daily.

Kellogg's Bran
(COOKED)
READY TO SERVE

An Improved Bran

Bran supplies needed stimulus to the intestinal muscles without harmful reaction. In simple constipation the tendency is to recommend bran rather than drugs.

Kellogg's Bran

is bran in an improved form. Clean bran, steam cooked, then thoroughly dried and packed in cartons that are afterward wrapped in wax paper so that the product will reach you in good condition. Ready to use direct from the package without further cooking! Serve with cream and sugar or mix with breakfast foods.

Children "hate medicine." They will like Kellogg's cooked bran. And, like adults, they need it. Order it of your grocer.

Remember that Kellogg's Bran is the improved bran.

Bankruptcy Suit Against Cigar Co.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the Federal Court yesterday against Charles A. Nager & Co., cigar dealers, with stores at Sixth and Pine streets and at 520 North Third street. Judge Dyer appointed J. F. Wetterer as receiver. The petitioning creditors presented claims amounting to more than $1100.

Remedy Often Prescribed by Many Doctors

Compound of Simple Laxative Herbs Proves Most Efficient.

Dr. W. A. Evans, writing for the Chicago Tribune, makes the assertion that practically everyone, at some time or other, suffers from constipation. This applies regardless of age or condition in life.

The congestion of stomach waste in the bowels is evidenced in various ways; bloat, eructation of foul stomach gases, sick headache, langour, all indicate constipation, and call for prompt attention, not only to relieve the present discomfort but also to avoid possible disease that follows neglect of this important function.

Harsh cathartics and violent purgatives should not be employed, as these afford only temporary relief, while they serve to shock the entire system. A mild laxative such as Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable and is now the remedy generally used and prescribed by many doctors. It is free from opiate or narcotic drugs, acts easily and pleasantly, without griping or other pain and is a safe, effective family remedy.

MR. CHAS SCHELL.

Mr. Chas. Schell, 132 Church St., Grenada, Miss., writes that he found relief himself by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and now keeps it on hand for family use. A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should have a place in every family medicine chest. A trial bottle can be obtained, free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

ST. LOUIS NAVAL RESERVE WILL HAVE BIG CELEBRATION JULY 4

Exhibition Will Be Given to Raise Money for Improvements Needed at the Station.

The St. Louis branch of the Missouri Naval Reserve is planning a big aerial exhibition, barbecue, and fireworks display, July 4, at its armory, Bissell's Point, foot of Ferry street, to raise funds to install a heating plant and make needed repairs in the station.

The naval militiamen are using three old buildings formerly occupied by the Water Department, which the city turned over. The heating plant consists of base-burners, which do not heat the buildings satisfactorily, and this winter the roof had to be recovered.

Lowest prices, easiest terms: Diamonds, Watches, Solid Gold Jewelry. Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d floor, 308 N. 6th st.; open evenings.

OPERETTA BY MORNING CHORAL

The Morning Choral Club will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary by the presentation of an operetta, "Around the World With Spring," at the Odeon, Tuesday evening. Portions of the score and the various dances have been improvised by Mrs. Willis Young, Jacob Mahler, Ernest Kroeger, a former director of the organization, and Charles Galloway.

Officers of the club are: Mrs. Archer O'Reilly, president; Mrs. Howard Boone, vice president; Mrs. J. Campbell Smith, second vice president; Mrs. Ernest M. Birge, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles L. Allen, recording secretary; Mrs. David Boyd, treasurer, and Mrs. Taylor Bernard, librarian.

WATER POWER BILL WALL STREET PLOT, SENATOR DECLARES

Morris of Nebraska Attacks the Shields' Measure in Senate and Declares "It Is Championed by Strongest Lobby That Ever Came to Washington."

REPRESENT WATER POWER TRUST, HE SAYS

Gifford Pinchot in Forcible Letter to the Post-Dispatch Calls the Attempt a Most Serious Attack Upon the Country's Public Resources.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—In an attack on the Shields' bill to provide for water power grants on navigable streams to private interests, Senator Norris of Nebraska today declared the bill was being championed by the strongest lobby that ever came to Washington.

"They are representatives of the water power trust," he said, "which has its general headquarters in Wall Street."

It was freely predicted here today that the general dam bill, introduced by Senator Shields of Tennessee, is expected to pass the Senate early next week.

On Friday the Senate voted on an amendment to the bill offered by Senator Walsh of Montana, which had been debated for three days, and rejected it by a vote of 34 to 18. This "show down" convinced supporters of the bill that it will go through the Senate substantially as reported to that body.

Purpose of the Bill.

The primary purpose of the bill is to confer on the Secretary of War authority to grant water power permits on navigable streams for terms up to 50 years, and until terminated by the Federal authorities on reasonable notice.

At the end of the running period the grant may either be renewed by the Secretary of War or the plant taken over by the Federal Government at a fair valuation. Forfeiture of a permit for failure to comply with the prescribed conditions is provided for in the bill.

In awarding permits to construct power dams in navigable streams preference is given to municipalities or other political subdivisions of States and public utility companies, where the power developed is to be used for municipal or public utility purposes.

Provision is made in the bill for the payment by grantees to the Federal Government of "reasonable charges" for the benefits accuring under water power grants through the construction, operation and maintenance of headwater improvements, including storage reservoirs. These charges are to be fixed from time to time by the Secretary of War in proportion to the benefits actually received.

Power to Fix Rates.

The bill confers upon the Interstate Commerce Commission power to fix the rates which may be charged by power companies for the product of plant constructed in navigable streams, where the current enters into interstate commerce. Where the power is consumed within the State in which the plant is situated, the charges, rates and service of the power companies are made subject to the laws of the states.

Provision is made for punishment of individuals or corporations which may violate any proper order of the Secretary of War or fail to live up to the terms of their grants. A fine of $1000 is fixed as the penalty, and every month the grantee remains in default will be considered a separate offense.

According to Senator Shields, the author of the bill, the people of the United States are losing $700,000 a day for lack of such a measure on the statute books.

"Speedy development of 15,000,000 horsepower, now flowing to waste in the navigable streams of the United States will follow the enactment of this bill into law," said Senator Shields. "This power is equal to that now generated by steam plants which are consuming over 100,000,000 tons of coal annually at a cost of approximately $250,000,000.

To Preevnt Future Wastes.

"The prime reasons which have prevented the development of water power energy in the United States are found in the restrictive policy of the present statutes concerning the matter, which experience has shown to be practically prohibitory of it. Under the provisions of this bill water power resources of the country would be developed and utilized and future waste prevented, which is conservation in its highest and truest sense.

"The bill is primarily framed in the interest of the consumers. It provides for cheap power by which fertilizers and many necessaries of life can be produced and furnished to the people cheaper than is now done with power produced by steam.

"Instead of giving the power companies anything which can be used for exploitation of the public, this bill closes the door to any stock-watering or financial chicanery which might serve as an excuse for high rates or charges.

"It contains an express provision prohibiting a development from constituting a part of a monopoly or a conspiracy in restraint of trade, supplemental to the prohibitions of the Sherman anti-trust law.

"Delay in the enactment of this meas-

Second Week

Consolidation Sale of Pianos and Player-Pianos

Coming as an addition to the wonderful attractiveness of the new Field-Lippman home at 1120-1122 Olive Street, the consolidation of the Kansas City and St. Louis Stores makes a buying opportunity of far-reaching interest. The tremendous response to our last week's advertising proves this!

An Event of Great and Genuine Importance!

Field-Lippman have never advertised a sale unless it was a real sale. The instructions to the advertising department are always to underrate rather than overrate values. The public has grown to understand this characteristic feature in Field-Lippman advertising.

As we have before stated in announcing this Consolidation Sale, even the great size of our new home here at 1120-1122 Olive Street is not sufficient to house all of the instruments of the combined Kansas City and St. Louis stocks. We are compelled to take radical measures, and the prices quoted below indicate what awaits you here.

Both New and Used Instruments Are Offered at Low Prices!

In combining the St. Louis and Kansas City stocks there are scores and scores of new instruments received last year, but of discontinued case designs—choice, plain-line, beautifully figured cases; musical quality up to Field-Lippman rigid standards in every respect. The values we offer are startling indeed!

We have a large number of used instruments which have been taken in exchange for new player-pianos. These used instruments have been carefully inspected and put in perfect playing condition by Field-Lippman experts. They represent the absolute Maximum of value at the prices asked, and we invite the most critical comparison. This is indeed an event of great and genuine importance to the St. Louis musical public.

"Values Are Greater Than Advertised"

These are the very words used by dozens of visitors who last week responded to our announcements in the newspapers. We are unable, through lack of space, to mention more than a small number of the instruments offered in this sale, but in every instance you will find more for your money than you expected. Many additional pianos and player-pianos have been placed on the various floors to occupy the space vacated by those sold last week. Be on hand early Monday and choose the cream of the collection!

Mr. Wm. Mason Had Weak Lungs Caught Bad Colds Frequently

He Found That a Good Rub With Vick's "Vap-O-Rub" Salve Over the Throat and Chest Always Gave Relief.

Mrs. Wm. Mason, 814 S. Tenth St., tried Vick's "Vap-O-Rub" for the first time last winter. She writes: "My husband has weak lungs and catches cold easily. 'Vap-O-Rub' is certainly a blessing to us. I rub his chest well at night, and he swallows a little bit of it, and his cold will always be lots better by morning. I have also used 'Vap-O-Rub' for burns. Just rub the burned part with it, and it seems to draw all the fire out and take away the pain at once. My sister has used it for catarrh in the head and found it fine."

"Vap-O-Rub" was introduced in St. Louis last winter for the first time. It is the invention of a North Carolina druggist and in the South is universally used. There is hardly a Southern family that does not use Vick's as first aid for all forms of croup and cold troubles.

For head colds, catarrh, asthmatic troubles or neuralgia just rub Vick's up the nostrils and over the temples and melt a little in a spoon and inhale the vapors.

For deep chest colds, sore throat or incipient pneumonia apply hot wet towels over the throat and chest to open the pores of the skin, then rub Vick's in well, and cover with a warm flannel cloth. Leave the covering loose around the neck, as the body heat releases soothing vapors that are inhaled with each breath to the lungs through the air passages. In addition, Vick's is absorbed through the skin, taking out the tightness and soreness. The next morning your head is clear and the soreness gone from the chest. Croup is usually relieved in fifteen minutes, and most colds go overnight.

Vick's is particularly recommended for mothers with small children. Three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1. At all druggists.-

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. A pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the membranes in the case of a painful cough.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GIFFORD PINCHOT OPPOSES WATER POWER MEASURE

In Forcible Letter He Asks Aid of the Post-Dispatch in Fighting the Shield's Measure.

My Dear Sir: I write to ask your help to defeat a most serious attack on our public resources. Since the fight over the Alaska resources was won there has not been so pressing a threat against the conservation policy as the present effort in Congress to give our public water powers for nothing into monopolistic control.

The Shields bill, now before the Senate, gives to the power interests without compensation the use of water power on navigable streams. The amount of water power these streams will supply is larger by far than all the power of every kind now in use in the United States. It pretends to, but does not, enable the people to take back their own property at the end of 50 years, for, in order to do so under the bill, the Government would have to pay the unearned increment and to take over whole lighting systems of cities and whole manufacturing plants. Private corporations are authorized to seize upon any land, private or public, they choose to condemn.

Roosevelt Vetoed Bills.

Bills which have given away public water powers without due compensation were vetoed by President Roosevelt and President Taft. The Shields bill would do precisely the same thing today.

Another water power bill, the Ferris bill, relating to the public lands and national forests, was in the main a good bill as it passed the House. As reported to the Senate, it encourages monopoly by permitting a corporation o take as many public water power sites as it may please. Under it the corporations could not even be kept from fastening upon the Grand Canyon, the greatest natural wonder on this continent. This bill takes the care of water powers on national forests from the experienced and competent Forest Service and gives it to the Interior Department, thus entailing duplication and needless expense.

In my opinion, there is undue carelessness as to the disposal of public resources at present in Washington. The water power legislation now before the Senate is too favorable to the men who, as Secretary Houston's admirable recent report shows, control through 18 corporations more than one-half of the total water power used in public service throughout the United States.

The water power men charge that conservation hampers development. The Houston report shows, on the contrary, that the most rapid development is in the national forests, where conservation is best enforced. On the other hand, 120 public service corporations own and are holding undeveloped and out of use an amount of water power equal to four-fifths of all there is developed and in use by all the public service corporations in the whole United States.

Quotes His Letter.

As I said in an open letter of Jan. 29 to the President:

"Natural resources lie at the foundation of all preparedness, whether for peace or for war. No plan for national defense can be effective unless it provides for adequate public control of all the raw materials out of which the defensive strength of a nation is made. Of these raw materials water power is the most essential, because without electricity generated from water power we cannot manufacture nitrates, and nitrates are the basis of gunpowder. There are no great natural deposits of nitrates in the United States as there are in Chile. It would be folly to allow the public water powers, which can supply this indispensable basis of national defense, to pass out of effective public control."

A concerted movement is on foot to break down the conservation policy. Feeble resistance or none at all is being made by official Washington. Unless the press and the people come to the rescue, the power interests are likely to win. This is a public matter wholly removed from political partisanship. Your paper's help is needed. For nearly 10 years this fight for the public water powers has gone on. We ought not to lose it now.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) GIFFORD PINCHOT.

WAR LITERATURE AT LIBRARY

Maps, Books and Prints to Be Displayed This Week.

A large collection of books, prints and maps illustrating the events of the present war in Europe will be on exhibition at the Public Library, beginning Tuesday.

The library has been purchasing war material freely in all languages obtainable. Among the interesting things to be shown are a full set of the British recruiting posters, displayed to stimulate volunteering; plates in color showing all the various uniforms of the contending armies; portraits of monarchs, statesmen and generals; official pamphlets giving the contentions of the various Governments regarding disputed points; cartoons bearing on all phases of the war, and prints illustrating and explaining all the new devices in the way of air craft, submarines, weapons and new methods of attack and defense. The material shown embraces a considerable number of foreign postal cards.

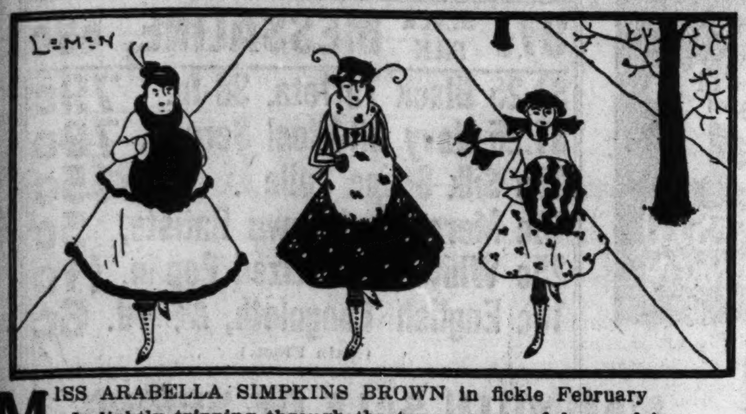
ARABELLA RIGHT IN STYLE.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN in fickle February
Is lightly tripping through the town as graceful as a fairy.
Her skirt, we note, is rather shy, abbreviated very;
We thought when first she caught our eye 'twas little sister Mary.
But observation quickly showed that juvenile creations
In fashion's march are on the road to give us new sensations,
For Arabella's mamma, too, when next we did espy her
Displayed a skirt of baby blue as high, or maybe higher.
And Aunt Aurelia has a hat with cauliflowers upon it,
A novelty worth looking at, a vegetarian bonnet,
And though she's 58 or so she's not afraid to wear it,
But says she's going to add a bow, a turnip and a carrot.
While thus discussing springtime news, there's grandma right in fashion;
She's wearing putty-colored shoes and says she thinks them "dashin'."
And so the world is youthful all in this the giddy season,
For stout or thin or short or tall they ask no better reason
Than Fashion's whisper in the ear to hie them forth and buy it;
If it be style, though it be queer, full gladly they will try it.
And so short skirt and putty shoe, the cauliflower and carrot,
What can Miss Arabella do but grin and proudly bear it?

WHEN THE CAMPAIGN'S ON.

IN the trenches where the bullets
Are a-singing in your ear,
You would think most every soldier
Would be overcome with fear,
But you find them blithe and chipper
And, if you ask them why,
They will grab you by the flipper
And give you this reply:
"We never have to listen to a politician talk,
For they never stump the trenches with their buncome and their squawk;
There's no oratoric gas bombs filled with flummery and guff,
So we guess we'll stay right here awhile; the trench is good enough."

AN ABSORBING TOPIC.

"Well, my dear," said Mr. W., "I see the Kaiser is——"

"Trimmed in the very latest fashion—" mused Mrs. W.

"I didn't say he was trimmed. He has——"

"The loveliest decorations in the newest metallic effects——"

"I was merely trying to say he will be there with——

"A dull finish."

"My dear, I don't believe you were listening to me."

"Why, yes, I was. Weren't you talking about spring hats?"

CONVINCING.

"Well, Jinks, I see the Bell Telephone Co. has induced the Public Service Commission to permit it to increase rate on business telephones."

"Yes, Binks, the company must have put up a good line of talk."

O SUM HI.

KUNG LIN-YI is Duke no more,
Not have to work in Ten-Cent Store.
Is now made Prince as quick as can
By Yuan Shih Kai, that Emperor Man.

Got nice job to hang around throne,
And now can call his life his own,
Because he look up his family tree
And say: "Confucius ancestered ME."

All Confucians now live high,
Got no limit except the sky,
While Yuan Shih Kai, that Emperor man,
Eat birdy nest soup as fast as can.

CHINA BOY POET.

WHO WOULDN'T?

IT'S fine to be a diplomat
And bat around with kings,
A feather plume upon your hat
And braid upon your wings.
Most any man would swell with pride
At having such a chance
To do the diplomatic glide
In Knickerbocker trousers.

MIGHT OMIT THE MUSIC.

A CLERGYMAN of Kentucky, according to Senator Ollie James of that State, who never lost an opportunity to decry what he termed "the sin of dancing," met a pretty girl member of his church who was reluctant to adopt the view of her spiritual adviser.

"You should give up dancing, Miss Smith," he urged. "Don't you know that dancing is simply spooning set to music?"

"Well," said the girl, "I suppose they might omit the music."

A LOOK AROUND

FY CLARK M'ADAMS.

IF Mr. Brandeis can help the United States Supreme Court decide the constitutionality of the Federal bird law, he need not worry about his enemies keeping him off the bench. About two million duck shooters in the Mississippi Valley will gladly go to the front for him, and he will go on the Federal payroll with a suddenness that will take everyone's breath. The Supreme Court has had this momentous issue before it ever since last October, and it has not said Booh! It would seem that whether the birds belong to the states or the nation, whether they are interstate commerce or retail groceries, or whether it is good or bad for the country to pursue them in rubber boots and peril of pneumonia, ought not to be such a hard nut to crack that an expert judicial body like the United States Supreme Court could not do it in more than four months. Yet not one word is handed down, the ducks are pecking the hunters' eyes out, and the people who have looked in the newspapers every day for a decision are in a fair way to perish of nervous prostration. It has been reported that three members of the court were against the law. Emerson Hough seems to have been the source of this rumor. Since then one member has died. Whether he were one of the three, we do not know. Possibly his was the vote that would have broken a tie. At any rate, everybody interested in the subject has been glad for a new field of speculation, and until the ducks suddenly floated in on a south wind the other day, we were bearing up pretty well. That incident made a great difference. It seemed that the ducks, anticipating an early decision themselves, decided to go north early and give themselves the benefit of the doubt. They came in clouds, and by this time, no doubt, the great bulk of them have escaped across the Canadian border. So much for dilly-dallying in the Supreme Court.

LAST Monday was the most promising day the hunters have had. On that day the members of the Court, after long deliberation over some pressing matter, resumed the bench. That there would be a decision on the Federal bird law not later than Tuesday or Wednesday seemed as certain as that spring had come and that wild ducks were moving into the North. What happened? It seems almost absurd. At a time when the country could have been set at rest one way or the other on a matter which has probably shortened the lives of more men than the Civil War, the court calmly handed down a decision touching an alleged infringement of patent in the name of a ladies' shoe! How it could have hit upon anything so trivial when it might have stilled the beating heart of a great constituency by declaring its mind on the Federal bird law, is past making out. It just did it. Hunters were astounded. They had not known that any such piffling question was up. They had supposed that the long silence in the United States Supreme Court had been due to a hard-fought battle over the Federal bird law. That nobody seemed even to have discovered that case on the docket, was too much. Whether Mr. Brandeis would have made any difference is a question. He, too, seems something of a crank about trivial things. He probably never lost a day's work in his life because the ducks were flying, or never knew the bliss of having his boots full of ice water on a cold day in March. Still, the hunters would rather have the case decided against them than not have it decided at all; and if his appointment would mean a decision either one way or the other, they would all gladly support him. It is delay that kills. Nowadays when duckshooters meet their first inquiry is about the Federal law. If none of them has heard anything about it, they simply sigh and disperse. Thus the months pass, and the years. It has been three years since we had any spring shooting in this Western country, and that is the only kind there is.

REALLY, the German blow-up theory is the biggest new thing in the war. It is conceivable that with well-organized and systematic blowing-up, an army and navy ought not to be necessary. Let us say that Japan declares war on us, as Mr. Millard insists she is likely to do any minute. With enough Japanese equipped with explosives well disseminated through our territory, it ought to be possible to blow us up in our vital parts at a given signal and file a formal declaration of intentions after we had been rendered hors de combat. In that grand blow-up the Panama Canal could be closed, our ships blown to smithereens, our soldiers fairly hoisted out of their beds, our ammunition plants reduced, our armories leveled, and our coast defenses transformed into a sad mass of junk. True, we could play at that game ourselves and have Japan adequately and scientifically mined, but that would have to be a part of our general plan of preparedness if anything came of it. The Security League isn't going to do it, or the Boy Scouts. We must learn, like the Germans, to think of everything. We boast of the nimblest wits in the world, and without any doubt we could, if we would, develop blowing-up to a point of frightfulness which the present war has not suggested. Maybe someone like Mr. Edison or Mr. Maxim could invent wireless blowing-up that would relieve anyone of the necessity of shadowing a place or planting a tin-can of something at an unholy hour of night. At any rate, everything else looks feeble in comparison with the blow-up theory. The Germans have not even scraped the surface of that idea. They have only worked it out to a point proving its amazing possibilities. One may be sure that if there is another war in Europe there will be a new order of things. That the warring nations did not have one another mined when the war broke out was only because they had never thought of it. As old Dr. Gatling, inventor of the Gatling gun, used to say, it is in time of war that we learn to fight.

She Dreaded an Operation More Than Anything Else

Tried Fruitola and Traxo and Has Never Since Been Troubled With Gall-Stones.

Mrs. Mary Franse

Mrs. Mary E. Franse, whose address is West Point, Neb., Box 411, has written to the Pinus laboratories a very strong endorsement of Fruitola and Traxo. In her letter, Mrs. Franse says: "About ten years ago I was about to undergo an operation for gall-stones when I heard of your medicine. Dreading an operation above everything I determined to try Fruitola and Traxo and have never been sorry I did so as I have never been troubled with gall-stones since."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs and one dose is usually sufficient to give ample evidence of its efficacy. It is a great system cleanser. Following a dose of Fruitola, Traxo should be taken three or four times a day in order to rebuild and restore the system that has been weakened and run down by constant suffering. It is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach most beneficially.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In St. Louis they can be obtained at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 6th St. and Washington Av.

LETTERS SENT TO POST-DISPATCH ON SEGREGATION ISSUE

How the Question Is Viewed Is Shown in the Many Communications Received.

ELECTION IS TUESDAY

Arguments for and Against Proposition Submitted by Interested Citizens.

THE Post-Dispatch today publishes several letters received during the last week on segregation. The communications are by those opposed to the measure as well as by those favoring it. The segregation election will be held on Tuesday. The letters follow:

"Amusing Contradictions."

Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We are in receipt of a circular published by the Anti-Segregation Committee, which is conspicuous for its contradictions.

They say "Our segregation ordinances will be declared invalid." In the next breath they say, "Our laws unjustly discriminate against, and humiliate and oppress the negro." If the laws will be declared unconstitutional, how can they do the great wrongs which our opponents charge they will do? Our laws cannot wrong the negro if they will be invalidated by the courts. If our opponents are so cock sure that the laws will be declared invalid, why do they fume and fuss so much about them?

They also quote from the Declaration of Independence, "All men are created equal," and they capitalize the word "equal." Then they turn about face and say, "It is the bounden duty of the whites to encourage and help the negroes." If the negroes and whites are equal, why should and how can the whites help the negroes?"

Again they say, "The negro does not invade white property," and then about face and say, "Our laws would injure the negro by forcing him to remain where he is."

Again, "Segregation would hurt white property owners more than the negro tenants." (They are very solicitous about the white property owner. Anyway, who wants to injure the negro, tenant or owner? But listen to the contradiction: They have told us that the negro is a tenant, and then about face and say, "Our laws would deprive the negro of the legal right to occupy property which he may own."

They appeal to the voters to vote against the negro ghetto, and then about face and say, "The negro ghetto will never expand much geyond ITS present voluntary and central limits." You see they tell us we have a ghetto now. Hence, how can we vote against one?

FELIX P. LAWRENCE, Pres.
UNITED WELFARE ASSOCIATION,

No Threat of Jewish Segregation.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The writer has been personally appealed to by a number of our Jewish supporters to issue a statement especially assuring the Jewish people of St. Louis that the success of our laws providing separate blocks for colored and white people will not mean the segregation of the Jews.

A statement of such purport has always seemed so superfluous to the writer as to approach the ridiculous, but our supporters have been so persistent and urgent that we are going to comply with their request. It is on a parallel with asking a man if he will answer a question "yes" or "no," and upon receiving an affirmative answer ask him when he is going to stop beating his wife, or in other words, there is absolutely no justification for the statement that the segregation of the white and colored means the segregation of the Jews, or any other foreign white race.

We have always frankly admitted that the reason for having separate neighborhoods for white and colored people was to conserve the home values. Any city that insures stable home values is naturally a good city in which to own a home, and the cities which have the greater portion of home owners as residents are the best spiritually, morally and financially.

We know of no better way to emphasize the great objections to negro invasion as compared with the very few objections that are made against members of foreign white races, than to remind your readers that there has not, to our knowledge, been a subdivision laid out in the city of St. Louis during the past 15 years that has not been restricted against selling or renting to negroes. We have never heard, and do not believe any other St. Louisan ever heard, of a subdivision of this city which was restricted against any of the foreign white races. This being the case, we are at a loss to understand how any one can contend that home owners of St. Louis, when they have succeeded in segregating the negroes, will proceed to segregate the Jews, or any other Caucasian race.

UNITED WELFARE ASSOCIATION,
Felix P. Lawrence,
President.

Judge Muench's Opposition.

I have sent the following reply to Mr. Felix P. Lawrence, president of the United Welfare Association, in answer to a circular communication received from him. The letter presents my views, which are against segregation. Will you be good enough to publish this communication? HUGO MUENCH.

"Dear Sir—Recently you asked, through what seemed to be a circular letter, whether the use of my name, signed to a protest sent out by the Citizens' Committee opposed to "Segregation of Negroes" was authorized. In that same connection it was asserted that some of the signers of that protest had denied any knowledge thereof, and repudiated the act.

"While your own right to demand such an explanation from me might fitly have been challenged, that point may be waived, and all controversy set at rest by the statement that not only did the protest in question meet my full approval, but also, that though a member of the committee by which the document in question was promulgated, I have yet to learn of a repudiation thereof by any citizen whose name was appended thereto. Those who oppose this attempted piece of legislation upon principle should have at least as much right to insist upon a recognition of their sincerity of purpose, as have those who support the same from motives of self-interest.

"Your communication did not stop with a mere catechism as to the genuineness of my own opposition. It launched into a dissertation upon the purity of your motives and the supposed legality of the measures which you seek to defend. More matter of a like nature has since followed, and as you and your associates have eagerly sought to influence public opinion in favor of ordinances which I cannot but regard as vicious in their tendencies, subversive of the very groundwork of our institutions and thoroughly un-American, there can be no impropriety in communicating to you, in brief, a few of the reasons which cause those who place the sanctity of constitutional guaranties above mere temporary expediency and self-interest, to stand firmly in opposition to your plans.

"Were it necessary, even the "paper case" which you make in favor of the scheme could be shown to be extremely vulnerable. What are the districts into which the colored population of this city has "poured" in the last decade or two? Are they not along those streets which the former white residents abandoned in their eager desire to move farther—and still farther—West? Do we not know that the substantial residences along Chestnut, Pine and Olive streets, Cook, Finney and other avenues, were depreciated by abandonment and neglect long before the negro population was induced to enter the same? And is it not also true that for these abandoned residences negroes paid a higher price, whether in the way of purchase or rental, than white people were willing to pay?

"Conceding that an 'undesirable' colored family may depreciate values by moving into a given locality, is it not equally true that an undesirable family of any other race will do the same? Are we to establish the principle that a certain majority of property owners in a given subdivision of our city may place the stamp of the pariah upon all but the chosen few whom they shall select as their associates?

"Such is not the spirit of our institutions, and any attempt to depart therefrom will prove perilous in its consequences.

"Since you expressly disclaim your advocacy of these laws to be inspired by any intention to arouse race hatred or prejudice, and frequently asservate your charity towards all, and the absence of malice, we must fairly assume that you expect to adopt the same means of segregating desirable and undesirables whenever your pecuniary interests shall so dictate. In other words the time will come when the same iron band may be drawn around the Jew, the Italian, the Greek, the Syrian, or any of the many other nationalities or races who contribute towards the make-up of this great city. Either of these may at any time be imagined to depreciate values by their presence in certain localities, and no one will be able, in principle, to establish a difference between their segregation and that of the negro.

"Conceding, obviously, that an ordinance seeking to prevent the acquirement of real estate by any given race, and the use thereof, would be violative of constitutional guarantees, you seek to break the force of that objection by arguing that the negro might, under the attempted ordinance, still buy property, and rent the same to white people—all that you seek to deprive him of is the right to use or occupy the same himself. In other words, you deprive him of the substance of a right, while preserving a mere shadow. As well go the whole length, and frankly admit that you aim at his right to acquire through the indirect means of shutting out occupancy.

"But you say that the ordinances can stand the test of fairness and equality, because, forsooth, you equally prohibit the white man from setting up his habitation in a block which is to the extent of 75 per cent, owned by negroes. A delicious bit of humor that—strongly reminiscent of the quality so wittily quoted by Judge Lamm in his dissent-opinion in Cook vs. Globe Printing Co., 227 Mo. 1. c. 612.

"While not entertaining the slightest doubt that these measures ought to be declared unconstitutional by the courts, yet it is my ardent desire, along with that of so many other citizens of all political and social attachments, that our good city, which has ever maintained a stout front in favor of individual rights, should not, in this instance, be published to the world as having sacrificed a great principle for the sake of an apparent temporary gain.

"I beg to remain,

"Frankly yours,
"HUGO MUENCH."

The Negro in American History.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The proposed segregation ordinance, soon to be voted on by the people of St. Louis, is now the sole topic of our citizenship. And to condemn without trial is not customary. Hence, it is fit that the black side of this white subject be aired.

There are those who are not familiar with the part the negro has played in American history, and most certainly they are in the ranks of the pro-segregationists. It is necessary, therefore that we recall some facts: Columbus was lost and wandering in midocean. His storm-driven ship had all but spent its course: his nerve was failing, hope was fleeing fast. In this awful state of affairs Estevonico, a negro, walked to the front of the vessel and directed the Genoa sailor to the mainland. The result of that act of one whose race is down was the discovery of the New World—America. When a little over a hundred years later the first European landed in Jamestown, Va., in 1607, it was not long before the sturdy African was his best asset. The former came in search of newer realms for development, as well as ambitious for exploitation. The latter came by force,

An Exhibition of Authentic Spring Fashions at Vandervoort's Tomorrow—Everything That Has Been Decreed Correct for the New Season Is Represented

Women's Silk and Cloth Suits—Exquisite in Diversity of Style and Fabric

A comprehensive collection of Women's Spring Suits, including exclusive models produced by the combined efforts of French art and American skill.

The Colonial note is clearly discernable in many of these suits and there are also novel style-features in their making, such as extremely wide revers, quaint ruffles, Dickens collars, double shoulder capes and very fancy sleeves.

Distinctiveness of Style in the Silk Suits

There is a marked preference this season for Silk Suits for semi-dress wear and we have a most complete variety for choice.

Some of them are elaborately ornamented with gold and silver trimmings and rich embroideries, while quite a few are made with smart vestees of contrasting color silk.

There are coats in all lengths from the dainty Eton to the graceful three-quarter lengths. The materials are Gros de Londres, silk faille and plain and fancy taffetas in the approved shades for Spring. Prices $27.50 to $250

Modish Cloth Suits of Unusual Beauty

Our showing of Cloth Suits is equally rich in variety of fabric and style and whatever is new and worthy of representation may be seen here.

Many of the new Coats are effectively trimmed with silk hand-embroidery and cloth of contrasting color. The skirts are in keeping with Fashion's edicts, some showing hip-yokes and plaits, others flaring, but all are very wide and short.

Choice of such fabrics as Poiret twills, fine serges, gabardine, velour cloth, and a good selection of smart combinations of silk and cloth. Prices $25 to $75

Women's Stylish Frocks Very Modestly Priced

We wish to emphasize the fact that we are particularly well prepared to meet the requirements of the woman of modest means.

In our Inexpensive Dress Shop—we are showing the newest Spring Frocks in a wide diversity of styles, priced at $5 to $19.75

Two of the distinctive styles, among those at $19.75, are the new Coat Dresses, with their easy fitting waistline, and the chic bouffant models in combinations of taffeta and Georgette crepe.

Third Floor.

The Always-Dependable "Wooltex" Garments

Our Wooltex Specialty Shop has a liberal share in this early Spring Exhibit. In the display are stylish Suits in Tailored and Semi-Tailored Models for Misses and small Women, with a good variety of the much-wanted Norfolks. Prices $25 to $39.50

Silk and Cloth Coats

The Wooltex Coats of silk, chinchilla, gabardine and serge are fashioned in smart styles for the street, ornate styles for dress and chic models for sport wear. Prices $12.75 to $25

In addition to our splendid preparedness to supply every requirement for Spring and Summer Draperies, we have planned one of the best value-giving sales of Lace Curtains that this store has ever held—which will begin tomorrow morning. The Curtains offered have been collected from the best American and European makers and are suitable for all parts of the house.

By purchasing now you may save from 25 to 35 per cent on the curtains you will need for Spring and Summer. Our space permits the quoting of only a few examples:

Values	$1.75,	$2.25,	and $4.00
Sale Prices	$1.25,	$1.65	and $3.00

Filet, Marquisette and Scrim Curtains, suitable for the bedroom, dining room or library, of the regular $1.00 to $3.75 qualities—in this sale at 69c, $1.29, $1.45 and $2.75.

Point de Gene, Point Milan, Duchesse, Swiss Point and Antique Madeira Curtains—made expressly for us in St. Gall, Switzerland—specially priced at $2.90, $4.90, $5.90, $6.85 to $14.85.

Curtains Nets and Drapery Fabrics

The new guaranteed Sunfast "Alhambra" Cloth is a plain fabric with a lustrous silk-finish and is particularly desirable for handsome over-draperies and curtains. Recent price advances will make this fabric 25 to 40 per cent higher on duplicate orders, so we advise purchasing while our present stock lasts.

The 32-Inch Width Is Priced 65c
The 50-Inch Width Is Priced $1.15

Curtain Nets of exceptionally fine mesh are shown in a variety of small figure and dot designs—white, ecru and ivory—priced, the yard 65c

We have never shown a more comprehensive line of beautiful Tapestries, Brocades and Velvets than now and the price-range is broad.

$4.50 Tapestry Special at $2.35

We are offering a very special value in richly colored tapestries of heavy weight—worth $4.50 a yard, at $2.35

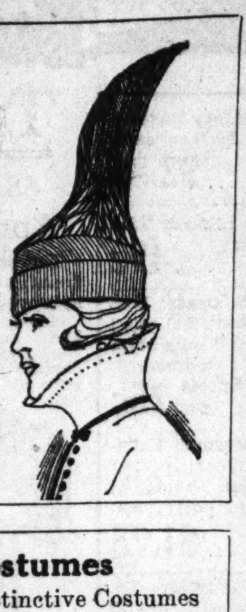
The Original Paris Models



New and authentic Imported Millinery is ready for your inspection at Vandervoort's. The showing of French Model Hats in our Millinery Shop embraces the products of all the well-known Paris couturieres.

The illustration shows a new model from the House of Nadia, so well known for smart hats, and portrays the style tendencies for Spring in extreme height.

Third Floor.

Handsome Spring Costumes

An elaborate display of the most distinctive Costumes in early Spring models will be made in our Costume Salon tomorrow.

There are handsome creations, embodying the most attractive style-features decreed correct for evening wear—appropriate for the Ballet Russe—Afternoon Gowns of refined elegance for wear at day-time functions, and modish Frocks of more conservative style for street wear.

The favored fabrics for Spring, in the correct shades, are here in ample variety, including figured taffetas, Georgette crepe, satin, taffeta, charmeuse, voiles, nets and smart combinations.

Third Floor.

An Unusual Showing of Skirts

Women's Silk Skirts are shown in a host of the newest and most exclusive models for Spring. They are developed from the much-wanted taffeta, faille, Soiree and charmeuse—plain and fancy weaves—in fashionable light and dark Spring colors and novelty plaids and stripes.

All are beautifully tailored and the extensive variety insures a satisfactory choice. Unusually good values at these prices—$6.95, $7.95, $8.95 and up to $29.75

Third Floor.

Fine Quality Wavy Hair Switches

In a Special Sale—Monday

These Switches are in all shades, including gray, and not only are they of excellent quality hair but our experts will match one perfectly to your own hair. An unusual opportunity—for one day—to secure $5.00 and $6.00 Switches for $3.95

Third Floor.

The New Gossard Corset Styles

The Gossard Corsets for Spring and Summer are here and among them you will find just the model you will need—at any price you may want to pay—$2, $3.50, $5, $6.50, $8.50 and up.

Each Gossard Corset is designed to accentuate the natural beauty of your figure—correct any slight imperfections and give comfort such as you have never known. Doctors say "A Gossard Corset safeguards your health."

The freakish and generally unbecoming tendencies of the modes are past. In the natural lines and beautiful fabrics of the new models is reflected the demand of Fashion for a simpler style, which depends on beauty of line, correct design and exquisiteness of material for its charm.

Gossard Corsets are fitted—here—by expert corsetieres.

It will give us pleasure to show you the new models.

Third Floor.

Remnant Sale in the Basement

The accumulation of Remnants in our various Piece Goods Shops will be placed on special sales in the Basement—tomorrow. The prices at which these have been marked to sell are but a mere fraction of their actual value, making it advisable to shop early for first choice.

Included in the sale are remnants of—

Woolen Dress Fabrics Colored Dress Cottons Silks Velvets White Goods Laces Nets Chiffons Embroideries Maline and Figured Mesh Veilings Table Linens Towelings Curtain Materials and Drapery Fabrics Squares of Velour, Tapestry and Reps—suitable for pillow covers and chair seats—also a small lot of Table Covers made from remnants.

Sale of Wall Paper

Bundle lots of Wall Paper—each bundle containing a sufficient quantity to do an "upper-third" treatment up to enough to cover the walls of small or large rooms.

Independent Ceiling Papers, 10c a roll.

Sale of Rugs

The Discontinued Patterns we have on hand of Crex, Waite and Japanese Grass Rugs, Scotch Art Rugs and many other kinds, too numerous to mention, will be placed on sale tomorrow morning—in the Basement—at radically reduced prices.

Ultra-Effects in Topcoats This Season as Shown in the Vandervoort Display

The Coats for Spring are especially rich in fabric and fashion and afford selection of a model that exactly meets the requirements of each individual.

The Colonial Period is represented by various Coaching Coats—with single and double capes, as well as huge draped pockets and cuffs. There are also high standing turnover collars of the Directoire period.

Trimmings are important features of these new models and among them are two-toned leather and silver and gold braids.

There are coats for all occasions of such fabrics as Bolivia cloth, taffeta, gabardine, moire, Gros de Londres, fine checks, plaids and English covert cloth. Prices $15 to $175

Cloth Coats at $15 to $80

Coats on smart English box-lines, in three-quarter and seven-eighths lengths, show effective touches of leather and silk, while others have single or double cape-collars.

All of the approved woolen fabrics and colors are embraced and the prices range from $15 to $80

Silk Coats at $32.50 to $175

The Silk Coats have been developed in rich taffetas, silk faille, moire, taffeta and satin and the full, flaring lines predominate.

Those for evening and afternoon wear are embroidery-trimmed, while the ones for the street are of plainer style. Prices $32.50 to $175

Third Floor.

Fashions for Misses in Wide Variety

New Apparel that is charmingly girlish is being shown in our Misses' Specialty Shop. Frocks in clever copies of Lucille and Jenny models and exclusive creations by American designers are here—developed in filmy Georgette and ultra-smart taffeta, in the approved shades for Spring.

Prices $39.50 to $69.50

Smartly Tailored Suits

Exquisite White Suits of Serge and Gabardine are shown in models equally well adapted to the young miss and small woman; also new models of Poiret twills, taffeta and Gros de Londres.

Prices $39.50 to $89.50

Third Floor

An Unusual Showing of Fine Blouses

The new Blouses bespeak daintiness and femininity in every line with their soft frills and effective collars.

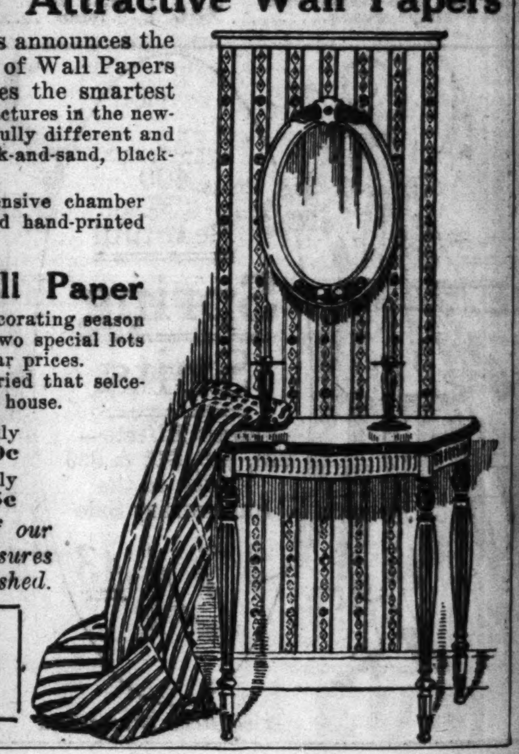
The latest style-developments are represented in the sleeves, collars and trimmings, as well as the unique color-combinations, that were originated in Paris.

A host of distinctive models that are especially appropriate for afternoon and reception wear are priced at $10 to $55

There is a charming variety of new models, fashioned from nets and Point d'Esprit, that have separate underbodice and the new frill-jabot. These are priced at $6.50 to $15

Third Floor

New and Unusually Attractive Wall Papers



Our Shop of Interior Decorations announces the arrival of a new and extensive line of Wall Papers for 1916. This collection embraces the smartest patterns of domestic and foreign manufactures in the newest color combinations, that are delightfully different and distinctively individual—including black-and-sand, black-and-gray and black-and-white.

The qualities range from the inexpensive chamber paper to the most elaborate Flocks and hand-printed parchments.

A Special Sale of Wall Paper

To encourage the advancing of the decorating season we are offering—for this week only—two special lots of Wall Papers at much less than regular prices.

The patterns and colorings are so varied that selections may be made for any room in the house.

Up to $1.25 Wall Papers, specially priced—on the wall—the roll 85c

A telephone call will bring one of our representatives to your home. Measures will be taken and estimates furnished.

We are also prepared to do all sorts of Tinting, Interior Painting, Frescoing and Wood-finishing—of the highest character.

Fourth Floor.

Modern Kitchen Equipment Is Essential

In refurnishing your home for the new season, do not overlook the necessity for having the proper equipment in your kitchen. Our Housefurnishing Shop is brimful of modern devices that facilitate housework.

Gas Ranges, Herrick Refrigerators and Cabinets

Gas Cooking Ranges of enameled steel have many advantages over Ranges in other styles. Not only are they attractive, but they are rustproof and impervious to moisture and grease, and, being a non-conductor, the oven retains its heat longer.

The enamel is guaranteed not to crack or scale and choice is given of black, blue and white. Prices $21.85 to $95.50

Kitchen Cabinets in a choice variety of styles and finishes, including blue, white, oak and natural—with all the latest improvements for convenience and sanitation. Prices $29 to $35

Herrick Refrigerators are recommended as having the most sanitary system for cooling perishable and delicate food and keeping it pure and sweet. Prices range from $15 to $115

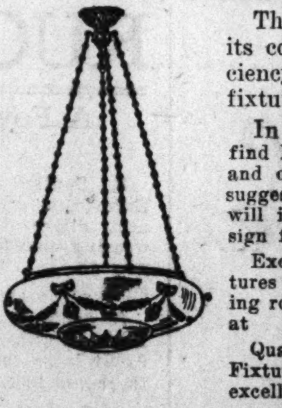
Artistic Lighting Fixtures for the Home



The attractiveness of your home, as well as its comforts, depends largely upon the efficiency and appropriateness of your lighting fixtures.

In our large and complete stock you will find Fixtures in distinctive styles for every room, and our experienced salespeople will give helpful suggestions—from the decorator's standpoint—that will insure your getting fixtures of a suited design for the rooms for which they are intended.

Exceptionally attractive are the Electric Fixtures with etched semi-indirect bowls—for living rooms, dining rooms and halls. They are priced at $12.50 to $35

Quaint Ivory-Enamel or White Candle-design Fixtures—for Colonial bedrooms—are shown in an excellent variety. Priced upward from $7.50

Bedroom Fixtures in the Sheffield-candle design, with butler's silver finish and having five lights range in price from $15 to $87.50

Large-size Fixtures in simple designs and with semi-indirect bowls of white glass and having three lights, are priced at $7.50

We are showing a very artistic Bungalow Shower, finished in dull brass, at the modest price of $6.50

We are exclusive representatives in Saint Louis for the Rogers Silverplate Company and are showing a most interesting collection of their Sconces and Fixtures.

The New "Sunlite" Bulb Gives the Best Light

The wonderful Holland-made "Sunlite" Electric Bulb is the most efficient unit for downward lighting in existence. The ratio of light beneath the bulb is 40 candle power, whereas that given by the ordinary Tungsten lamp is only 4 C. P. Special demonstration on the First Floor.

THE MASTERPIECE
MILLION DOLLA

The "Chevrolet" Five Passenger Touring Car, the Lowest Price Real Automobile Yet Produced

THE "CHEVROLET" is a real automobile. It has a quiet, powerful VALVE-IN-HEAD Motor. It has looks—it has style—it is beautifully finished and rides like a cradle.

THE "CHEVROLET" has the following novel and superior features not found in any other car built:

(1) Shock-absorbing duplex front springs; (2) Self-lubricating clutch collar; (3) Hub construction with triple-size bearings, preventing "wabble" of wheels and wear on tires; (4) Compound spur steering gear attached to body—the simplest and safest ever invented; (5) Unit power plant, carrying transmission on open brackets, which gives accessibility to clutch and allows removal of all transmission, if necessary, in twenty minutes. (Patents granted or applied for on the above).

Besides These Exclusive Features the "Chevrolet" Has

(1) Streamline front; (2) Crown fenders; (3) Cellular radiator; (4) Body with flush sides and concealed hinges; (5) Three-speed transmission; (6) Three-quarter floating axle; (7) Cantilever springs; (8) Ventilating windshield; (9) Mohair top; (10) The world-famous Zenith Carburetor.

Over 100,000 Sold for 1916

Performance—the there-and-back kind—the never-failing kind—depends on a car's motor, on its power. Around the most efficient power plant ever designed is built the

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They love it

Watch Children! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to consider their own health, consequently their bowels become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—ADV.

DRINK HABIT

RELIABLE HOME TREATMENT

We are in earnest when we ask you to give ORRINE a trial. You have nothing to risk and everything to gain, for your money will be returned if after a trial you fail to get results from ORRINE. This offer gives the wives and mothers of those who drink to excess an opportunity to try the ORRINE treatment. It is a very simple treatment, can be given in the home without publicity or loss of time from business. Can be given secretly without patient's knowledge.

ORRINE is prepared in two forms: No. 1, secret treatment, a powder; ORRINE No. 2, in pill form, for those who desire to take voluntary treatment. Costs only $1.00 a box. Ask for booklet.

came unbidden, came shackled and bleeding; came as serfs and slaves; came as humble burden bearers and cohorts of the builders of this great republic. Beginning then with the country in its infancy, the negro's subsequent loyalty has been concomitant with all the advance epochs of its history.

In 1620 when the fathers landed at Plymouth Rock, the negro was there. His blood was the first shed for American independence, and Attucks' death is more eloquent than words as a reminder of the white man's duty and obligation to the race who died first for the very freedom that he now enjoys. Not only was he the companion of the Caucasian in 1492, 1607, 1620, 1776 and other memorable days, but the negro was also a brave soldier in the war of 1812. He was no less pugnacious in the conflict with Mexico. During the stirring times of the great civil strife this man was equally loyal to his immediate neighbors. Thus the slave at the South in the suit of gray fought as heroically for the "Lost Cause" of America's Eden, as did his Northern kin in the garb of blue, for a reunited Union.

Was he not with Custer in the warfare with the red man? In the hostilities with Spain did he not excel in battle, and once more demonstrate to America his abiding allegiance to her grand old flag? Even today he faithfully protects your kindred at the South from the onslaughts of the treacherous Mexican.

The negro's every act, in every critical interval, has proven his love and loyalty to this, our common country. In the time of peace he has rejoiced with white America; he has wept when it was sad. He has sympathized when trouble came, and served in time of need. He is still a votary of all the militant interests of this far-famed Government and a devotee to its every cause.

Dear to the black man's heart are the hills and dales of old America—her laughing brooks and meandering streams. Sweet to his ears are the songs of her birds and the music from the harps of nature's solemn orchestra. Her flower gardens and orchards, her canyons and her falls, are equally beautiful to the humble negro's eyes. The balmy air, dazzling sun, and lazy moon affect him just the same and prompt him on and on. The natural beauty, picturesque scenes of this our lovely fatherland—all of its institutions, all of its avenues of prosperity fill the souls of black folk with equal gladness and gratitude. Even slavery, with its demoralizing influences, could not rob him of his faith in the land of the free and home of the brave.

> "No other race, or black or white,
> When bound as they were to the rack
> So seldom stooped to grieving.
> No other race when free again
> Forgot the past and proved them men
> So noble in forgiving."

From the landing of Christopher Columbus to the farce of Woodrow Wilson, no negro has been tried for treason, or punished for disloyalty. What a sublime record! We are today a race of Abou Ben Adhems, in constant, loyal service to our brothers in white, even if ingratitude be our recompense and broken promises our reward.

We have given American civilization Attucks and Douglass; Dunbar and Washington. The first gave his life for freedom; the second defended it with a matchless eloquence; the third emphasized it in poetry and verse. The fourth, rising from servile depths to heights of unusual power, teaching all men the nobleness of a trade, was one of the most eloquent exponents of that freedom that the world has ever seen. Yet in the long train of years, multiplying as we have, and varied and complex as we are, none of our progenitors have produced a Benedict Arnold, a Booth, a Guiteau or a Czolgos. Of the 50,000 here in St. Louis, they are among the most peaceable, most faithful, most loyal of all the 750,000, and for that vast majority to maltreat this defenseless minority, who are orphans and children of a people that have served the United States from its discovery, in 1492, to the triumphant days of 1916, would be a stain on the escutcheon of fair Missouri, and the basest of ingratitude. Unlike that element with the hyphen, who come from other shores, and create newer problems for society, labor and industry; who assassinate Presidents and hold Government in contempt; who wreck buildings with bombs, foment strikes, plot anarchy and ruin; whose alien ideas are incompatible with American ideals; we are already here, loyal black Americans, pillars of peace and respectors of law.

This being true, the negro, in turn, should enjoy every right with which the Constitution has endowed him.

In fairness and justice; in the name of right and liberty, our long devotion and ceaseless loyalty to the Stars and Stripes and its puissant people cry aloud our foremost objection to this needless measure, which would segregate as a menace, and huddle us together as if we were lepers, beasts and cast-asides.

We oppose segregation because it is unconstitutional, un-American, unjust and unfair. Because instead of relegating friction and race hatred, it aggravates it, disseminating prejudice, ill-feeling and strife.

Hence, it is not for social reasons that we voice objection, for as a race we subscribe to the doctrine as preached by the dead Tuskeegan: That in all things social, the negro can and will remain as separate and distinct as the fingers, but in the other things economical, industrial and the like, we should be one as the hand.

We are not clamoring for, nor making advances toward, an equal social plane, in our opposition to this nefarious proposal, neither do we wish to sever in the least the proud fabrics interweaving the social web of Caucasian society. We rather prefer to let the white man's social strain flow on and on in its age-honored grandeur, for in time it will lose itself in the broader ocean of a universal brotherhood. What the negro really seeks is an equal opportunity in the race of life—absolute perfection in his own ranks. From the common fountain of justice, peace and right he would drink its exhilarating waters until his color ceases to be the harbinger of national discord, an ever present symbol of trouble and unrest.

We oppose segregation because in every city in the country the negro "segregates" himself, and here in St. Louis the unwritten law applying to this question has not lost any of its effectiveness, nor is it threatened. Therefore, no occasion arises for reading into statutory law such uncalled for and unnecessary statutes.

We are opposed to it because the wealth of the city and nation is controlled by the dominant race, and most assuredly we cannot buy property unless that race sells; nor can we rent that property without the consent of that powerful oligarchy. Thus before we can hold, occupy or possess real estate anywhere we must do it with the man higher up, as the other contracting agency.

Finally, we are opposed to segregation because investigation will prove, contrary to the contention of the pro-segregationists, that negroes do not depreciate property values, for when property occupied by them seemingly "runs down," it is not because the rentee mutilates it, but because the owner does not keep it in repair. Father Time "runs down" all neighborhoods, and unfortunately for the negro, Time has already done its deadly work when the places are given over to them. And what seems an evil that goes with him in the occupancy of depends largely on the sufferer's ability to upbuild a weakened system and thus hasten a return of natural functioning throughout the body.

In this effort much depends on the remedial value of fresh air—night and day—and rest and good food. The patient should refrain from work that overtaxes, and all sanitary precautions should be taken. These common-sense measures are approved by doctors everywhere, but they do not always achieve the desired results unless aided by proper medication. It is here that Eckman's Alterative has evidenced its worth, for in many cases of tuberculosis it has effected lasting benefit.

Numerous cases of apparent recovery are recorded in its favor. In any event, its use is not attended with possible harm, since it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs. At your druggist's or direct from Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia.

TO STOP BAD COUGH

SOOTH DRY, IRRITATED THROAT WITH PARMINT SYRUP. SAYS THIS OLD FASHIONED COUGH REMEDY IS BEST

We are told that the old-time remedies are best and invariably contain less harmful yet better medicine than those which are in use today. This being so, undoubtedly the following old-fashioned recipe, which is quick acting, will be welcomed by many, as there seems to be a regular epidemic of coughs at the present time. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce Parmint (double strength), take this home and add to it a quarter pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils should open, air passages of your head should clear and your breathing become easy. Parmint syrup is pleasant to take, easy to prepare and costs little. Every person who has a stubborn cough, hard cold or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.—ADV.

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Breathe Freely! Clears Stuffed-up, Inflamed Nose and Head and Stops Catarrhal Discharge. Cures Dull Headache.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed, nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith — just once — in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—ADV.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED, ACHING FEET

Instant Relief for Sore, Tender, Sweaty Swollen, Calloused Feet and Corns

People who are forced to stand on their feet all day know what sore, tender, sweaty, burning feet mean. They use "TIZ," and "TIZ" cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. "TIZ" is the only remedy in the world that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet and cause tender, sore, tired, aching feet. It instantly stops the pain in corns, callouses and bunions. It's simply glorious. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel after using "TIZ." You'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't tighten and hurt your feet.

Get a 25-cent box of "TIZ" now from any druggist, department or general store. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.—ADV.

"Duffy's Excellent for Colds"

MRS. M. LIFKA.

Lack of nutrition is one of the common conditions preceding coughs and colds. The value of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey in preventing and relieving coughs and colds has been established on many occasions. Mrs. Lifka has used Duffy's for years and recently wrote:

"Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has been used in my family for years. I find it an excellent remedy for coughs and colds and it has helped me greatly."—Mrs. M. Lifka, 473 Clinton Avenue, West Hoboken, N. J.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

helps keep the body in good general health because it is a predigested liquid food, requiring little effort of the digestive organs, palatable and of pleasing odor, it is acceptable to the most delicate stomach when other foods are rejected. Taken as directed, it aids digestion, helps repair wasted tissues of the body, and adds to the power of endurance. That's why it invariably gives the system power to throw off and resist severe coughs, colds, grip, catarrh, bronchitis and lung troubles.

"Get Duffy's and Keep Well."

NOTE Get Duffy's from your local druggist, grocer or dealer. $1.00 per bottle. If he cannot supply you, write us. Send for useful household booklet free.

DR. CHARLES HENRY PHILLIPS JR.

Segregation in Pennsylvania.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why do the Republicans oppose segregation?

I lived for five years in a Pennsylvania town (Chambersburg) where it worked nicely. The colored folk were happy and contented in their own community, with their own churches and neighborhood. Some of the timid young wives had trouble inducing their employes to live upon the premises, all preferring to spend their spare time among their own people.

A FRIEND OF THE COLORED FOLK,
F. O.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Republic of Feb. 24 produces a statement by Rev. Robert Carson of 3509 Bernard street, in which he advocates segregation.

It seems to me that the only excuse he has for being in such favor of segregation is that he opened a grocery store and made a failure in his undertaking. It is not a surprise to me that all such negroes should make a failure at anything they undertake. According to his ideas, if anyone or any body of people would listen to such ideas as my colored brother has, we would all be bound back into the shackles of slavery.

A race man in my estimation never undertakes to push his fellow-man back into the gutter of inferiority, but seeks an avenue in life wherein he can push his race in to progress and prosperity. It seems to me that Mr. Carson has nothing in mind but his own welfare. He seemingly cares nothing for the welfare and uplift of his race.

In my estimation a man of his ideas is detrimental to the negro. I am sorry that he holds his race responsible for his failures. I have been in business in nine different cities in the United States. Some of my undertakings in the business world were successful and others were failures, but I have not and hope I will never be narrow-minded enough to think that my people—the people I love—are responsible for anything I have ever undertaken.

I am glad that the race as a whole does not think as he. If this were the case it would not be long before we would be a lost race and back into the bonds of slavery. Mr. Carson has forgotten that we were brought to this country against our desires by the very same people that are now trying to segregate us; and he has also forgotten that we serve the same God that he or any other man serves. We fight for the same American flag that any other man in this country fights for and we are loyal, law-abiding American citizens and love our country. Under the circumstances I cannot see how Mr. Carson feels that segregation is a good thing for his people. He should turn his face to the dark ages of shame and never attempt to look another negro in the eye.

J. J. MATTJOY,

From a Colored Teacher.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I am writing to express to you my personal thankfulness for the very wise, courageous, manly manner in which you are defending the manhood-rights of the colored people of St. Louis and the whole country. As a people, we are fortunate indeed in having our cause in the matter of segregation so effectively defended by a great and powerful daily paper like the Post-Dispatch.

I am a school teacher of Missouri of 26 years' experience.

J. W. DAMEL.
Jefferson City, Mo.

Constitutional or Unconstitutional.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial of 19th inst. under caption "Un-American; Un-Constitutional," actuates me to express to you my views on the subject of segregation, and my disagreement with you and the Mayor, and Mr. Werner and Mr. Nagel, and others, who profess to be so much in favor of the negro in this matter.

A great deal is said of our colored citizens' rights under our Constitution, and that it would be depriving him of his full rights of citizenship to segregate him. Is it possible that yourself and the Mayor, and Mr. Werner and Mr. Nagel want to grant to the negro more consideration than to the white citizens? And do you claim that under our Constitution, the whites are required to sacrifice their property or allow it to be confiscated, simply because such a segregation ordinance is alleged to deprive the negro of exercising his full constitutional right of citizenship when he desires to invade localities where other negroes do not reside or there is not even a small per cent of the residents negroes? Do you mean to say that the white citizen must absolutely allow his property to be damaged, depreciated or confiscated without raising his voice in opposition or in his own defense, simply because the Constiution grants to all citizens "equal rights?" Being a colored citizen does not, and of course should not, under the strict interpretation of the law, eliminate a single privilege of American citizenship; nor does it carry with it any special privileges that we have ever heard of. The segregation ordinances do not take away from the negro a single privilege that he now enjoys, but they simply create "restricted districts" in which the property and homes of the white citizens shall be conserved and protected.

It is also said that segregation will create race prejudice, hatred, riots, etc. Can you conceive of anything that would be more conducive to just such conditions than to have a lot of negro families invade a heretofore white resident district? On the other hand, I contend that such conditions do not obtain in the slightest degree, if the two races do not mix through the unwarranted social ambitions on the part of the one against the strong opposition of the other. The separate coach law has been held by the Supreme Court of the United States to be constitutional and it is hard to conceive on what grounds the same court could hold that the proposed ordinance would be unconstiutional.

GEORGE STONER.

Striking Down the Weaker Brother.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The pathetic side of the proposition to segregate the negroes, to my mind, is that it strikes down the ones who

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others, who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.—Advertisement.

are trying to rise. This ordinance is not aimed at the worthless criminal negro of the downtown districts, but at those who are trying to buy homes in respectable neighborhoods.

It says to every negro, good and bad, "You are unworthy of becoming a good citizen, and we shall see that you are not permitted to become worthy."

Which is better, to encourage these people to buy property and become self-supporting, upright citizens, or to degrade them into outlaws, at least to making them enemies of our city and country.

A great cosmopolitan city cannot afford to be partial toward its children. Every one should share all of its advantages equally, just as every one should be impressed with his duty to do his share toward its upkeep.

Concede every argument advanced in favor of segregation, and the fact remains that we white people are more to blame for these conditions than the negro. We brought the negro to this land; we enslaved him for profit; we freed him. We have educated his children; our white real estate men sold him property in white neighborhoods. The money which they have paid for their property is hard-earned coin. A negro has not the opportunities to make large sums of money by stock manipulations, squeeze outs and other big steals which we white people enjoy.

You say it may become my happy lot to live next door to a negro. My reply is that I would rather live next door to a negro whose general moral trend is upward, than next to a white railroad branch manipulator, a wife-beater or tin-can banker.

I feel that we should defeat this proposed ordinance because it is morally, legally and civically wrong. It is dead wrong.

L. V. STONECIPHER.

The Negro as Soldier and Citizen.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In last night's Post-Dispatch I noticed an article from George B. Jones of 4237 Cottage avenue, wherein he states that the "blood of loyal negro soldiers has dyed the battlefields of our country from the Revolutionary War down." As a descendant of a Revolutionary soldier and a student of history, I am wondering what battlefields they fought or when, until '63, they were slaves, not allowed to carry arms under any circumstances.

Well do I remember the question raised in the closing part of the war, Would the colored man fight if he was armed? And while quoting history, do not forget it was a negro guide, trusted implicitly by Union officers, that betrayed the gallant Dahlgren to his death while on his way to co-operate with Gen. Kilpatrick in his raid around Richmond to liberate the Union prisoners confined in Libby Prison.

If the negro has so much civic pride, one would think he would be glad to have a section to himself, making his part of the city reflect that pride. Instead, look at any section they inhabit. Look at what a few years ago was beautiful Pine street. I recall one instance in particular. A family who owned a stately home in the 3400 block was loathe to leave until the negro families who moved near there made life intolerable by their insolence and imposing on the little girl in the family whenever she went on the street. Property was so depreciated they could not sell to buy elsewhere, so had to just leave it and rent.

Does the city owe our white citizens any consideration, or does it not?

Nor is Pine, beautiful Pine as it was, the only one. There is Lawton, Locust, Washington, West Belle place, Morgan, Cook, Page, Finney, in fact wherever they have gone, has the blight fallen!

WHITE CITIZEN.

True to American Ideals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I do not think I could choose a more appropriate occasion than Washington's birthday to thank you for the service you render the people of this city and country every day of the year. St. Louis is to be congratulated upon having a metropolitan newspaper, like the Post-Dispatch. True to American ideals always, clinging to the tenets enunciated by that great man, Mr. Pulitzer, who founded it.

There is nothing of the hyphen in your Americanism. In your columns is always found all the newest news, the best advertisements and editorials that fairly sparkle with truth. The Post-Dispatch is a paper with a mission and a purpose. You believe and teach that all the good things of America are good for all who love American principles and strive to maintain them. You would not cloes the gate of opportunity to any man or nation. Not only is the Post-Dispatch a staunch supporter of all that is best in American ideals, but you frequently in your editorial columns go farther, and almost proclaim as your position that of the champion of the noble and undying characteristics of the lowly Nazarene.

I, as a minister, wish to thank you for your notable, correct and earnest advocacy of decency, law and order—and also for your advocacy of justice and fair play toward our coolred population. I am glad that you decry the efforts of misguided men to stir up race hatred in this city against the better class of our colored population. There is no call for this legislation whatever, because it is iniquitous, and can but injure the good name of our city. Again thanking you, I beg to remain,

S. A. MOSEBY.

The White Man's Ruined Home.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have often admired the stand taken by the Post-Dispatch on many current questions, but I regret to see that it is on the wrong side of the segregation matter.

Instead of going into glittering generalities about segregation why not get down to the facts? Why not send out and investigate the localities that have been ruined because of the lack of a segregation ordinance? "It is a condition and not a theory that confronts us." Take West Belle place, where I lived for 19 years, one time a beautiful residence street, on which were many valuable homes, some occupied by prominent people, and see how the influx of colored people has depreciated the property there from 50 to 75 per cent, absolutely and ruthlessly forcing people out of their homes. And that is only one out of many instances in the city.

I am a friend of the colored man, but why should I not favor a law that is not unfair to him, but which will prevent him, or some villainous real estate agent through him, from driving me away from my home? Suppose, Mr. Editor, that tomorrow two colored families moved into houses on each side of the one you live in, how long would it be before you, and all of your staff of editors, would be scurrying to the polls to vote for segregation? (Call attention of your cartoonist to this).

In brief, any voter familiar with conditions in this city in this respect, or who can become so with a little investigation, and who does not vote in favor of segregation, is one utterly regardless of what is fair and just for both the white and the colored race.

I. M. WRIGHT.

It Will Be Up to the Landlord.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorials have been favoring the negro. You may be right, but to give us white folks a show, please tell us through the columns of your valuable paper what the home-owner can do to protect his property should segregation fail to carry. You have mentioned that segregation will cause bitter race feeling. This won't be a circumstance to the trouble that will come if segregation is defeated, and the negro takes it as an invitation to move where he likes, and this surely is the thing the negro will do. Think it over.

A TAXPAYER AND PROPERTY OWNER.

Landlords Neglect Negro Tenements.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I would like to ask Mrs. John Clemens Brown why it is that she and many others blame the negroes for the condition of Fairfax avenue and other negro districts. It is the fault of the owner and real estate agents that the property occupied by negroes is in such a bad condition. Why not blame the owners for renting their houses to negros in these so-called nice neighborhoods? I am sure the negroes could not move in these places unless the owners wanted them to. The agents will stretch a big sign upon the houses, and have them printed in the largest letters that they can: "For Colored." Then, naturally, the negro seeing a nice house and (like all other races of people), he tries to have a respectable home to live in. But just as soon as the negroes move in the rent is increased, and the agents and owners quit making repairs, and if they do make any they don't

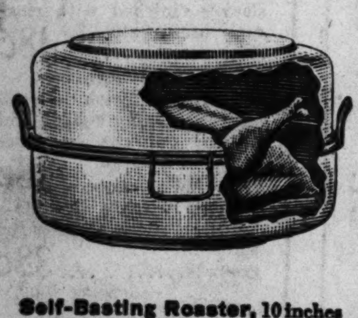
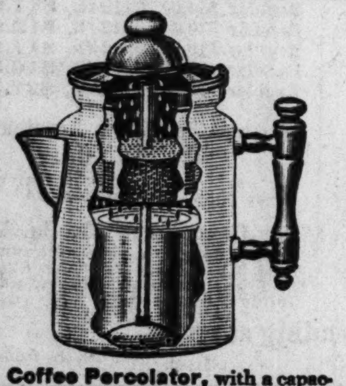
Nation-Wide Factory Distribution of High-Grade Aluminum Ware for Advertising Purposes

Ten Thousand Homes to Be Benefited by This Great Expenditure—One of the Most Remarkable Offers Ever Made in the History of the Business World

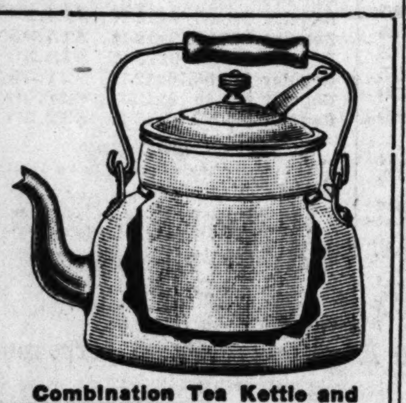
Your home can be brought within the reach of this great distribution if you will act quickly. The positive limit is ten thousand of these aluminum sets—the three pieces exactly as shown below—the pieces you have been wanting to complete your kitchen equipment



Self-Basting Roaster, 10 inches in diameter. The top fits tightly over the bottom, holding in the steam which at all times fully surrounds the meat, automatically basting it and keeping the natural flavor in the roast. The two parts of the roaster are made to serve many other purposes when used separately.



Coffee Percolator, with a capacity of 2 quarts, or 8 cups. Everybody knows that perfect coffee can be made only in a percolator. The water as it boils rises and then slowly percolates through the coffee at a temperature just below the boiling point, thus extracting only the delicious flavor of the berry, and producing an amber fluid free from sediment.



Combination Tea Kettle and Double Boiler. The newest time and fuel saver. The tea kettle has a capacity of 6 quarts. The inset compartment is used as a double boiler for cooking cereals of all kinds, warming up soups, stews, etc., and steaming puddings and other foods. The kettle can be used with or without the inset.

This entire set is made of high-grade, heavy gauge aluminum. No finer finished ware ever left the works.

When these ten thousand sets are placed in ten thousand homes, ten thousand housekeepers will be telling their neighbors of the victorious factory-shipment idea of the Quaker Valley—and that is the purpose of the gigantic advertising campaign we have entered upon. When you and your neighbors learn that you can get all your home furnishings direct from the factory at prices much lower than those of retail stores; when you are made to feel free to return at our expense, anything that does not exactly please you; when the same credit accommodations are extended to you as to a merchant—then you will be regular Quaker Valley customers; and that is why we are making the following remarkable offer on this complete, high-grade aluminum set.

Simply sign the coupon at the right, and return it to us AT ONCE. Send no money with the coupon. We will ship the set by express or parcel post direct from the factory to your home. If pleased and delighted, remit $1 a month till the special get-acquainted price of $6.95 is paid; otherwise return within 30 days at our expense.

COUPON

If this coupon reaches you in time, ship the three-piece aluminum set direct from the factory to my home. I am to pay nothing but the express charges on arrival. I am to use the set for thirty days, and if I am pleased and delighted, I will then remit $1 a month till the special factory-to-me price of $6.95 is paid; otherwise will return at your expense.

"Winter Coughs and Colds Call for a Tonic!

They show that the system is being weakened by a congestion of the breathing apparatus. This congestion in the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs decreases the supply of oxygen to the blood, gives off poisons that are absorbed by the blood, and taxes the other organs with increased work.

Then your body needs help. It needs to be toned up to do the extra work. The tonic used should also have a direct effect on those congested membranes.

PERUNA is That Tonic—

Its effect upon the membranes is to relieve the congestion, banish the catarrhal symptoms, invigorate the digestion and circulation, and thus enable the system to rid itself of all the inflamed condition known as cold.

Because a cold is nothing less than acute catarrh and because, in addition to its tonic effects, Peruna is a reliable remedy for catarrh, its use in colds and coughs is more effective than any other remedy yet offered. This fact is amply proved by the thousands who have found relief, by the forty-four years of success, and by the many thousands of homes that regard Peruna as the best family remedy.

You will understand why when you use it yourself.

Peruna may be obtained in tablet form for convenience, and carried with you everywhere.

The Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio

Mrs. Jane Gift, Athens, Ohio, R. D. 1, says: "I think I would have been dead long ago if it hadn't been for Peruna. Six years ago I had the grip very bad. I grew worse in spite of doctors and other remedies. I saw an account of a woman who had been cured of grip by Peruna. My husband got some Peruna and improvement began in a very short time. I continued to use it until I was entirely well."

Mr. C. Happy, of Hardin, Ray Co., Missouri, " took a very bad cold and had la grippe last February," he says. "I took three bottles of Peruna and it cured me."

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer all the time with their eyes simply because they don't know what to do. They know a home remedy for every other ill, but none for their eyes. They abuse their eyes and neglect them, the trouble being too slight to drive them to an eye specialist. Finally they may go to some cheap store and get glasses they do not need, or which after being worn two or three months do their eyes more harm than good.

Here is a simple prescription for such cases: 5 grains optona dissolved in 2 ounces of water; use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This makes a healing, cooling, soothing lotion that should be used daily to cleanse, strengthen and preserve the eyes. It sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation. Weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes are greatly benefited by its use.

Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which can injure the most sensitive eyes of infant or aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription; any physician who knows the formula will tell you it is absolutely harmless.—ADV

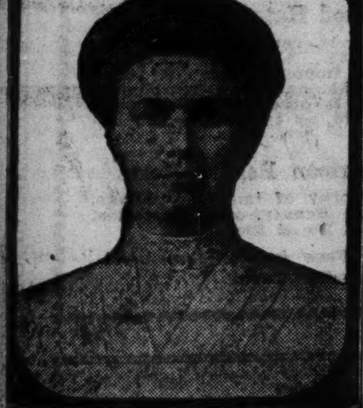
This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 10 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.



Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence, to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

amount to anything, so that is how the nice neighborhoods get to be "the most dilapidated place you could find," like Fairfax avenue. It is a sad thing that the negro (who is born under the American flag, and who has won honors for it), is such a menace to the citizens of St. Louis.

If this country should become involved in the great world-wide war, would the negro still be a menace? No, he would be an American citizen. Now he is an American subject.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Southern Born Negro Woman's View.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I notice in today's issue of the Globe-Democrat an editorial on the segregation question, wherein occurs this statement: "Nature herself seems to have raised barriers that no law can throw down." This is part of a statement referring to amalgamation of the white and black races.

Now, Mr. Editor, I was born in the South, in the historic little town of Natchez, Miss. My maternal grandfather was a free negro, having purchased his home there in 1834. My father's father was his master and I played with more colored children who were white in appearance than any other type. A welfare organization down there for the protection of the white race, to preserve it from nature's barriers mobilized and segregated us on cars, public places, etc. Now, Mr. Editor, if the white people need so much legislation and organization to paralyze our aggressiveness in tearing down "nature's barriers," are we really as stupid and obnoxious as you paint us? Did we do that jumping of the boundary lines? If we did our womanhood now is free—we are no longer slaves. We realize what virtue is and what it means and we are not a menace to the unprotected and unsuspecting whites in the South. Now can't 500,000 white people in St. Louis manage the aspirations of 40,000 negroes and prevent their "star" of civilization from a too dangerous westward course by any other means than to strike at their American citizenship and rights guaranteed by the Constitution? If not, too bad, too bad, that you must verily throttle the pernicious negro and paralyze what few liberties are left because "nature herself has set up boundaries which no laws can throw down."

The negro has behaved nicely in the face of all kinds of proscriptions and infringements. He hasn't poisoned your soup, nor planted any dynamite under your porch, and I vow he has no designs whatever to invade your social domains. We have our own social stratas, social climbers, social functions, our own ideals of beauty which we feel are inferior to none other. We find life interesting among ourselves. We have music, the artistic temperament, the divorce suit, and, in fact, all the blessings which follow the wake of civilization.

I believe if these nervous folks in the welfare organization could be disillusioned of the idea that some negroes are harboring several thousand dollars to buy that Tower Grove residence and harboring evil designs to live among them they would relax their strenuous efforts to sidetrack him in the pursuit of peace and prosperity.

A COLORED CITIZEN.

A Political Scheme.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Since it is the poor white man and the negro who are aimed at in the segregation bill, it looks like class legislation; as the above-mentioned men are American citizens who must live somewhere, either in a palace or hovel, according to the size of his purse, it is my humble opinion that the city has no legal right to dictate to them where they shall or shall not live; and no right to endeavor to deplete the city treasury to the extent of about $75,000 for a measure which some few of them (the Board of Aldermen) knew, down deep in their hearts, would not stand for a moment in the State Supreme Court. But nothing risked, nothing won, is the gamblers' motto. The politician's motto being win by hook or crook.

The negro of today is unlike the negro back in the 60's. Today they are educated, as is evidenced from the fact that they, and only they, brought the segregation case to the Supreme Court of the State. This fact goes to show that the negro is wise, intelligent and patriotic; and if given an opportunity, are capable of governing themselves, which I believe they would much rather be doing than living among white men, like the men who originated and passed the segregation bill. This is the sort of men that have been harping to the negro for more than 50 years about all that they have done for the negro, when in reality they did nothing for him; but they have made a "political tool" of him, hounding him from post to pillar for his vote (not his company). His vote secured in the ballot box, he gets a pleasant smile, but no further thought is given him until the next election, when his trail is again taken up. But, ah! This time it leads to an unkept cemetery, where "Sam" was buried, having died from starvation in a land of plenty. The same can be said of the poor white man, who goes to the polls with good intentions, but casts his ballot against his own interests and those of others, owing to the fact that he had been misled.

Preparedness is now a grand and patriotic issue, full of sound logic, as the world will agree. Then, why not you and I prepare for an emergency? Why not get together; get busy; as the emergency is now at hand. It is up to the poor white man, the negro and the poor taxpayers of St. Louis to show a little of their authority by defeating the segregation bill.

A TAXPAYER.

A Campaign of Prejudice.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I am glad to see the Post-Dispatch on the side of right and justice on the "segregation" question.

The Jews 1916 years ago used to be as bitter against the Samaritans, and our Savior, a Jew, was a friend of the Samaritans. This segregation business was only started by ignorance and prejudice.

I cannot see how anyone can call himself a Christian and vote for segregation.

"Undigested food, unless promptly eliminated, ferments in the intestines and is absorbed into the blood, poisoning the system"

—Doctors C. E. and L. T. de M. Sajous, in their Cylcopædia of Practical Medicine.

Regular, daily, bowel action does not necessarily indicate complete and sufficient elimination. And waste substance that remains in the intestines is certain to be absorbed into the blood.

At regular intervals flushing of the system with PLUTO Water is necessary to flush away this retained poisonous material. And PLUTO Water, by its antiseptic' stimulating properties, restores health and normal activity to the entire digestive and eliminative system.

PLUTO Water, America's Physic, is bottled at French Lick Springs and for sale at your druggist's your club, hotels, cafes and on trains. Remember, there is only one Pluto. Look for the little red devil on every bottle—it is there for your protection.

(Toilet Tips)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone.—ADV.

U. S. OPENS WAY FOR DISCUSSION OF DEFENSIVE ARMS

State Department Willing to Negotiate With Germany if Assured That American Citizens Will Not Be Imperiled During Parley.

Leaders in Congress Less Inclined to Demand Action on Resolutions—"Victory in Publicity," Gore Says.

Italy Makes First Reply to Armed Ship Suggestion of Lansing—Answer Said to Be Argumentative.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Secretary Lansing indicated today that the United States was prepared under certain circumstances to discuss with the German Government what may properly be regarded as defensive armament for merchant ships. In no event, however, according to authoritative information tonight, will the United States be a party to such negotiations unless it is assured that the lives of American citizens aboard ships armed for defensive purposes will not be endangered during the course of discussion.

Only three days remain before German and Austrian submarine commanders will be instructed to treat armed merchant ships as war vessels. There was no indication today that issuance of the order announced in formal notifications from the Central Powers for Feb. 29 would be postponed, although it was admitted that a postponement would not come as a surprise.

Congress Situation Quieter.

Leaders in both houses of Congress, who for several days have agitated passage of a resolution warning Americans not to travel on armed ships, seemed convinced tonight that no such measure could be put through at present. Senator Gore, who has such a resolution pending, issued a statement saying that while he still favored a warning he believed the objects sought by his resolution already had been accomplished through public discussion.

Representative McLemore, whose warning resolution in the House has been kept from coming up by administration leaders, said he was content to wait until the President and Secretary Lansing should have opportunity to try out their policy of asserting determinedly the right of travel on ships bearing arms.

Administration officials still were awaiting the receipt of the appendices to the latest German memorandum on the subject, which contain what is alleged to be a copy of confidential instructions given to British sea captains. If this document contains what the German Government claims, it is said to be probable inquiries may be addressed to Great Britain on the subject. The British Government some time ago assured the United States that its merchant ships would not operate offensively.

Germany in its memorandum gives as one of the cardinal reasons for its determination to sink armed merchant ships of her enemies without warning the fact that German submarines have been fired upon repeatedly by merchantmen which apparently were engaged in peaceful pursuits of commerce.

Acts in Retaliation.

A high official of the State Department questioned about this contention gave it as his opinion that there might in certain cases be justification for one belligerent committing acts in retaliation for violations of international law committed by an enemy. It was made plain that the department will not make any decision in this connection until it has had opportunity to carefully inspect appendices to the German memorandum.

It also was indicated at the State Department today that Germany by recent acts had shown a disposition to change her original position in regard to the right of merchant ships to carry defensive armament. Originally the Berlin Government denied that it was legal for merchant ships to arm at all. Now some officials here consider that Germany appears willing to admit that armament is legal if purely defensive. In other words, it is believed the German Government actually is attempting to change the rules rather than the law.

Should the subject be opened up for discussion the State Department may, it was said, be willing to admit that there should be some regulation regarding the size and use of defensive armament supplementary to the instructions to port authorities issued Sept. 9, 1915, which permit merchant ships to clear from American ports provided they are to carry no more than two guns mounted aft of not more than six-inch caliber. As a matter of fact, no merchant ships ever have come into American waters with the maximum of armament provided for. Indications that this question would be opened for discussion resulted from publication of confiden-

COLONEL CALLS PACIFISTS 'EMOTIONAL PHILANTHROPISTS'

Thinks of New One to Call Ford and His Kind in Addressing American Sociological Society.

The Colonel—there is only one real The Colonel, of course—inventor of rare expletives and picturesque epithets, has thought up a new one to call the Henry Fords and other distinguished pacifists who do not subscribe to the Oyster Bay dogmas on preparedness. It is "Emotional Philanthropists."

The Colonel recently addressed the members of the American Sociological Society and a complete account of his speech reached St. Louis yesterday in the official report of the proceedings. The topic assigned him was "War and Militarism in Relation to Moral and Social Values."

The gist of his argument was that it would be about as sensible to abolish the police force of a large city and trust to ethical influences to keep the people straight as for a decent, civilized nation to refuse to maintan sufficient military power to keep its neighbors in their proper place.

"Timid and lazy men," he said, "men absorbed in money-getting, men absorbed in ease and luxury, and all soft and slothful people naturally hail with delight anybody who will give them high-sounding names behind which to cloak their unwillingness to run risks or to toil and endure. Emotional philanthropists to whom thinking is a distasteful form of mental exercise enthusiastically champion this attitude."

WORK OF ARTIST WHO WENT INSANE SELLS FOR $20,000

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Street boys in New York fought over a shower of money tossed by a man they supposed was an intoxicated millionaire. The man was later sent to an insane asylum. He was not a millionaire, but a poor artist, who went insane from grief because he could not make enough money to support his wife and family. The $200 that he threw away on the street was the price he received for the best effort of his life. This happened a few years ago.

Not far from the corner where the incident happened the same masterpiece was sold this week to the Toledo Museum of Art at the Cathelina Lambert sale for $20,000. This was the largest sum ever paid for the work of an American artist. The picture was "Moonlight" by Ralph Blacklock.

Ralph Blacklock is still in an asylum and his wife and family are still in want. Blacklock is 70 and his wife but a few years younger.

NAVY OFFICIALS FAVOR 16-INCH GUNS ON NEW SHIPS

Experimental Firing and European War Lessons Show Need for Larger Type.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Experimental long range firing by the Atlantic fleet and information about naval battles in the European war virtually have convinced the Navy Department that battleships to be authorized this year should carry 10 16-inch guns each, instead of 12 14-inch weapons aboard ships of the Pennsylvania and California class now built or building.

Details of gunnery are confidential, but it became known tonight that the next target practice of the fleet will be held at ranges up to 18,000 yards because of the lessons taught by the battle between German and British battle cruisers in the North Sea, where 17,000-yard shots scored hits.

INFANT SON VISITS MIKADO

Child, Born in December, Carried to Palace First Time With Pomp.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Jan. 25.—Prince Sumi, the infant son of the Emperor, who was born last December, paid his first visit to his imperial parent yesterday. With the sword of protection presented to him on his birth a little over a month ago, the infant, borne in the arms of a maid, was driven to the palace with great pomp and ceremony.

A solemn ceremony was held before the imperial shrines. Subsequently the child was borne into the apartments of his father. He was embraced by the Mikado, who showed great pleasure that his boy had grown so big and healthy looking and who proceeded to ask many questions of the maids in charge.

BRIDE CAUSES HIS ARREST, CLEARS UP 2 DISAPPEARANCES

Clifford Burton Reported Missing to Police Is Being Held in Kansas City.

FORMER BANK CASHIER

Howard E. Ragsdale Also Left Wife and Child in Omega, Ga.

Two disappearance mysteries were cleared, and an apparent case of bigamy was revealed, when Howard Enoch Ragsdale, 28 years old, a former bank cashier of Omega, Ga., who was more recently known as Clifford Burton of 4200 Flad avenue, St. Louis, was arrested last night in Kansas City.

The arrest was made possible by information furnished by the woman who supposed herself to be Mrs. Burton, and who says she was married to the so-called Burton in her home town, Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 19. She is still at the Flad avenue address.

Ragsdale departed from his Georgia home on New Year's Eve, leaving a wife and child behind, and taking $1500 of the bank's funds, according to bank officials, who say they later found a $5000 shortage in his accounts. He was traced to Atlanta, but there the trail was lost.

Five days later, in Hot Springs, a man who gave his name as Clifford Burton formed the acquaintance of Mrs. Anna Perry, a young widow, daughter of August Treske of Hot Springs. He told her he was a broker, and that he had made a fortune in speculation. He hurried the young woman into a marriage with him, against her father's advice, and the wedding took place two weeks after their first meeting. They arrived in St. Louis Jan. 22, and went to the Flad avenue house.

Feared He Had Killed Self.

"Burton" told his wife that he was going into the brokerage business with a Fourth street concern. He opened a small account there, and lost his investment, which was $345. He told his wife, however, that he had lost from $15,000 to $20,000, and after several days of moping around the house, he left Thursday, Feb. 17, taking his revolver with him. When he did not return at night, his wife reported his absence to the police, saying she feared he had killed himself.

The wife was left almost penniless, and in searching "Burton's" effects, she found a key ring furnished by a life insurance company, which bore the number of his policy. She wrote to the company for information, and received a reply stating that the policy was that of Howard E. Ragsdale of Omega, Ga.

Detective Called on Her.

On the same day that she got this letter, the now thoroughly perplexed wife received a visit from a man connected with the St. Louis office of the Pinkerton Detective Agency. He was sent to inquire about the missing "Burton," on the chance that he might be Ragsdale or some one else for whom the Pinkertons are looking. The detective agency represents the bonding company which was security on Ragsdale's bond as cashier.

The young woman turned over to the private detective her letter from the insurance company. When she got a card Wednesday, from 'Burton" in Kansas City, asking that she send him his overcoat, she told the detective agency. At the detectives' advice, she answered the card, and succeeded in getting his address, which was the Louvain Hotel. The detectives caught Ragsdale at 8 o'clock last night, according to a dispatch.

Says She Will Prosecute.

The wife here said she would prosecut the prisoner on a bigamy charge. This charge would have to be made in Arkansas, and it may have to be decided by Gov. Major whether Ragsdale shall be sent to Hot Springs to stand trial for bigamy, or to Georgia to be tried fo. embezzlement.

"Burton" told his second wife, she says, that he had had a wife and child, who died two years ago. He told her his family lived in Lake Charles, La., and was wealthy.

COLLEGE GIRLS SHOULD WORRY ABOUT THE WAR'S DIGNITARIES

Sixteen Who Are Radcliffe Students Never Heard of the Most of Them.

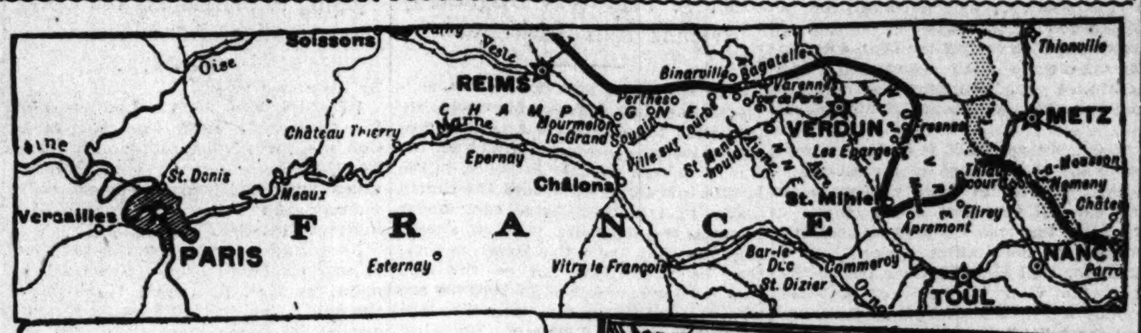
CAMBRIDGE, Feb. 26.—An examination to determine whether Radcliffe girls need a course in current events has just been completed with startling results. Sixteen girls, four from each class, were asked questions dealing with names and places connected with the war.

The name of Secretary Lansing may be a household word, but two of the 16 never heard of him. Three had a hazy idea that he was Secretary of War.

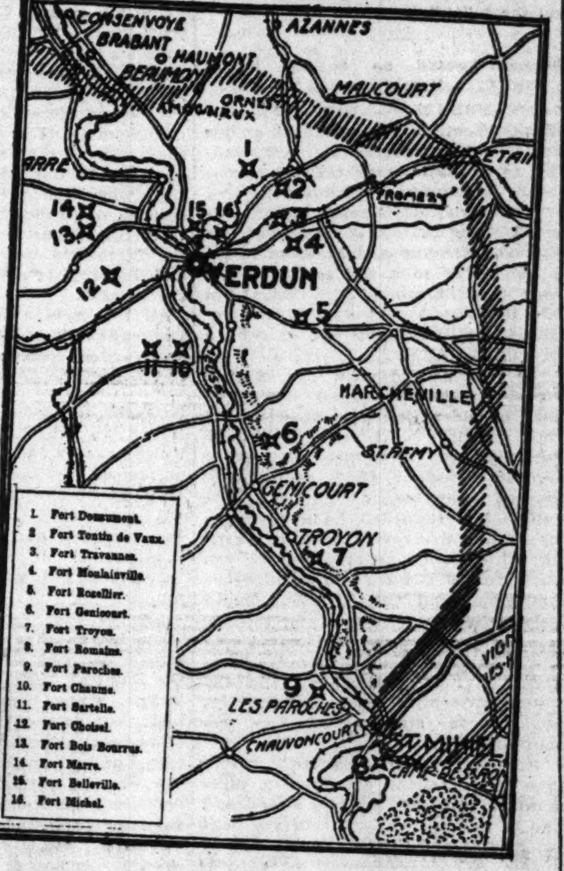
Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg was given every title in the German service except his own. The name of Gen. Gallieni, French Minister of War, was unknown, and all but two of the girls called him an Italian. Premier Aristide Briand was almost similarly neglected.

Gallipoli was placed in Greece or Italy by the majority of the girls. Asked to name three German Generals, six mentioned only Von Hindenburg. Von Bulow and Von Mackenzen were known of by one girl each. Von Kluck was forgotten.

Detail and Outline Maps Showing Verdun's Forts and Stronghold's Relation to Paris; the German Leader



GEN. VON DAIMLING.



THE efforts of the Germans in this drive indicate that the tactics used so successfully by Von Hindenburg and Von Mackensen in attacking forts on the Russian front are being employed by Gen. Von Daimling. Their system has been to bend the Russian line on either side of a stronghold and then, after it is exposed to attacks on both flanks, reduce it by big guns and by infantry storms.

Apparently this is the plan of attack on Verdun. The first three days of the battle were characterized by a terrific drive on the northwest of Verdun, with notable German progress in forcing the French back there. Now the most violent fighting has shifted to the eastward of the stronghold. This action extends as far southward as Marcheville-on-the Woevre, where the Germans reported yesterday the French defensive had broken down.

In the map, the shaded portion represents the battle-line today.

$500,000 PROFITS FOR 4 ST. LOUISANS IN WHEAT MARKET

Strained Relations With Germany Break Price and Bear Traders Win.

Nearly $500,000 in profits were made by four men on the Merchants' Exchange last week, most of it yesterday, when wheat broke nearly five cents a bushel, owing to the strained relations between the United States and Germany over the submarine question.

The successful speculators were D. J. Canty, a capitalist, who was credited with winning $125,000; T. E. Price, head of the T. E. Price Commission Co., $125,000; C. O. Lamhy of the J. H. Teasdal Commission Co., $120,000, and William T. Hill, president of the J. H. Teasdale Commission Co., $80,000. Other traders who made large profits are said to be Vincent Jones of the Jones-Wise Commission Co., Thomas P. Lahey of T. E. Price & Co., and William Lanyon, a wealthy mine and smelter owner.

Traders Win and Farmers Lose.

These traders have been "bears" on the market and have been selling wheat short for several weeks. At the close of the market yesterday wheat was off over 20 cents a bushel from the high point reached Jan. 26.

While the "professional" traders on 'Change were winning on the decline in wheat, farmers generally were losing. For months it has been noticeable on 'Change that outside buying, especially by farmers, was unusually heavy in the market. When wheat was near the top price of $1.33 recently the Exchange floor was crowded with farmers buying wheat. Now they have returned to their homes and the "speculative" trade will know them no more for some time to come.

T. E. Price told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he had never seen the farmers so largely interested in wheat as they were recently.

Price and Canty Lost on Corn.

"But," said Price, "when the farmers have the actual wheat and load up on speculative wheat, too, it is usually time to take the bear side of the market. I have hardly ever seen this rule fail."

Price and Canty have been interested in some big deals on the Merchants' Exchange. Some months ago both of them sold corn short when the price was near 60 cents. The Government report estimated the corn crop at 3,000,000,000 bushels, a near-record, and it looked like "finding money" to "bear" the market.

The corn crop, however, was badly damaged by the excessive wet weather last fall and the grade of the grain was so lowered that prices advanced materially. Price was credited with losing $60,000 and Canty $20,000 on the deal when they bought in their "short" corn at 70 cents. The price now is 75½ cents.

LINER THAT WILL BE IN THE WAR ZONE AFTER MARCH 1 SAILS

French Steamer Lafayette Has 228 Passengers and General Cargo, but No Guns Were to Be Seen.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The French line steamship Lafayette, carrying 228 passengers and a general freight cargo, left here today for Bordeaux. The Lafayette will reach the war zone Friday or Saturday of next week, the first passenger liner from the United States flying the flag of one of the entente allies to enter the zone after March 1, the date Germany has set to begin her submarine offensive against armed merchantmen. There were no guns to be seen on the Lafayette, however.

Nearly half of the passengers on the Lafayette had been booked for the Espagne, but were transferred because of postponement of sailing of the latter vessel to permit repairs. Some of those booked on the Espagne had received anonymous warnings that a mishap might befall that vessel.

KUROPATKIN IS GIVEN COMMAND OF RUSSIA'S NORTHERN ARMIES

General Who Opposed Japanese in Manchuria Now Resisting German Attempts Against Riga.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 26.—Gen. Alexieff Kuropatkin has been appointed commander in chief of the Russian armies on the northern front.

Gen. Kuropatkin, who was commander in chief of the Russian forces in Manchuria at the beginning of the Russo-Japanese war, succeeds Gen. Nicholas V. Ruzsky, who was relieved of the command on the Russian northern front Dec. 20 last. The Russian northern army has been repelling the attempt of the Germans to capture Riga.

Gen. Kuropatkin has been reported as holding various commands during the present war, and early last October he was appointed chief of the Russian Grenadier Corps.

WIFE AND 4 CHILDREN HELD FOR MURDER OF HUSBAND

Negro Confesses He Helped Kill Man While Woman Stood by and Gave Orders.

ALAMO, Tenn., Feb. 26.—Officers today arrested Mrs. Avery Townsend, her three sons and daughter on charge of murdering Avery Townsend, husband and father.

A negro confessed he helped kill Townsend while, he said, the wife stood by and gave orders. The body was recovered today after the negro told where it had been concealed.

The family was widely known in Crockett County. Townsend was heavily insured.

ONLY 2 PUPILS IN THIS SCHOOL

MONTGOMERY, Mo., Feb. 26.—It develops that the cost is $25 a month each to educate the pupils at the Pine Knot School near the Montgomery-Lincoln County line. There are only two pupils in the school and the teacher, Miss Ida Slovens, receives a salary of $50 per month.

PRIEST WHO HAD BEEN ILL ENDS LIFE WITH SHOT

The Rev. Father Frederick H. Schulte of St. Engelbert's Had Nervous Breakdown.

The Rev. Father Frederick H. Schulte, 54 years old, pastor of St. Engelbert's Catholic Church, Marcus and Carter avenues, ended his life with a pistol bullet in the bathroom of the parish house, 4330 Marcus avenue, at 1:20 yesterday afternoon. He had recently been in Mullanphy Hospital suffering from pneumonia and a nervous breakdown and his friends believe he killed himself in a moment of mental aberration.

He celebrated early mass in the church and spent the rest of the morning preparing today's sermon, the notes for which afterwards were found in a room adjoining the bathroom. He lunched at noon as usual, but complained of feeling ill and said he was going to his study to lie down.

A few minutes later Mrs. Lena Fuerth, his housekeeper, heard a noise as of someone falling and ran to the bathroom, where she found the priest unconscious on the floor with a revolver near him. A doctor was called, but the bullet, which was fired into the right temple, had pierced the brain and death had been almost instantaneous.

Suffered From Pneumonia.

The doctor told the police that Father Schulte contracted the grip about Christmas and pneumonia later developed. He said he believed the priest was suffering a form of dementia. he shot himself. He had worried much of late because he could get no news of two brothers in the German army.

Father Schulte was born May 22, 1862, at Rheindahlen in Prussia, where his father was a school teacher. He was educated at Steyl, Holland, and was a missionary with some German immigrants when he reached America, Jan. 20, 1884. He was ordained to the priesthood in September of that same year.

His first assignment was as assistant pastor at St. Francis de Sales Church in St. Louis. In 1886 he became assistant pastor of St. Peter's Church in Jefferson City. In 1888 he was made pastor of a church at River aux Vases, Mo., and from there went to a pastorate at Maxville, Mo. He became pastor of St. Engelbert's eight years ago.

Powerful of physique and fond of athletic sports, Father Schulte was also accounted scholarly. He was an amateur collector of natural curios, such as fossils, petrified animals and rare plants.

His health began to fail about six months ago. His closest friend, the Rev. Joseph Lubely, pastor of Holy Trinity Catholic Church, Fourteenth and Mallinckrodt streets, and Archbishop Glennon tried to persuade him to take a long rest in Mullanphy Hospital, but he remained at the institntion only four days.

GERMANS DRIVEN OUT OF CAPTURED POSITION AT FORT DOUAUMONT

French Regain and Go Beyond Point Which Had Been Taken in Series of Assaults.

PARIS FAILS TO CONFIRM REPORTED FALL OF FORT

Says Fnrious Struggle Is in Progress Around This Defensive Work, Which Is One of Score Encircling Main Fortress at Verdun.

PARIS, Feb. 26.—The official statement issued by the war office tonight mentions the sanguinary struggle which has been going on around Fort Douaumont, which it describes as "an advance element of the old defensive organization of the fortress of Verdun," and declares that the position captured this morning by the Germans was reached again by the French troops, who advanced beyond that point, and have resisted all attempts to drive them back.

(The Paris statement mentions a position captured by the Germans this morning, while the earlier Berlin statement claimed the capture of Fort Douaumont yesterday, leaving uncertain the position referred to in the Paris statement. The French War Office has made no actual admission of the capture of Fort Douaumont by the Germans.)

The text of the French statement follows:

"In Artois mine fighting has been in progress. We exploded two mines, one to the west of the road to Lille, and the second to the east of Neuville-St. Vaast, under a tunnel occupied by the enemy.

"In Champagne we completely repulsed an attack by the enemy against a salient carried by us to the south of Ste. Marie-A-Py. The total number of prisoners taken by us in this affair has reached 340, of whom nine are officers and 36 noncommissioned officers.

"Destructive fires have been carried out against the German works to the north of Ville-Sur-Tourbe and in the region of Mont Tetu.

"In the region to the north of Verdun the bombardment continues without cessation to the east and to the west of the Meuse. To these attacks of the enemy our troops have replied by counter-attacks, carried out with vigor at the various points assailed on our front.

"All the new attempts of the Germans in the region of Champneuville and on La Cote Deu Poivre, where we are solidly established, have been repulsed.

Fort Douaumont Struggle.

"A furious struggle has been in progress around Fort Douaumont, which is an advance element of the old defensive organization of Verdun fortress. The position captured this morning by the enemy, after several fruitless assaults, which cost extremely heavy losses, was reached again and gone beyond by our troops, which all the attempts of the enemy have not been able to push back.

"To the northeast of St. Mihiel our heavy artillery bombarded enemy hangars and depots near Vigneulles. The Germans have fired several shells of large caliber in the direction of Luneville and Nancy.

"Today, in the region of Verdun, Adjutant Nevarre in a monoplane beat down with a machine gun two German aeroplanes, this achievement making five enemy aeroplanes brought to earth by this pilot. The enemy machines fell in our lines. Two aviators manning them were killed, while two others were made prisoners.

144 Shells Dropped on Metz.

"On the same day one of our squadrons composed of nine bombing aeroplanes dropped 144 shells on Sablon railway station at Metz. Another of our squadrons bombarded the enemy establishment at Chambley, northwest of Pont-a-Mouson."

The Belgian official communication reads:

"The artillery actions were very spirited today on our front, particularly in the region to the north of Dixmude. Our batteries carried out destructive fires on the enemy works at Meroken."

Berlin Report Announcing Capture of Fort Douaumont Friday.

BERLIN, via London, Feb. 26.—It is officially announced that Fort Douaumont, one of the fortifications four miles from Verdun, was taken by storm yesterday afternoon and is now firmly held by the Germans.

The official announcement is as follows: "The armored Fort Douaumont, the northeastern corner pillar of the permanent main line fortification of the stronghold of Verdun was stormed yesterday afternoon by the 24th regiment of Brandenburg infantry and is now firmly in German hands."

An official statement issued this afternoon says that considerable advances also have been made east of the Meuse in the region north of Verdun, in the presence of Emperor William.

The statement follows:

"Western front: On the night of Feb. 25 an advance by a British detachment east of Armentieres was repulsed.

"In the Champagne the French made an attack south of the St. Marie-a-Py position which we captured on Feb. 12. They succeeded in penetrating our first line trenches over a width of about 250 yards.

"East of the Meuse considerable advances were made on the battle front in the presence of the King-Emperor. Our brave troops gained possession of the hills southwest of the village of Louvemont and the group of fortified positions situated to the east thereof. In the fierce rush forward Brandenburg regiments pushed on as far as the village and armored fort of Douaumont, which they carried by storm.

"In the plain of the Woevre the enemy's resistance broke down along the entire front as far as the neighborhood of Marphoville (Marcheville) to the south of the national high road from Paris to Metz. Our troops are closely pursuing the retreating enemy.

"The capture of the village of Champneuville, reported yesterday, was based on an erroneous report.

"Eastern theater: "Apart from successful engagements participated in by our vanguards, there is nothing to report.

"Balkan theater: "The situation is unchanged."

French Who Believe in Verdun Hope Germans Will Continue Assaults

PARIS, Feb. 26.

PARIS is extraordinarily calm in the presence of the great Verdun battle. There are no indications of tension or nervousness, but only sober confidence.

The desire among those who know the defensive strength of the lines seems to be that the attacks should continue, for, they argue, the losses on the German side would be in proportion to the efforts. There were few persons around the newspaper bulletin boards today, and no crowds at the Ministry of War or other public offices.

The whole front from the North Sea to Switzerland is on the alert and all leaves of absence have been recalled. The French maximum effort has not yet been made.

SNOW HAMPERS GERMAN ATTACK AGAINST VERDUN

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A delayed dispatch from the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. at British headquarters in the field, dated Thursday, says that the Germans could not have chosen a more inopportune time for the offensive against Verdun. At the beginning of the attack the weather suddenly changed to the most severe winter spell in several years.

AMERICAN POLICY INCONSISTENT, SAYS COUNT REVENTLOW

Lansing Recognizes Submarines as Legal Craft, but Accords to Armed Merchantmen Right to Treat Them as Pirate Ships, Military Writer Avers.

"LET NEUTRALS GO ON SACRED VESSELS"

Declares Germany Can Never Permit Powerful Navy Arm to Be Paralyzed When Washington Knows England Violates Law.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Feb. 26.—"What constitutes 'armed for defense' on the part of merchant ships?

"What is 'defense' by an armed merchantman, and what is such a ship entitled legitimately and legally to defend itself against?

"Where does 'defense' by a merchant ship and where does 'offense' begin in marine naval warfare when a recognized legal craft of war endeavors to stop such a ship for the purpose of search in compliance with the old rules of sea warfare?

"As I understand your Secretary of State's position, he recognizes submarines as legal war craft and at the same time accords to armed merchantmen the right to treat them as pirate craft. Is that logical or consistent?"

These are some of the questions fired at me by Count Ernest von Reventlow, probably the best known naval critic, marine and political writer in Europe, when I hunted him up today to obtain his views for the Post-Dispatch.

I found Reventlow at his home in Charlottenburg, where he has been confined some days threatened with pneumonia. Despite this he was at work in his library. In another part of the house Countess Reventlow, who was a French Comtesse before she married Reventlow, then naval officer, was looking after 30 small poor children whom she feeds and cares for daily.

Man of Quiet Manner.

There was no indication of "pathological sickness" about Reventlow, to which a portion of the press recently attributed some of his editorial utterances. As a matter of fact, he personally does not bear out the impression created by some of his writings. He is not a fire eater, but a man of very quiet manner and cool exterior despite an intensive mentality.

"It is not a question of conciliation or nonconciliation toward America," he said. "It is a question whether Germany will conduct the war against England with a recognized legal arm of the navy or whether we shall let a neutral power paralyze that very powerful navy arm we have because it suits your Government to hinder and restrict us from waging an effective submarine campaign against England, while at the same time Washington knows England's war of starvation not only is in violation of international law, but is in utter disregard of American rights in the matter of noncontraband and mails.

"Has England even as much as answered President Wilson's notes? Is it any wonder that the conviction is growing in Germany that it appears to be the standpoint in Washington that England may do what she pleases against Germany regardless of international law, which is only for Germany to [illegible]. That the German people have drawn the only deduction deducible from such an attitude must be comprehensible."

Count Reventlow declared that under modern conditions of naval warfare an armed merchantman in the war zone was comparable to an armed civilian in the war area on land.

"If a cruiser stops a merchantman and is about to make a search when the [illegible] fires at the cruiser that merchantman probably will be blown out of the water," he continued. "Is such an [illegible] merchantman one of defense? If a submarine signals a ship to stop or approaches for that purpose and to search according to the rules of cruiser warfare and the merchant ship fires upon the submarine, is that an act of defense or offense? Hasn't the submarine, as a recognized legal war craft, the same legal status as a cruiser?

No Pirates Today.

"The moment a merchantman is armed it becomes a warship and a belligerent, since today there is no such thing as pirates or privateers or illegal craft upon which it has a right to fire and still maintain the status of a peaceful nonbelligerent. The difference between a cruiser and a submarine is that a merchantman stands no chance with a cruiser, while even a rifle bullet might render a submarine incapable of diving.

"The British admiralty has given orders first to merchant ships to be armed; second, it has placed naval gun crews aboard, and third, it has ordered them to sink submarines on sight as if they were pirates. To all intents and purposes that constitutes armed merchantmen auxiliary warships and they have so proven themselves in actual practice, as shown by proofs brought by the German Government.

"It is noteworthy that the British Government has disputed neither the proofs nor the offensive action of merchantmen nor the orders issued by the admiralty."

Count Reventlow declared that it appears that Secretary Lansing had practically admitted the law or long usage should be changed, but that he alone could not do it.

"So according to that," he went on, "British armed merchantmen may continue to treat German submarines as pirates, but our submarines must treat the enemy auxiliary warships as inoffensive traders, all because the law, even according to Mr. Lansing, doesn't exactly seem to fit, but cannot be changed without the consent of the belligerents.

"No, Germany cannot grant that argument of one-sidedness. Germany cannot any longer lessen her chances to win the war against England when the means to that end are in our possession. No, we cannot afford to do that even for the sake of relations with neutral Powers."

"Count, it has been said that you rather invite a break with America, or are indifferent to it," I remarked.

Does Not Desire Break.

"That is absolutely false," he replied with some heat. "I take the standpoint that we will very gladly live in peace and friendship with the United States; that we want to maintain the unbroken friendly relations of over a century; that we have shown our good will and given proof of our good intentions in that direction; but that higher than the earnest wish too live in peace with America is the right and duty we have to fight for the existence of the German nation and independence of the German people which is again avowedly threatened by Premier Asquith, and to fight for that with every arm and weapon we have.

"If Washington is deaf to such argumentations then we must accept it that the American Government has not any intention to think justly or impartially, but that it identifies its wishes and interests with those of Great Britain.

"We in Germany regret this deeply, but would have to take the standpoint that our own existence and independence, both of which the British Government says must be destroyed, comes first and that our relations to other Powers are second."

Von Reventlow declared that it seemed impossible for America to conceive that Germany was battling against an overpowering coalition for its existence; that this was not a mere phrase is shown by the repeated speeches of Asquith, Sazanoff and others that the war will not end until Germany is absolutely crushed; in other words, until Germany's existence as a nation and independence as a people are destroyed.

With such a fate placed before them by Asquith, Sazanoff and French statesmen, the German people would use every weapon and arm to frustrate the plans of the enemy coalition, he asserted.

Reventlow said that as he viewed it the chief issue between Germany and America centered around the safety of American life—that that was the practical issue.

"Why do President Wilson and Mr. Lansing take so much interest in dead Americans and so little interest in live American citizens?" he asked. "From every reasonable standpoint it would seem more practical, more sensible and certainly more humanitarian if your Government is neutral and fair, that it would cooperate with Germany in some manner to prevent loss of American lives.

"Certainly if your Government decides to break off relations, or even declare war on Germany in support of its abstract principle, that Americans may travel on any ship they please in the war zone, armed or unarmed, they certainly would not for the time that such a status between Germany and America exists attain that object; namely, the safety of Americans en route to England, by such a move."

The Count was of the opinion that the entire matter can be cleared and made simple by America announcing that it would safeguard and reserve its right and principle for future adjudication, but that citizens of the United States should forego traveling on armed belligerent ships the remainder of the conflict. He pointed out again that Germany for months has signified her willingness to the creation of a fleet of so-called "sacred ships" which would be immune.

"Since the Lusitania," he said, "Washington has kept a Damocles sword hanging over our head, with the implied threat to break of relations if any more Americans were lost; but without any intention of offending President Wilson, Secretary Lansing or the American people, the German people has come to the decision that it must regard its own existence and independence and the means thereto first. If in trying to save our nation and maintain our independence, America declares her friendship forfeited we would be truly and sincerely sorry, but we cannot help it.

Hopes Submarine War Will Reopen.

"I hope the submarine war will reopen and be pressed with all possible vigor. If after our good will is shown to afford safe conduct to Americans through special ships which has been ignored by Washington, Americans wilfully place themselves in unnecessary danger of losing their lives, and this results in a break of relations, perhaps war, then let the American people and history place the moral responsibility where it will rest—the present American Government."

"Germany will stand by her guns in the announced submarine war against England. Let that be clearly understood. Germany will conduct a legal war with a legal naval arm of warfare, recognized as being a legal naval arm by your Mr. Lansing. Let that also be clearly understood," said a high German official to me today.

"The impression you say obtains in America, the same official continued, "that Germany is seeking to force the United States into a war. That is too ridiculous to call for an answer. We haven't reached that pinnacle of madness.

Will Prosecute War to End.

"Germany," he added, "wants to and is going to prosecute a war against England to a decision in which our U-boats, a recognized legal arm, will be one of our means to that end.

"We ask nothing from the United States. We merely desire and hope that Americans will exercise that care of their own safety that they do in ordinary, normal, peaceful times—that is, that they travel by safer instead of more dangerous means, by neutral or American boats. In other words, to apply your own great American maxim, 'Safety First.'

"We had hoped Washington would see its way clear to co-operate in that. Germany has offered to continue its willingness to meet the American Government in every practical and possible way to assure the safety of Americans and other neutrals.

"Germany does, however," the official said emphatically, "insist that no neutral Power can justly, on the one hand, recognize the submarine as a legal arm in naval war; and on the other hand impose restrictions and conditions by application of the usage or law created for other times or other ages, which make it practically impossible to use this legal arm.

Cites Lansing's Ruling.

"Mr. Lansing says the submarine is a legal arm of sea warfare, and in the next breath in effect says that armed merchant ships may attack submarines as pirates.

"To use a German phrase, that is 'Biting one's self in the tail.'

"Let me say with all emphasis that we seek no trouble with America. We want none. We have shown our good will and will continue to do so, and will do everything to maintain friendly relations with America except give up our chances of winning the war. That cannot be asked."

This official expressed the belief that an understanding with Washington was by no means impossible. The situation as viewed from here is best described by persons in official circles close to the government as being a veritable "Hexenkesel" or "Witches caldron of confusion." It is stated that no definite information has been received from Washington, but it would appear that the Lusitania case is practically settled.

U. S. Opens Way for Defensive Arms Discussion

tial advices from Berlin which forecast a request from Germany to the United States to define defensive armament.

Might Limit Armament.

State Department officials were emphatic in saying that while additional limitations might be placed upon the defensive armament that may be carried, such action could not be extended to require the complete exclusion of armament. That would be equivalent, it is held, to a change of international law which cannot be made during the course of hostilities except by general assent. There are strong intimations that the entente allies will not consent to such a change.

The first formal reply to the American suggestion made weeks ago for the disarming of merchant ships came today from Italy. It will not be made public until all the allies have responded, but it was learned that the document was not conclusive but rather was argumentative.

While agitation on the subject in Congress has subsided for the time being, the disposition on the part of leaders in the movement for a congressional warning seemed tonight to be a waiting one. By recessing instead of adjourning the Senate reflected the determination of its leaders to prevent by parliamentary tactics any discussion of the Gore resolution. Senator Gore in his statement characterized this action as "rendering a policy of watchful waiting" unavoidable.

Await Assurances.

"In the meantime," he continued, "we can watch upon the gratifying assurances coming alike from our own State Department and from the German Foreign Office that an amicable adjustment is now hoped or. There is no purpose to stay or force the hand of diplomacy so long as there is no danger of its involving us in an irretrievable situation and jeopardizing the sovereign and exclusive control by Congress over the question of peace and war.

"This end and the three principal objects sought to be accomplished by the passage of the resolution has already been accomplished by its introduction and attending public discussion. In the first place American citizens characterized by Senator Stone as moral traitors who would recklessly travel on armed belligerent ships, endangering their own lives and the safety of the country, have been practically if not officially warned that they must travel at their own peril and without the moral or legal support of the Congress.

"In the second place, the country has been reassured that the Congress will not sacrifice millions of lives and billions of treasure in defense of a useless and unessential right that ought to be withdrawn with dignity rather than conserved with butchery and that the Congress will not abdicate its constitutional authority over peace and war in favor of irresponsible adventurers who would, if they could, usurp the power to precipitate the whole nation into a whirlpool of blood, carnage and war.

No Bait for War.

"In the third place, it has been made impossible for any American clique or cabal, even for the purchasers of the five hundred million dollar bond issue of the allies, to bait Germany into a declaration of war against the United States and thus compel the United States to underwrite their investment and guarantee the continued sovereignty and the ultimate success of their debtors.

"Last, but not least, it is demonstrated to the country and to the world, it is demonstrated to those who place he interest of Germany above that of America, that the Congress places the interest of the allies above that of America, that the Congress places the true, the vital interest of America equally above the interest of Germany and the allies."

German Quoted as Saying Break With U. S. Would Hasten Victory.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 26.—The Frankfurter Zeitung publishes an interview on submarine warfare credited to a high naval official whose views, in substance, follow:

"A majority of German naval officers believe that a complete breach between Germany and America would be conducive to a far earlier victorious termination of the war, but only if Germany derived all the results logically arising out of such a breach.

"As soon as Germany was in such a position that she need have no more consideration for America she could declare all Great Britain blockaded and announce that every ship of whatever flag which attempted to enter a British port would be regarded as a blockade runner and destroy it without warning. This policy would lead to the starvation of Britain and thus to her submission and then automatically the submission of Russia and France. America then would be isolated and would have to submit because Germany, having obtained all the entente battleships and submarines, would be far stronger on the sea than America.

"America, when defeated, would have to surrender all German merchant ships which she had seized and also to pay all war costs of the central Powers and their allies."

England to Reply to Notes on Mail Seizures at "Earliest Possible Moment."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Great Britain has informed Ambassador Page at London that it will reply to the American notes regarding interference with neutral mails and the trading with the enemy act at the earliest possible moment. The notes were dispatched several weeks ago, and recently the State Department asked for replies. It is indicated that Great Britain is awaiting the result of conferences with her allies before responding.

HOW TO BE SLIM

If you are too fat and want to reduce your weight 15 or 20 pounds, don't starve and weaken your system, or think you must always be laughed at on account of your fat, but go to any good druggist and get a box of Oil of Korein capsules, take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week and note what a pleasant and reliable method this is for removing superfluous fat from any part of the body.

It costs little, is absolutely harmless, and a week's trial should convince anyone that it is unnecessary to be burdened with even a single pound of unsightly fat.—ADV.

WomanTells Pitiful Story

"I am the mother of 12 children. I took a varicose ulcer on my leg at the birth of last child five years ago. I used every ointment that is made. I was laid up for nearly five weeks, with a doctor attending me, who did nothing but treat those kind of things.

"Doctors told me to lie in bed, but where there is a big family one cannot do that. Then I heard about D. D. D., and as I used to tear my leg at night until it was a bleeding mass, I determined to try a bottle. I can't tell you the ease it gave me. I never used to sleep for the pain. Many a time I nearly fell with the dizziness in my head from want of sleep.

"Now my leg is healed up, thanks to the blessed D. D. D. I never expected it to cure. I only got it to take away the terrible itch. By degrees I saw the big sore getting smaller." MRS. STITT.

MISTOOK PETROLITE FOR AN ENEMY SHIP, AUSTRIA EXPLAINS

U-Boat Commander Thought U. S. Flag Was Disguise, Vienna Tells Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Austria, supplementing her request for more information concerning the American protest against the submarine attack on the American tank steamer Petrolite, in the Mediterranean, has informed the United States that the submarine commander thought the Petrolite was an enemy ship disguised under the American flag; that he fired upon her as the ship changed her course, and he believed she was about to ram him, and that the Petrolite's captain voluntarily furnished provisions to the submersible.

Secretary Lansing said today that Austria's communication was not a reply to the American protest, and could not be considered either acceptable or unacceptable. The American version of the affair is that the submarine fired upon the tanker, injuring one man, and that when the Petrolite's commander refused to furnish provisions the Austrian commander took an American of the Petrolite's crew on her submarine and held him as a hostage until he got the supplies.

All the facts available to the State Department have been sent to Vienna, and further reply is being awaited.

GERMAN TAX ON WAR PROFITS IS 5 TO 25 PER CENT

Details of Graduated Scale Applying to Individuals and Corporations Announced.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 25, via London, Feb. 26.—Germany's new expected taxation measures were announced today by the Government. They include taxes upon the war profits of individuals and corporations and also indirect measures of taxation.

No estimated yield on the taxation of war profits is given. The Government, in fact, is unable to estimate the sum to be derived because a large number of corporations have not yet sent in their reports, and only the roughest guesses regarding the financial status of individuals are possible.

The war profits measure is divided into two sections. The section for individuals takes the form of a graduated tax on property increment between Jan. 1, 1914 and 1917. The tax commences with 5 per cent upon the first 20,000 marks ($5000), 6 per cent on the next 30,000 marks ($7500) and then rising in successive stages to 25 per cent increases over 500,000 marks ($175,000).

A direct tax upon increased incomes is avoided largely owing to objections, it is said, made by individual states of the empire in which the income tax is reserved, but by an ingenious subterfuge, when an increase in the amount of property is accompanied by a correspondingly increased income, mainly, when property increment represents hoardings from an increased income, the rate of taxation is doubled.

It is admitted that this will redound to the advantage of lavish spenders, who live up to their war profits, but it is said that this is unavoidable.

In order to checkmate various devices of tax dodgers, it is provided that gifts to children and others and money invested abroad during the war must be reported to the authorities.

Individuals, who have been putting away their profits in jewelry, paintings and other articles of art or luxury, which as personal property, heretofore have escaped taxation, must return them at their purchase value. As a further measure against tax dodgings, persons moving out in the country or attempting to send property abroad before the date of the collection, may be forced to deposit with the authorities enough to cover the tax. A jail penalty is provided for offenders.

The corporation tax on war-time profits starts with 10 per cent on the additional yearly profits made during the war as compared with the ante bellum profits, when this additional profit does not exceed 2 per cent of the corporation's capital stock. It rises to 30 per cent when the additional profits exceed 20 per cent of the capital.

ST. LOUIS ANNUALLY GIVES $1,800,000 TO CHARITY WORK

Excluding Catholic and Jewish Societies, 75 Institutions Receive $975,000.

St. Louis makes an annual contribution of $975,000 to 75 charitable and philanthropic institutions, according to a report issued yesterday by J. D. Lynn, secretary of the Charities Committee of the Business Men's League. Including the Catholic Charities, which are under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop, and the Jewish charities, the total sum contributed for charitable work in St. Louis amounts to $1,800,000 a year, Lynn said.

The Charities Committee of the league has undertaken the work of driving unworthy charitable organizations from St. Louis. The committee is sending to every member of the league a booklet which contains the name, and in some instances the officers and receipts and expenditures, of every charitable organization in St. Louis, which the committee considers worthy of public support.

The Central Council of Social Agencies, a Catholic organization, co-operates with the Charities Committee in the work of trying to eliminate unworthy institutions and the solicitors for fake charities. These organizations strongly recommend that no contributions be made to any but the approved organizations.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—ADV.

Text of the Gore Resolution; It Would Have No Legal Force Even if Adopted

The Gore Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.

WHEREAS, A number of leading Powers of the world are now engaged in a war of unexampled proportions; and

Whereas, The United States is happily at peace with all of the belligerent nations; and

Whereas, It is equally the desire and the interest of the American people to remain at peace with all nations; and

Whereas, The President has recently offered fresh and signal proofs of the superiority of diplomacy to butchery as a method of settling international disputes; and

Whereas, The right of American citizens to travel on unarmed belligerent vessels has recently received renewed guarantees of respect and inviolability; and

Whereas, The right of American citizens to travel on armed belligerent vessels rather than upon unarmed vessels is essential neither to their life, liberty or safety, nor to the independence, dignity or security of the United States; and

Whereas, Congress alone has been vested with the power to declare war, which involves the obligations to prevent war, by all proper means consistent with the honor and vital interest of the nation; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring, that it is the sense of the Congress, vested as it is with the sole power to declare war, that all persons owing allegiance to the United States should, in behalf of their own safety and the vital interest of the United States, forbear to exercise the right to travel as passengers upon any armed vessel of any belligerent Power, whether such vessel be armed for offensive or defensive purposes, and it is the further sense of the Congress that no passport should be issued or renewed by the Secretary of State or by anyone acting under him to be used by any person owing allegiance to the United States for purpose of travel upon any such armed vessel of a belligerent Power.

The Effect of It.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.

THE adoption of the Gore resolution by the Senate and House would have no effect whatever beyond indicating the sense of Congress. Being a concurrent resolution it would not require the signature of the President. It would have no standing in law. The only result from its passage would be moral and advisory upon those who might be going abroad.

It was self evident from the outset that President Wilson would never approve such a resolution as that proposed by Senator Gore. Hence it was modified and made a concurrent resolution, thus expressing nothing but the "sense" of Congress.

In this form its advocates hold that it could not be construed as offensive to any foreign Power. Neither would it have any binding or legal effect but merely indicate to the American people that the sentiment of Congress is contrary to that of the President.

It long has been the custom for the Senate and House to adopt "sense" resolutions and occasionally both bodies join in one of these expressions.

In all cases except when the unusual is transpiring abroad, determined efforts have been made by the party leaders to prevent the discussion and adoption of such resolutions. It has been realized that no matter how harmless in appearance these resolutions may be, ill-feeling is created and misunderstandings result.

Leaders in Congress understand how the Gore resolution could be misinterpreted and misconstrued abroad.

Relations with Russia have never been the same as they were before Congress adopted resolutions expressing the sense that Jews were not well treated and should be given better status. Turkey's feeling for the United States was unfavorably affected because of similar expression concerning Armenians.

SENATE IS 71 AGAINST AND 24 FOR GORE RESOLUTION

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Should a vote be forced in the United States Senate on either the Gore resolution declaring it to be the sense of that body that Americans should avoid sailing on armed ships of belligerents or the Jones measure opposing a severance of relations or an ultimatum on the question of national honor, without the Senate's consent, the result, as indicated by expressions from members, would be about as follows:

For the Resolution.

This canvas shows that on a line-up, as indicated by their present views 33 democrats and 38 Republicans would vote in opposition and 17 Democrats and 7 Republicans in favor of the resolution warning Americans against traveling on armed merchant ships.

It is agreed however that among these who would support a resolution for instance of the Gore type, are several who are today working earnestly to prevent the Senate from taking action until after the President has had a further opportunity to work out the problem through diplomatic channels.

French Recapture Lost Position at Fort Douaumont

The great activity in the Ypres salient during the last fortnight, the dispatch says, was really in the nature of a diversion. If the Germans had found it possible to push beyond the international trenches, the fighting would have assumed the proportions of another battle of the Ypres. The defense, however, was too strong to be swept through. Regarded as a feint, the operation failed simply because the British general staff was not deceived as to its true character.

Is It Worth the Price?

The Germans probably improved their position southeast of Ypres and before Givenchy. Whether these improvements are worth the price paid is another matter.

"Probably," the correspondent states, "there is not a clear conception at home of the present phase on this front. People may be saying that although there is talk of our ability to take German first line trenches whenever we like, we never do so, but that the Germans occupy a bit of our front line whenever they make up their minds to do so.

"The explanation lies right on the surface. The British army is not attacking yet. It may be necessary to develop a counter stroke occasionally and, of course, it is always necessary to go on wasting enemy life diligently by every possible means of trench attrition. But this leaves the general strategic scheme unchanged.

"The Germans, on the other hand, are attacking because they feel the vital urgency for so doing. It is reasonable to conclude that the price they pay for such tactics is infinitely higher than the price they exact from the defense. If one side attacks the other suddenly under conditions of normal dispositions of troops, it probably will capture some length of trenches. Such a consequence may not sufficiently affect the local situation to call for a vigorous response. The situation cannot always be gauged by taking or yielding a kilometer or two. There are places where either side would greatly strengthen its position by falling back were it not that the moral effect is such a strong influence in war."

Hills Are 1000 Feet High.

Fort Dounaumont, outside of Verdun, which the Germans reported captured, and where the French claim to have retaken lost ground is the base of solid field works on a line of hills 1000 feet high, northwest of Verdun.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the French are sustaining an assault equaling in intensity the hottest engagements of the entire war.

The Westminster Gazette expresses confidence that the main fortress is impregnable. It predicts that the principal result of the German attack will be a tremendous loss, which will cripple the effectiveness of the Germans in subsequent operations.

The German statement indicates a development of the attack along a wide front to the south and east of the region nortn of Verdun, along which pressure hitherto has been exerted. The high road from Paris to Metz referred to, runs through Verdun, passing slightly to the southeast. It is crossed at a point about fifteen miles east of Verdun by the German line, bending southward in the salient to St. Michael. It is along this front that the Germans are now attacking as distinct from the sector to the north of Verdun, over which the first onslaught was made. Verdun is thus being assailed simultaneously from the north, northeast, east and southeast.

4 BRITISH SHIPS SUNK; ONE A LINER

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Wilson liner Dido, 4769 tons gross, was sunk this morning, according to the Central News. The captain and two of the crew were landed by a Belgian steamer. The Dido carried a crew of 29 men, and it is feared there has been considerable loss of life. The Dido was last reported at Hull on Jan. 28.

Lloyds announces the sinking of the British steamer Denaby of 2987 tons and Tummel of 531 tons. Seven members of the crews are missing. Of five survivors who were picked up, two died.

The British steamer Fastnet, 2227 tons, has been sunk. The crew was saved.

Russians Take Kermanshah, Persia, 150 Miles From Kut-El-Amara.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says that the Russians have taken by storm Kermanshah, the important Persian city in the neighborhood of which serious fighting has recently taken place.

An unofficial dispatch from Teheran, published yesterday, said that after a series of battles in the northern passes as a result of which the Russians captured a considerable quantity of booty, the Turks, who had been aided by Germans, had retreated towards Kermanshah. Kermanshah is 280 miles southwest of Teheran and within 150 miles of Kut-El-Amara on the Tigris, where Gen. Townshend's British force, which was ascending the river for the conquest of Bagdad, is besieged by the Turks.

Italian Troops Evacuate Albanian Port of Durazzo.

ROME, Feb. 26.—The report that Durazzo, an Albanian port on the Adriatic Sea, had been evacuated by the Italian troops stationed there is confirmed.

Since John Quit Drinking

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman
In all this little town;
And my merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown,
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more,
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store!

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN TREATMENT
(As sly as sly could be)
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.

And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited
(And cried some, too, I guess),
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as any one.
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking
And leads a nice, new life.

"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night,
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Then GOLDEN TREATMENT.

CONGRESS TURNING AGAIN TO PLAN FOR A CITIZEN'S ARMY

Members of Military Committees of Both Houses Say They Favor Practical Test of Possibility of Forming Organization of Trained Reservists.

GENERAL TERMS OF BILL AGREED UPON

Measure to Come Before House Provides for Regular Army of 143,000 Men and Federalized Guard of 424,000.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—A growing tendency to provide for a Federal army reserve in addition to the regular army and Federalized national guard was manifest today in both the House and Senate military committees. Members of both committees said they favored a practical test of the possibility of forming a Federal volunteer army in peace times on lines somewhat similar to the continental army plan. The apparent intention to abandon the continental project wholly was one of the causes leading up to the resignation of Secretary Garrison.

The House Committee agreed today upon the general terms of a bill it expects to get before the House within ten days, providing for a regular army with an authorized peace strength of 143,000 men; a federalized national guard which would reach a fixed minimum strength of 424,000 in five years; adequate reserve systems for both of these forces, and the organization of civilian training camps with wide discretion reposed in the War Department as to the terms of enlistment, training and government. The agreement on these terms was carried by the vote of the Republicans and three Democrats in the committee.

The Senate Committee has agreed tentatively to a plan under which training camps would be authorized in every Congressional District where sufficient men volunteered for training under an obligation for war service. The maximum force to be thus raised in any district would be a battalion, or substantially the same number as proposed for the first year of the Garrison continental army plan. The camps would be under command of full complements of regular army officers.

Guard Plan Open to Question.

Members of both committees, while saying they would support any good plan for federalizing the national guard as a first line force, frankly admitted today that they had doubts whether a requisite force could be enlisted in the national guard, even under the proposed Federal pay and regulation provisions. Representative Kahn, who has advocated an extension of the business men's training camp idea to all classes of citizens who would not enlist in the regulars or the national guard, said today that with 30,000 men already enrolled for intensive military training this summer, without Government aid, he had received assurances that fully 100,000 would available next year under his plan.

Members of the Senate Committee are understood to take a similar view. The tentative plan they are considering is in addition to the regular army and federalized national guard proposals and is intended to reach men who would not be found in either of those services.

The House Committee arrived at its regular army figures today as a compromise after suggestions of a peace strength of 220,000, 180,000 and 150,000 had been voted by narrowing margins. A nonpartisan vote finally fixed upon 137,000, or 2000 more than recommended by the War Department, with a provision designed to allow a percentage of over-enlistment to maintain that strength at all times. With this provision the total strength authorized would be 143,000. To provide officers to carry out work of instruction at schools, among militia regiments and for other special duties 1000 additional men in the commissioned personnel was agreed upon as against an increase of 786 proposed by the War Department.

Would Double Field Artillery.

The increases over the department figures would be in field and coast artillery, the former being doubled over its present strength. A total of 12 regiments or 108 batteries is contemplated. The coast artillery would be increased to a point where regulars to man all mine and torpedo defenses and one-half the guns in fixed fortifications would be available with an additional complement to man the proposed mobile guns to be added.

The bill also provides that a national guard officer from each organization be detailed to attend regular army service schools of the proper arms, receiving the pay of his rank in the regular army while on such duty. It contemplates authorizing the President to draft the guard into the Federal service at any time he deems best, without waiting specific authority of Congress and would remove all restriction on the use of the force outside the country.

Several members of the House Committee are in sympathy with the Senate Committee's proposals for the regular army, which contemplate as tentatively agreed upon, a complete reorganization and a peace strength of 175,000 men. In the same way, it is said, members of the Senate committee are willing to accept [illegible] of the House body on the scheme to federalize the national guard, insisting only that the placing of the force under Federal authority shall be accomplished in fact, as well as intention.

$5000 SUIT OF SIMMONS ESTATE UNDER ADVISEMENT

Effort Made to Enforce Alleged Agreement Entered Into With Globe Printing Co.

Circuit Judge Cave yesterday took under advisement a suit by the estate of the late H. J. Simmons, a member of the Missouri Legislature, against the Globe Printing Co. to enforce an agreement alleged to have been entered into betwen Simmons and the defendant a few days before the former's death, by which Simmons was to have been paid $5000. John T. Barker, Attorney-General of Missouri, appeared as counsel for the estate.

The evidence was that Simmons filed suit against the printing company, alleging he had been libeled by an article which appeared in the Globe-Democrat in regard to members of the Legislature. Negotiations for settlement of the case were entered into. Simmons, about three days before his death, called at the office of Lon O. Hocker, attorney for the Globe-Democrat, and agreed to accept $5000. Hocker gave to Simmons a release, telling him to sign it and also to have counsel representing him sign it, in order to exempt the defendant from any claim under the attorneys' lien law.

Simmons put the document in his pocket and left the city. On July 1, 1913, he ended his life at his home at Kirksville, Mo., by drinking carbolic acid, according to the testimony. The document providing for payment of the money was later found among his effects. It had his signature, but not the signatures of his attorneys, as requested by Hocker. Subsequently Hocker was notified by Barker that he and other attorneys had waived their claims under the lien law and asked that a check for the full amount be forwarded to Simmons' widow.

The defense refused to pay, on the ground that the agreement was not a binding one, as Simmons' death took place before the contract had been fully executed. It also was contended that the libel claim abated with the plaintiff's death.

When the suit on the contract was first filed Judge Kinsey sustained a demurrer to the petition, holding that a cause of action was not stated. An amended petition was then filed, and Judge Taylor, who heard arguments upon another demurrer, overruled the demurrer, and assigned the case to Judge Cave, to be heard on the evidence.

MRS. GOWDY'S SUIT AGAINST LUYTIES IS SETTLED FOR $1500

He Says That Was Amount and Her Lawyer Refuses to Discuss Terms.

Mrs. Kathleen E. Gowdy's $250,000 breach of promise suit against Herman C. G. Luyties of 36 Portland place, in the Federal Court, was withdrawn yesterday, after Luyties had settled with Mrs. Gowdy. Luyties told a Post-Dispatch reporter he gave Mrs. Gowdy a check for $1500. Mrs. Gowdy was not found by the reporter, and her lawyer, Charles M. Hay, declined to say anything about the terms of settlement. He said Mrs. Gowdy was living in a flat in the West End, and would leave St. Louis soon.

Mrs. Gowdy originally filed her suit in the Circuit Court, and later transferred it to the United States Court. She also filed a complaint with the United States District Attorney, under the Mann act, but no action was taken on this complaint. In her suit, she alleged that she lived three months at the Luyties home, and that she had an understanding with Luyties that he would marry her. She was living at Hotel Jefferson with her sister, the Marchioness de Rees-Janilli, when the suit was filed.

"I never thought that I was guilty," Luyties said in speaking of the settlement, "but if the case had gone to trial, as my lawyers urged me, it would have cost me $2000, and all I would have got from it would have been vindication. We compromised for $1500, saving me $500 and my time, which is valuable to me as a business man. As to being vindicated, I think the public can readily decide that—considering that such a small sum was accepted, when such a large sum was sued for."

MRS. ROWE CALLS MRS. EATON'S GRAFT CHARGE RIDICULOUS

No Mention Ever Made of Payments for Charity, Says Chicago Official at Hearing.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Denial that Mrs. Page Waller Eaton had been compelled to contribute part of her salary as a city employe to the relief of a relative of Mayor Thompson was made today by Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, head of the City Department of Public Welfare, and the person to whom Mrs. Eaton testified she had made the alleged payment.

Mrs. Rowe's denial was made from the witness chair before the Civil Service Commission, where Mrs. Eaton was quoted as saying that she had obtained information which exonerated Mayor Thompson from all knowledge of the payments which she said she had made to Mrs. Rowe for the alleged benefit of Mrs. Margaret E. Mivelaz the Mayor's sister-in-law.

Mrs. Rowe testified in contradiction to the story told by Mrs. Eaton, who had quoted the head of the Welfare Department as saying, "Mazie says you will have to come across," referring to the alleged payment of a third of her salary to Mrs. Rowe. Mrs. Eaton said "Mazie" was the Mayor's wife.

"On the occasion referred to," said Mrs. Rowe, "I told Mrs. Eaton that she was to be the Superintendent of Social Surveys in the Welfare Department. She was greatly pleased with the news. There was no mention of paying any money to charity. The name of Mrs. Mivelaz was not mentioned, nor was Mrs. Thompson spoken of either in connection with payments to charity or in any other connection."

Mrs. Rowe told of attending a meeting of the Council Finance Committee and being informed that either the Bureau of Employment of the Bureau of Social Service of the Welfare Department was to be abolished.

"I was asked which I would rather lose and I replied neither," she said "I said I would dather lose the Bureau of Survey, but that I would hate to see Mrs. Eaton's bureau abolished."

"Several days later the Surveys Bureau was abolished, and I told Mrs. Eaton I was sorry. She was in a vindictive mood, and replied, 'Mayor Thompson has to take care of me.'"

Rumors that the City Council would be asked by several Aldermen to abolish the Department of Public Welfare were current through the day.

In concluding her direct examination Mrs. Rowe characterized the charges made by Mrs. Eaton as "perfectly ridiculous." She said neither Mayor Thompson nor his wife had ever asked her for money to support a relative nor to contribute to any kind of a charity fund.

In reply to a question as to whether she had ever accepted from Mrs. Eaton a cash contribution of any kind, Mrs. Rowe said: "Absolutely not."

The hearing will be resumed Monday afternoon.

FRENCH-BELGIAN ART EXHIBIT AT THE MUSEUM ENDS TODAY

Big Crowd Expected to Take Last View of $500,000 Collection From Exposition.

The exhibition of French and Belgian art, which has been open to the public at the City Art Museum in Forest Park, will end today and the museum director has arranged to handle large crowds in the morning and afternoon, if the weather is favorable.

The remarkable collection, valued at about $500,000 was sent from the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and is making a circuit of a few of the principal cities of the United States. It will be exhibited next at the Albright Art Gallery in Buffalo.

NOTABLE SPEAKERS TO BE AT DEFENSE CONFERENCE HERE

Vanderbilt, Wickersham and Bacon Among Those Who Will Address Mayors.

The program for the National Conference of Mayors, in connection with the campaign of the National Security League for preparedness, which will be held in St. Louis next Friday and Saturday, was announced yesterday by Albert Bond Lambert, chairman of the program committee. The conference will be attended by Mayors of cities of more than 10,000 population in many parts of the United States, and by several men and women active in the work of defense bodies. Among them will be Cornelius Vanderbilt, chairman of the New York Defense Committee of One Thousand.

There will be four business sessions at the Planters Hotel Friday and Saturday and a mass meeting at the Odeon Friday night.

A conference of the 11 Mayors who issued the call for the meetings will be held in Mayor Kiel's office Thursday evening. At this conference there will be present the Mayors of New York, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Omaha, Milwaukee, Dallas, New Orleans and Portland, Ore.

Bryan Challenger Will Speak.

The first session, Friday morning, at the Planters Hotel, will be devoted to general and industrial preparedness. Mayor Kiel will deliver an address of welcome. Mayor James M. Curley of Boston will speak and Richard L. Metcalfe, former Governor of the Canal Zone, who recently challenged William J. Bryan to a debate on preparedness, will speak on "My Thought Is of America." A general discussion will be led by Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, president of the National Council of Women; Henry A. Wise Wood; Henry L. West of New York, executive secretary of the National Security League, and Mayor George J. Karb of Columbus, O. There will be short talks by Mayors of several cities.

The second session, Friday afternoon, will be devoted to the navy. Prof. Roland G. Usher of Washington University, author of "Pan-Germanism," will speak on "The European View of the Monroe Doctrine." Mayor C. E. Sebastian of Los Angeles will speak on "Protection on the Pacific Coast," and Mayor Martin Behrman of New Orleans will deliver an address. There will be a general discussion led by Mrs. A. J. George of Brookline, Mass., Mayor O. H. Bentley of Wichita, Kan., Mayor Jonas Fischer of Williamsport, Pa., and Mayor Louis P. Fuhrman of Buffalo. This will be followed by short talks by Mayors of other cities.

The third session, Saturday morning, will be devoted to the army. Frederick L. Huidekoper of Washington, D. C., a writer on military efficiency, will talk on "Military History and Policy," and Owen Miller of St. Louis, secretary of the American Federation of Musicians, will talk on "Labor and Preparedness." Mayor James G. Woodward of Atlanta will speak. A general discussion will be led by Mrs. Linden W. Bates of New York, chairman of the women's section of the movement for National defense; Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mayor T. L. Kirkpatrick of Charlotte, N. C., and Mayor C. H. Kelly of Toledo. There will be the usual short talks by mayors.

Wickersham and Bacon to Speak.

The fourth and final session will be held Saturday afternoon, with "Resolutions" for the theme. Following an address by Mayor James C. Dahlman of Omaha, William Marion Reedy will speak on "Apathy of the American Public." After a report by the resolutions committee, a general discussion will be led by George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General of the United States, and Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France.

A banquet will be given for the visiting mayors at Hotel Jefferson Saturday evening at 7 o'clock.

RED PIMPLES ON NECK AND FACE
Spread Rapidly on Shoulders and Body. Itching and Burning Intense. Completely
HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT
"My trouble began in small red pimples which soon grew larger, festered and came to a head, then dried and formed a crust somewhat of a yellowish color. My neck and face were entirely covered with eruptions which spread rapidly on my shoulders and body. They were in the form of blotches and the itching and burning were so intense that I was obliged to scratch and irritate the affected parts.

"A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They instantly cooled and relieved the trouble and one week's use completely healed me." (Signed) Miss Cecilia Wells, Valeene, Ind., July 21, 1915.

FORMER ST. LOUIS PROMOTER IS HELD ON ARSON CHARGE

Franklin H. Hamilton, Sought for Six Months, Arrested in Los Angeles, Cal.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 26.—Franklin H. Hamilton, 56 years old, a former mining promoter of St. Louis, for whose capture a $1000 reward was offered by an insurance company and whom detectives have sought for more than six months, was arrested here today on a charge of arson. He is held in default of $10,000 bail.

The specific complaint against Hamilton is that the $65,000 house owned by him at Pasadena was destroyed by fire last August under suspicious circumstances. In the testimony given to the local Board of Underwriters, it was alleged by a chauffeur, who is a witness for the State, that Hamilton had purchased eight 5-gallon cans of gasoline two days prior to the fire. When Hamilton attempted to collect the insurance on the property the matter was held up pending investigation. Hamilton then disappeared and a warrant for his arrest was issued following an indictment of the County Grand Jury.

Hamilton first came into prominence in this city in 1905 when the local police were investigating the mysterious death of Mrs. Nancy J. Milburn, a wealthy widow, formerly of St. Louis, who was a realty dealer in this city. Her body was found on the beach at Santa Monica on Feb. 22, 1905. An inquest indicated that the woman had been strangled, her neck having been broken and the body afterwards thrown from a pier into the sea.

Hamilton at the time aided the police in the investigation and volunteered the information at the time of her death he was kept to his home with a broken wrist which had been treated by two physicians. Hamilton stated that he received the injury by being thrown from a buggy.

Hamilton and Mrs. Milburn had been associated in a number of real estate deals in various parts of California.

"GERMANS COULD BLOW UP ALL SHIPS INTERNED HERE"

Customs Officials Admit Word of Plot Has Come to Them—Are Taking Precautions, Newspaper Says.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The American prints the following this morning:

"'If the Germans want to blow up their 80 ships interned in this country in event of war with the United States, there is nothing that can prevent them. A man could carry enough explosive aboard in his pocket to blow up each vessel.'

"This was the statement yesterday of a Government official when told the New York American had information that a plan was on foot to blow up every German ship interned in American ports should war be declared between the two countries.

"Customs officials admitted word of such a plot had come to them and said they were taking precautions. A thorough search of all the ships was made last week, and while the officials would not admit it was for the purpose of discovering explosives, one authority said:

"'We searched the vessels interned in Hoboken from stem to stern, and there are no explosives on board any of them. We can prevent them from making a dash to sea by keeping a check on the coal put on board. But if they decide to blow up the ships to keep them from falling into the hands of the United States, I can see no way to prevent it.'

"It was admitted that since the word of the plot had reached the Department of Justice, the neutrality squad of the port had been increased 100 per cent."

DECATUR COUPLE END LIVES AFTER HUSBAND SHOOTS WOMAN

Tragedy Result of Plot to Prove He Was Unfaithful, Says Wounded Woman.

DECATUR, Ill., Feb. 26.—William H. Norman, 36, and his wife, Bertha Norman, 27, ended their lives, and Mrs. Emma Harris, 28, was shot probably fatally by Norman in his home at 10:30 this morning. This afternoon Mrs. Harris made an ante-morten statement in which she said the shooting was the result of a plot she and Mrs. Norman had undertaken to prove unfaithfulness on the part of the husband.

According to Mrs. Harris, when they made the accusation, he drew a revolver and shot Mrs. Harris as she started out the door. He then turned the weapon on himself.

Mrs. Norman's father accused his daughter of doing the shooting a few minutes later and in reply she picked up the revolver and shot herself.

USHER SAYS U. S. SHOULD ENTER INTO FOREIGN ALLIANCE

One With England Would Be Most Advantageous, He Writes in New Book.

Prof. Roland G. Usher of Washington University, author of "Pan-Germanism," in a new book, "The Challenge of the Future" (Houghton-Mifflin & Co.), declares that the time has come when the United States must abandon its traditional isolation in international politics and form an alliance with at least one great European power. The most advantageous alliance this country could make, in the author's opinion, would be one with Great Britain.

That the present issue of preparedness is a vital one, the author admits, but he insists that preparedness for America means vastly more than military and naval development. Inevitable forces in modern life, economic as well as politic, he says, have made it impossible for us to remain aloof from a close participation in world politics and we cannot participate except we subscribe to the rules of the game as laid down in European diplomacy.

The older methods of American thought about international covenants are obsolescent, the writer says. The aggressive position of the United States at Panama, he declares, together with the vulnerability of the canal's position, our aggressive position in the Pacific, the aggressiveness of the Monroe Doctrine, all have put a new aspect to our relations with the world at large. They invite trouble, he thinks, and preparedness alone is a further invitation unless we form such international associations as unite the foremost nations of Europe.

Must Pay Price of Independence.

If we wish to remain entirely independent, he asserts, we must be prepared to pay the price of putting ourself upon such a military and naval basis as to make it possible for us to interfere in European affairs when necessary and become the controlling factor in international affairs. Such a position all our resources, in Prof. Usher's opinion, could not win us within less than 50 years of industrious preparation.

Pet American theories of our importance in world affairs and especially of our leadership, the writer hints, are really a sort of naive provincialism. He tells us that we are not nearly so important in the eyes of the rest of the world as we are in our own, and declares we never can be unless we are willing to sit around the council board with them and speak the same diplomatic language. So long as we try to remain aloof, the other Powers will be suspicious of us and will fail to understand our aspirations.

"There is in the world," he says, "only one Power whom we are able to serve in our present condition, only one Power who is at present likely to render us at present the services we really need. We can afford to pay the necessary price for an alliance with this Power. We can strengthen her and she can in turn strengthen us. Nor will an alliance in any way interfere with the security of both nations. Her position does not threaten ours, nor does ours menace hers.

Favors Alliance With England.

"An alliance with Great Britain will secure for us the services of the sea power necessary to our continued prosperity and will also place behind American interests the formidable influence and armed force of one of the most potent nations in the world. Such terms we could not extort from the sea power by any conceivable exhibition of force or by any economic pressure now within our power or likely to be within the next 20 years. An alliance with Great Britain should become in the future a cornerstone of our foreign policy."

Prof. Usher devotes several pages to showing what he considers the mutual interests of the two great English-speaking nations. For our part, he says, an alliance would remove the danger of foreign invasion so long as Britain controls the sea. For Great Britain it would mean a constant supply of food products, etc., even if every outside port in the Old World were closed against her.

No other European nation could offer us the same advantages, he reasons. Germany has already demonstrated in this war its ability to support itself when ringed by a wall of hostile armies. In case of war we might be of assistance to Germany, but Prof. Usher seems to think that even then the American navy would only "make a respectable auxiliary squadron for the German navy."

Alliances such as he suggests do not have to be made by formal treaty, according to the writer.

"The accepted method of international association," he writes, "has been for three centuries that of alliances, based in former generations on written treaties, but contained today in tacit verbal understandings, both indefinite and intangible. The allies recognize publicly and formally the consonance of fundamental interests, tacitly declare their belief that the other's actions will always presumably proceed from friendly intentions, that any disagreements may be explained and compromised. It is a pledge to arbitrate all internal differences. It is a guarantee of support when the other's interests are threatened by some other Power.

"Theoretical sovereignty has been waived by common consent, the paraphernalia of diplomacy pushed to one side and international decisions reached by private and even casual conversations at dinner tables and in drawing rooms, without the exchange even of letters. Formal diplomatic correspondence between nations has been reserved for matters of routine or crises so imminent that personal conference is already impossible and war practically decided upon."

COURTMARTIAL FOR VON RINTELEN SAID TO BE CONSIDERED

Germany Plans to Investigate American Charges Against Him, Von Wiegand Says.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—Via Amsterdam,—Feb. 26.—Franz von Rintelen, formerly a Lieutenant-Commander in the German Naval Reserve, who was indicted in America for alleged conspiracy and plotting against the American Government and whom the British took from the steamer Noordam last August while he was returning to Germany via Holland, may have to face a court-martial upon his release by England, either before or after the war ends.

I am reliably informed that steps are being taken to investigate the charges against Von Rintelen which are made in America. If it develops that there is any truth in the accusation that he attempted to foment a revolution in Mexico or conspired in any way with Mexican revolutionists, or otherwise against the United States, the German Government will insist probably that he be placed on trial.

Von Rintelen was sent to America with $500,000 as pruchasing agent in what is declared to be a purely military purchasing deal, which certain Americans in New York told him could be put through. From what appear to be trustworthy sources, I am informed that Von Rintelen's mission was absolutely nonpolitical and it is emphatically stated that it had nothing to do with the German secret service.

The allegation that he went beyond the object and limit of his mission, together with the accusations in America that he was plotting to foment trouble in Mexico, has stirred army, navy and Government circles. Therefore, the investigation will be ordered on the ground that his alleged activities were unwarranted and unauthorized and tended to discredit the German Government.

No attention will be paid here to the allegations and reports made (here certain words were deleted by the censor, but probably referred to Capt. von Papen, recently military attache, and Capt. Boy-ed, former naval attache), until a full report by them, on the ground that Von Rintelen's recent activities and machinations brought discredit upon them and had much to do with Washington's request for their recall.

It is not known here what Von Rintelen did with the $500,000 in his possession.

The belief which is expressed in New York and Washington that Von Rintelen was sent over to make trouble for Ambassador von Bernstorff by persons not in accord with the Ambassador's policy of conciliation between Germany and America appears to be without foundation.

NEW CLUBHOUSE OF M. A. A. TO OPEN WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Dinner Dance Next Evening for Members, Their Wives and Specially Invited Guests.

COST COMPLETE $900,000

Furnishing and Decorative Scheme and Detailed Description of the Room Division.

The new clubhouse of the Missouri Athletic Association, at Fourth street and Washington avenue, on which $650,000 has been expended for construction and $250,000 for furnishings, will be opened to members and their guests Wednesday night. A dinner dance Thursday night will be for members, their wives and specially invited guests.

The 10-story building, of which William B. Ittner and G. F. A. Brueggeman are the architects, is already recognized as one of the architectural ornaments of the downtown district. Its exterior, in the Florentine style, has been so much admired that there has been much curiosity as to the interior. Now that the furnishings and decorative scheme for the interior is practically complete, it is shown to be worthy of the exterior.

Frontage of the Building.

The building has a frontage of 112 feet 3 inches on Washington avenue and 150 feet on Fourth street. It is of steel and concrete and the materials of the walls are fixed Bedford stone and tapestry brick. The projecting cornice and the terra cotta balcony give an effect of strength to the structure, which depends upon 2500 tons of structural and re-enforced steel and concrete for its support. There are 70 concrete steel re-enforced columns.

The structure is fireproof construction, the only wood used in the building being the wainscoting, doors and the gymnasium floor and the floor in the private banquet hall, which will be used for a ballroom. The windows are fireproof glass. The building is equipped with three passenger elevators and one freight elevator, two inclosed fire stairways and three exterior fire escapes.

Grill Room Officials' Pride.

The grill room is the pride of the club officials. It is long, with a high ceiling, and is early Italian in architecture, decoration and furnishing, with traces of Gothic. The walls are of caen stone, topped with a frieze of 11 mural paintings by Edmund H. Wuerpel.

The private elevator—for members only—is back of the grand stairway and in the utility lobby. By means of this elevator members in negligee may reach the swimming pool, the Turkish bath rooms, the barber shop the grill room, the gymnasium and the lounge from their rooms, without meeting guests or going through the front part of the club.

The ladies' drawing room, to the left of the main lobby, has two entrances, one from the vestibule and one from the lobby. The walls are old ivory enamel, the hangings black and golden brown. The hardware—door knobs and so on, is hand-chased 14k gold. The lights are modern French in design of gold. The furniture is black enamel with touches of gold and black mohair upholstering.

Two-Story Dining Room.

The main dining room is south of the second floor lobby. It is 110x52 feet, and 21 feet high, with a seating capacity of 1000. It extends the full length of the Washington avenue front of the building and is two stories high. The wainscoting is taupe enamel, with black bands. The walls are covered with cut linen in soft old blue and natural linen and flax colors. This fabric has the appearance of cut velvet, and is very rich. The high English windows, which extend from the floor to the ceiling, are leaded glass. The large mirrors at the west end of the room are treated in the same manner, giving an outdoor effect on three sides. Adjoining the dining room on the Fourth street side is the breakfast room. Its walls and ceiling are of antique oak, as are the columns. The room is 90x36 feet, with a seating capacity of 250.

The fourth floor is for the use of men. The large billiard room occupies the Washington avenue side of the building, and is immediately over the main dining room. There are 20 billiard tables. The chairs are high-backed antique oak, with crimson leather upholstery.

The men's lounge is on this floor. This is the most expensively furnished room in the club. The wainscoting is high and of dark unstained oak. This is the only room with a fireplace. It is separated by glass doors from the card room.

Bath and Rest Rooms.

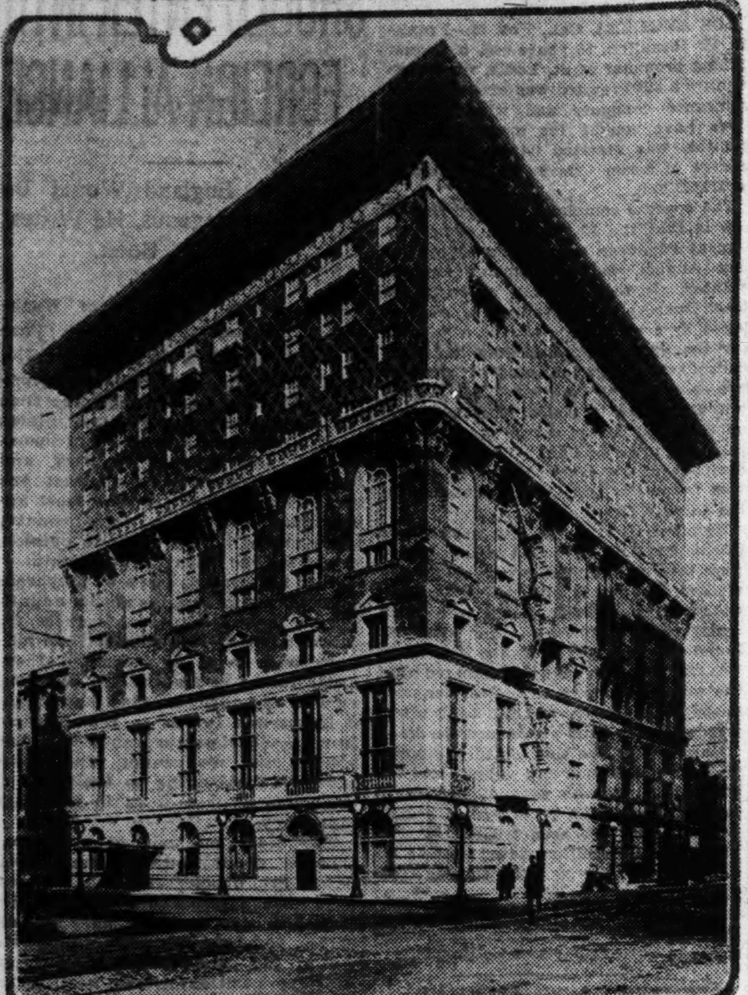
The Turkish bath, showers, rest rooms and 11 dressing rooms are on this floor, and connected by means of the private elevator and stairs with the swimming pool and gymnasium on the floor above.

The gymnasium is on the Washington avenue side. It is 90x52 feet and 30 feet high—or three stories; equipped with all manner of apparatus, and a circular running track of 20 laps to the mile, cork carpeted. The physical director's office opens off the gymnasium, also the small private exercise room.

The boxing room, with padded walls and matted floor, is to the west of the running track on the mezzanine, or fifth floor. A balcony is on the north and west sides of the gymnasium, upon which open six handball courts. The gymnasium and other exercise rooms are ventilated by means of windows and exhaust fans. The air is washed, heated and tempered.

The swimming pool is on this floor, which is [illegible]0 feet, and from 4½ to 9 feet deep. It is of steel, concrete reinforced, and of sea-green tile. The floor around the pool is of non-slipping tile in brown and gray tones, giving the effect of a beach. The pool contains 120,000 gallons of water, which is filtered and sterilized by the violet-ray system every 24 hours. It is lighted by day and by direct and reflected electric lights. There are 1000 lockers on this floor for the use of men and dressing rooms for ladies.

New M. A. A. Club, Which Cost $900,000, Including Furnishings



Two mornings of each week the pool, gymnasium and Turkish baths are to be kept exclusively for the use of wives of the members.

The laundry is on the fifth floor. All of the linen of the club and the athletic suits of the members will be laundered here.

The silence room is on the sixth floor on the Fourth street side. This room is furnished with couches and comfortable chairs. Here members may rest after luncheon or take an afternoon nap.

Private Sitting Rooms.

There are 178 bedrooms and 12 private sitting rooms, which occupy all of the seventh, eighth, ninth and part of the sixth and tenth floors. There are 100 private baths, and every room has hot and cold running water, a deep closet, shaving mirror and even the hoog for the razor strop. The furniture was especially designed for men. The chiffonier resembles very much in appearance the lowboy of colonial days, but its arrangement of drawers and cabinets is designed to fill the needs of modern man. The walls of the bedrooms are light French brown enamel.

The racquet and squash courts are on the tenth floor. The walls of the racquet court are covered with a special composition. The squash court walls a maple. The bowling alleys and rifle ranges are in the basement.

There are 2500 chairs, 200 tables, and 2500 lights, and 15,000 yards of carpet were used for the rooms and halls. The table linen was woven in Belfast, Ireland, and has the club emblem in the center. The silver is of special design, and was made for the club. There are 13,250 pieces. The china was made for the club, and there are 25,000 pieces, which cost $7000. The glassware was made for the club at a cost of $2500 for 6000 pieces.

SUIT BROUGHT TO REVOKE CHICAGO COLISEUM LICENSE

Action Taken on Ground That Law Prohibits Theaters Within 200 Feet of Churches.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Mandamus proceedings seeking the revocation of the theater licenses of 16 theaters and the Coliseum, in compliance with an ordinance prohibiting the operation of theaters within a radius of 200 feet of churches, schools or hospitals, were filed against Mayor William Hale Thompson here today.

Five of the theaters are in the heart of the downtown district. The Coliseum has been chosen as the meeting place of the Republican National Convention next June.

UNION ASKS STATE TO ANNUL STEPHENS PRINTING AWARD

St. Louis Typographical Body Says Union Men Were Dismissed.

The St. Louis local of the Typographical Union yesterday mailed resolutions to State officials asking that the contract for printing the reports of the Supreme Court, which was recently awarded to the Stephens Publishing Co. of Columbia, Mo., be revoked, and that E. W. Stephens, head of the company, be removed from membership on the Capitol Commission. The resolutions were mailed to Secretary of State Roach, Auditor Gordon, Attorney-General Barker and Gov. Major.

The union asks for annulment of the printing contract on the ground that Stephens' representation to the committee which awarded the contract that he employed union workmen aided him in getting the work, but that shortly after the award was made he dismissed all of the union employes in his shop. The terms of the contract are violated by the employment of other workmen, the union argues.

His open hostility to organized labor and disregard for the principle of arbitration unfits Stephens for membership on the Capitol Commission, which may have to deal with labor disputes during the construction of the new capitol, the union holds, and in another resolution Gov. Major is asked to remove him from the commission.

Charles Hertenstein, president of the St. Louis local of the Typographical Union, said Stephens is now operating his shop with nonunion help, most of whom are Chicago printers. The company discharged all of its union employes Feb. 12, he said.

Stephens' employes asked for more pay in a new contract they sought to have him sign, it is said, the increase sought being $1 a week for the first year under a five-year contract, with an increase of 50 cents per week for the other four years.

The Stephens company was not the lowest bidder for the printing work awarded it, but was considered by the commission the "lowest and best" bidder.

Hertenstein said Secretary of State Roach recently told him Stephens' statement to the commission that he employed union workmen and equipment which were superior to those of other bidders, had virtually won him the contract.

Hertenstein said the Typographical Union probably will advocate the establishment of a State printing plant. The cost of printing State documents could be materially reduced if the State had its own shop, he said.

Stephens, when reached by long-distance telephone at his home in Columbia last night by the Post-Dispatch, said he would not discuss either his action in refusing to recognize the union further or the union's action in passing the resolutions. He had been informed, he said, that such resolutions would be passed, so they were not unexpected.

BLEWETT FOR INVESTIGATING ARMY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

Tells of Educators in Convention Favoring Commission to Make Report on Plan Advocated Here.

Superintendent of Instruction Blewett of the public schools, on his return yesterday from the convention in Detroit of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association, which closed Friday, said one of the most important bits of work done by the association was the adoption of a resolution against introducing compulsory military training in the high schools until the merits of such training can be thoroughly investigated by a commission.

Military training has been advocated for the pupils of the local high schools, and its adoption is now being considered by the Board of Education. There have been several hearings held by the Committee on Instruction at which persons opposed to the movement appeared.

Blewett said the resolution to hold in abeyance any action on military training until a commission thoroughly investigates all its points, good and bad, was adopted unanimously by the educators. More than 4500 teachers from all over the country attended the convention.

PLEADS GUILTY TO SECOND DEGREE MURDER, GETS 10 YEARS

Thomas J. Killoren's Defense Gains Modification of Charge Upon Which He Went to Trial.

Thomas J. Killoren, 42 years old, a laborer, of 6329 Easton avenue, was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary in Judge Kimmel's court yesterday, after pleading guilty to second degree murder. Killoren shot and killed Joseph Miley, 31 years old, a teamster, Oct. 22, last, in the stables of the Hunkins-Willis Lime and Cement Co., Eighteenth and Austin streets.

A charge of first degree murder was placed against Killoren and he went to trial Friday. Testimony showed that he went to the stable and asked for Miley. A moment later Miley came in and was asked by Killoren if his name was Joseph Miley. Upon his replying in the affirmative Killoren drew a revolver and shot him through the heart.

It was also brought out that Killoren's act was due to a belief that Miley was friendly with Mrs. Killoren, who was living apart from her husband and with whom Miley boarded. Killoren had also heard that Miley used profane language in the presence of Mamie, his 12-year-old daughter. Upon these facts Assistant Circuit Attorney Moore said he was willing to reduce the charge to second degree murder, and Killoren's attorney advised a plea of guilty.

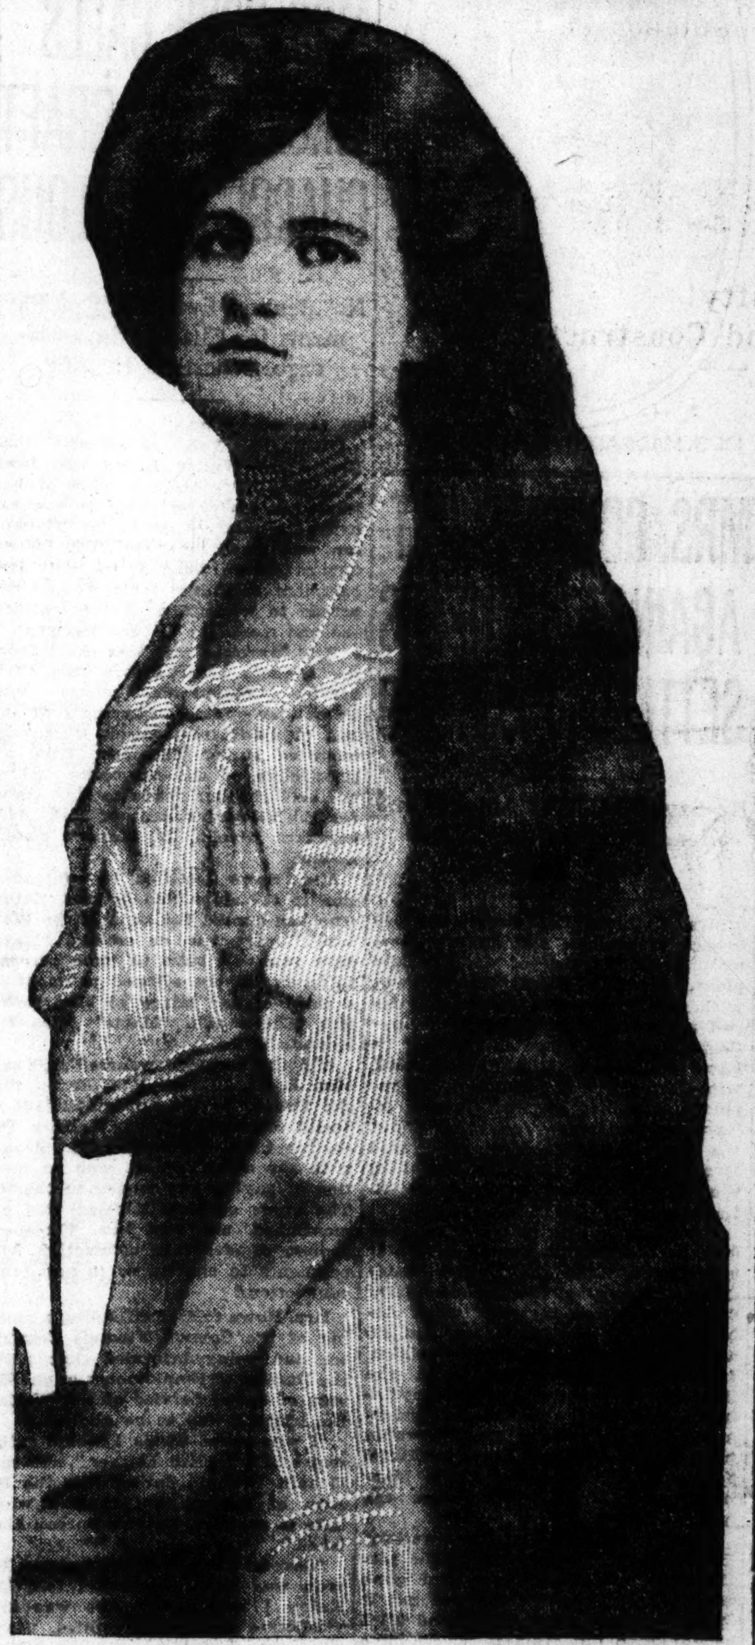
GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25-Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!



If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

ITCH-ECZEMA FREE TRIAL

(Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk-Crust, Weeping Skin, etc.)

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY and when I say cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

BROOMMAKER RUN DOWN BY BROADWAY STREET CAR DIES

Motorman Says Fred Schulte Became Confused After Starting to Cross Tracks.

Fred Schulte, 64 years old, a broommaker of 2819 South Third street, who was run down by a Broadway car in front of 3601 South Broadway, Friday night, died yesterday morning in the city hospital of a fractured skull.

Henry B. Moss of 3841 Texas avenue, the motorman, told the police that Schulte, after starting to cross the tracks, looked up, became confused and then started to cross back. Moss said he dropped the fender and applied the brakes, but could not stop the car in time. Moss, after his arrest, gave bond to appear in the Court of Criminal Correction on March 2.

SALAZAR SINGS AND ACTS ROLE OF CANIO FINELY

Forced to Repeat Aria at Close of Last Performance of San Carlo Company.

BY RICHARD L. STOKES.

THE San Carlo Opera Company's final performance, last night at the Odeon, of its two weeks of popular-priced opera, was distinguished by Manuel Salazar's remarkable singing and acting of the role of Canio in "I Pagliacci." Old opera goers expressed the opinion that his rendition of the favorite tenor aria, "Recitar, mentre preso dal delirio," was equal vocally and superior in dramatic intensity to any heard in this city for a long while.

As happened in Salazar's performance of the role of Don Jose in "Carmen," he was able to make the audience forget that he was merely acting the part, and compelled it to believe that he was in reality the broken-hearted mountebank. The racking sobs and bitter laughter of his big aria did not seem the pretense of the stage, but the overpowering grief of actuality. However, he portrayed this role, so susceptible to overacting and lachrymose sentimentality, with a fine restraint which added to its poignant effect.

An unusual ovation rewarded his interpretation of the aria. The curtain descended, and the applause continued. The director of the orchestra and the musicians began filing out; and the handclapping redoubled. The lights of the auditorium were turned on; and shouts burst forth all over the house. Then the lights were turned out, the musicians returned to their places, and Salazar sang his song again, and even better than the first time.

Handicapped in Both Operas.

He also sang the part of Turridu in "Cavalleria Rusticana," and in both operas was handicapped by the inadequacy of the singers who played opposite him—Elda Vettori in the Mascagni work, and Myrna Sharlow in Leoncavallo's most famous opera. Miss Vettori's voice again proved unequal to the dramatic demands of Santuzza's score; Miss Sharlow was tolerable vocally as Nedda, but her acting was stiff and wooden.

Angelo Antola repeated last week's triumph in the part of Tonio in "I Pagliacci," and won an encore by his singing of the Prologue. Carolina Zawner took the role of Lola, for Stella de Mette reported having injured her arm yesterday morning in a fall at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Mette of 3800 Connecticut street. Anna Haase was good in the part of Mama Lucia; L. Dellamolle sang pleasingly as Silvio, and Luciano Rossini was a capable Beppe.

The largest audience of the entire engagement was present, it being nearly a capacity house. For the first time virtually all of the boxes were occupied. Fortune Gallo, manager of the company, said that the receipts for the two weeks did not quite equal those of last year, but that a profit remained after the payment of all expenses.

TOMORROW WILL BE DONATION DAY FOR ST. LOUIS POOR

Each United Railways Car Will Have Box to Receive Coins of Givers.

Tomorrow will be Donation day, for the relief of the poor. Donation boxes will be placed in all street cars, so that everyone who rides may have an opportunity to give. It is said that the needs for the poor are great.

The contributions will be used by the St. Louis Provident Association, the St. Vincent de Paul Society and the Federated Jewish Charities, which are providing for more than 1200 families that the hard times of the past two years have left destitute. Food, fuel, clothing, shelter and care for the sick must be provided for these and others or there will be intense suffering, it is said.

U. R. County Cars Will Have Donation Boxes.

The United Railways will include St. Louis County in its plans for Donation day tomorrow, and will place gift boxes on all county cars to receive contributions for the needy of the county. The St. Louis County Welfare Association will disburse the funds received.

Bakst Window at Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. Attracts Shoppers.

Shoppers in the downtown district have shown keen interest during the last few days in the Bakst window in the Stix, Baer & Fuller store in which some of the unusual designs of this famous Russian artist are displayed upon life-sized figures in the midst of surroundings of Oriental magnificence.

Bakst is the artist who designed the costumes used in the Ballet Russe which has captivated the critics in all the cities where it has appeared as yet and whose arrival in St. Louis is eagerly awaited by all admirers of art. The daring designs of the Russian have provided an influence that is being felt greatly in all lines of dress. In his costumes he makes a use of metals with a lavishness that is all but barbaric.

WOMAN AGITATOR SENTENCED

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Nellie Best, secretary of the Women's Anti-Conscription League, was sentenced today to six months' imprisonment in the Westminster Police Court for circulating literature urging men not to enlist. The scenes in the court were reminiscent of the trials of militant suffragettes. Women sympathizers of Mrs. Best made a great outcry when sentence was imposed.

On being asked whether she was represented by counsel, Mrs. Best said: "I am defended by the Lord, who told us not to kill."

COMMISSION PLAN FOR U. S. WATERWAY WORK AGREED UPON

President Expected to Approve Change as Recommended by Cabinet Men and Senators.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Adoption of the commission plan of dealing with waterway problems of the country which would include continuing annual appropriations, was agreed upon today as a general policy to be recommended to the President in a conference between Cabinet officials and a committee of Senators.

Secretaries Houston and Redfield, who were named by the President with former Secretary Garrison to investigate the problem, and Senators Newlands, Broussard and Ransdell, participated in the conference. The policy agreed upon it is believed will be recommended to Congress by President Wilson in the near future.

The agreement proposes that there shall be given special immediate attention to the lower Mississippi River below Cairo and that approximately $10,000,000 shall be appropriated for 1917 for this project. In accepting this proposal the advocates of levee appropriations were won over to the general commission policy.

What annual river and harbor improvements will be recommended was not finally agreed upon. The Newlands-Broussard waterway measure, which would appropriate $60,000,000 annually, probably will be taken as the basis for an agreement on that.

Under the plan there would be created a "waterway commission," consisting of the President, the Secretaries of War, Interior, Agriculture and Commerce and the chairman of the Board of River Regulation. Chairmen of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Isthmian Canal Commission are proposed as members exofficio.

The commission would have direction and control over all waterway projects and expenditures.

Commission in Full Control.

All features of river and inland waterways regulation would be placed in the commission's hands, including hydroelectro power development, confining the navigable rivers to their channels by means of levees and the prevention of deforestation and soil erosion.

The recommendations will be submitted to the President in time to have them enacted into law at the present session and to substitute them for the Rivers and Harbors appropriation bill. It is probable that the President will submit a special message on the subject.

NORMAN HAPGOOD TELLS WHY COLLIER'S HIRED BRANDEIS

Because the Publication Wanted to Support Glavis, Former Editor Says.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Norman Hapgood, former editor of Collier's Weekly, today told the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee investigating the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis to the Supreme Court that the reason Collier's had employed Brandeis in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation was because Collier's wanted to support L. R. Glavis, whose charges against Ballinger it had published and for whom Brandeis ostensibly appeared.

No attempt had been made to deceive anyone about Brandeis' employment, Hapgood said.

Iron Is Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Power of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 200 Per Cent Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a specialist of New York, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, rundown conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and all other druggists.—ADV.

90% PREFER THE PIANOLA

DURING recent years there has been a rapid growth of interest among the leading schools and colleges in regard to the use of player-pianos for teaching music. Notwithstanding the many different makes now on the market, over ninety per cent of the educational institutions prefer the Pianola.

The purchase of a player-piano is an even more serious matter with colleges and schools than with the private individual. It is of first importance for an educational institution to give its pupils the advantage of the best equipment that it is possible to obtain for its money.

That the Pianola should be so universally selected by those most competent to make comparisons and least likely to be misled, furnishes convincing evidence of its genuine musical superiority.

We are the Exclusive Representatives of the Pianola

The Pianola is handled exclusively in this city by us. You cannot see it or buy it at any other store. We have the complete Pianola line. This embraces the six finest pianos in the world at their prices, all containing the genuine Pianola-action.

For while there is but one make of player-piano legally entitled to the name "Pianola," it is made in six models, viz:

The Steinway Pianola
The Steck Pianola
The Stuyvesant Pianola
The Wheelock Pianola
The Stroud Pianola
The famous Weber Pianola

The prices are from $550. Purchasable on moderate monthly payments and liberal allowances made on other instruments taken in exchange.

FIFTY GERMAN EDITORS HOLD SECRET MEETING IN CHICAGO

Former Congressman Bartholdt Among Those Present; Coming Campaign Said to Have Been Discussed.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Fifty editors and publishers of the leading German newspapers of the United States met behind closed doors here today. Another session of the conference will be held tomorrow. The editors decided not to make public the purpose of the meeting nor to divulge the proceedings.

The conference, according to the city editor of the Staats Zeitung, was called by Horace L. Brand, publisher of that paper; Paul F. Mueller of the Abendpost, Chicago, and Bernard H. Ridder, of the Staats-Zeitung-Abendblatt, New York.

Among those present was former Congressman Richard Bartholdt of St. Louis. In political circles it was reported that the coming presidential campaign was under discussion.

It was said a statement probably would be given out tomorrow.

EAT LESS MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT OR YOU FEEL BACKACHY AND RHEUMATIC

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

TRIES TO SAVE HIS BRIDE FROM GOSSIP AND CAUSES HER DEATH

Chicago Doctor Admits He Performed Illegal Operations on Judge's Daughter.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—To save his wife and himself from gossip, Dr. Lester Long, young physician, performed three illegal operations on the wife, the last of which resulted in her death last night, according to a statement Long made to the police today.

Dr. Long married Miss Helen M. Turner, daughter of Circuit Judge C. M. Turner, of Cambridge, Ill. He sobbed in his cell at a police station today as he admitted that he had operated on his wife because the stork was coming soon.

"We were married only at Christmas. We couldn't face the gossips at Toulon, where I lived, and at Cambridge, her home," Dr. Long said, the police declared.

Long was graduated from Northwestern University last year and was an interne at a local hospital.

Judge Turner came here today from Cambridge and visited his son-in-law at the police station. The young interne, his eyes swollen with weeping, his face haggard, stared for a moment at his father-in-law. Then he rushed forward impulsively, sobbing and clutched the elder man's arms with both hands.

"I'm sorry," he cried, "I'm sorry."

Judge Turner sought to comfort his son-in-law, patting him on the shoulder. He said he had nothing but sympathy for the young man. He avoided mentioning the tragedy and suggested that arrangements be made to take the body to Cambridge. Long acquiesced readily.

Long was held on a charge of manslaughter by a Coroner's jury and his bond fixed at $5000.

G. O. P. LEADERS FOR ROOT; MOOSE ARE AGAINST HIM

Of Twenty Republicans Who Send Views to Post-Dispatch 17 Favor New York Man.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27 (Sunday).—The World this morning prints the replies of 20 members of the Republican National Committee, and 32 members of the Progressive National Committee, to telegrams of inquiry as to their attitude toward Elihu Root as the Republican nominee for the presidency. The inquiries were sent out, following the notable speech made by Root at the Republican State convention, which has been taken as a "keynote" speech by Republicans throughout the country.

Of the 20 Republican committeemen who replied to the inquiry, 17 were highly favorable to Senator Root as a candidate, one was noncommittal, and two were sceptical as to his strength with the voters.

Cf the 32 Progressive committeemen who replied, all but three expressed opposition to Root, and indicatde the belief that those who voted for Roosevelt in 1912 would not support Root this year. Most of the Progressives referred to Root's part in the Chicago convention of 1912 as still being resented by those against whom Root ruled as chairman. Those who commended his recent speech added that he was merely saying the things which Col. Roosevelt had said before him.

Outspoken Against Root.

The only Republican committeeman who makes an outspoken expression against Root is Henry G. Wasson of Pennsylvania. His objection is that Root could not get the Progressive vote back into the Republican party, and hence could not win. R. B. Howell of Nebraska says Root "would evoke no enthusiasm." W. P. Jackson of Maryland is noncommittal.

P. D. Barker, Republican committeeman from Alabama, eulogizes Root as "the greatest living American." Hubert Work of Colorado says Root would command public confidence in international questions. Henry Jackson of Georgia says, "I join all Republicans in the high esteem in which they hold Elihu Root," but says nothing more definite as to his candidacy.

Roy O. West of Illinois says: "I consider Senator Root one of the country's greatest men. He would make an admirable President. I believe, however, the Illinois delegation will support Senator Sherman's candidacy." West is the only one who makes definite mention of a state "favorite son."

John W. McCulloch of Kentucky says Root would poll the full Republican vote and would attract a large support from other parties. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey says, "I have been in favor of Root for President for years. I am for him now, when the country needs him more than ever. In my opinion there is no other man who can serve the country so ably or with whom the honor of the nation would be so safe."

H. D. Maxson of Nevada says Root told him recently that "under no circumstances would he be a candidate for President." He adds that Root has the confidence and admiration of the leading Republicans of the West.

Oregon Man for Root.

R. E. Williams of Oregon says Root would satisfy Pacific Coast Republicans. C. H. Burke of South Dakota says Root could win if he were nominated, and Newell Sanders of Tennessee says he would be a great President. H. F. McGregor of Texas says Texans would sacrifice their personal choice, under the prevailing conditions, to vote for Root, in view of the needs of the country.

Senator Reed Smoot, national committeeman for Utah, says: "Taking under consideration the questions that will have to be met by the national administration, there is no man in America better prepared or more capable of meeting them than ex-Senator Root."

Earle S. Kinsley of Vermont speaks of Root as the greatest American statesman, and says Vermont would give him a large majority. Alvah H. Martin of Virginia says he is advocating an uninstructed delegation, but that he knows of no one better fitted for the presidency than Root. S. A. Perkins of Washington speaks of Root as one of the greatest of American statesmen. V. L. Highland of West Virginia expresses the hope that the party may unite on Root, and George E. Peyton of Wyoming says "Root would get more votes from the thinking people of all parties than any other candidate."

The only members of the Progressive National Committee who made expressions favorable to Root were J. F. Cleveland of Arizona and P. L. Flannigan of Nevada. Cleveland replied that he considered Root one of the ablest of statesmen, and good presidential material, but that he believed either Roosevelt or Hughes would be representative of a greater number of Americans. Flannigan says Root is a great man, but that the West is for Roosevelt.

B. F. Bridge of Mississippi does not mention Root in his reply, which says that he is for "Roosevelt, Hughes, or any good man that loves America, to beat Wilson."

The other Progressives who replied are outspoken against Root. Medill McCormick of Illinois says Root could not be elected. R. G. Leeds of Indiana says he is too old (his 71st birthday was the 15th of this month), and that he is incapable of understanding the progressive spirit of the times. William Flynn of Pennsylvania says Root, with his record, cannot qualify for Progressive support. Joseph M. Dixon of Montana suggests that Root would make "a better Secretary of State in the cabinet of Theodore Roosevelt." N. W. Williams of Maryland makes the same suggestion. Cecil A. Lyon of Texas says Progressives could not consistently support Root. Irving R. Kirkwood of Kansas City, committeeman for Missouri, says Root's record at the Chicago convention disqualifies him still. John J. Sullivan of Ohio says he is for Theodore E. Burton.

The other Progressives who made replies which were unfavorable to Root, or which were so full of Roosevelt that Root was not mentioned, were J. O. Thompson of Alabama, C. H. Rowell of California, I. M. DeLong of Colorado, P. L. Anderson of Florida, H. G. Hastings of Georgia, J. M. Ingersoll of Idaho, Leslie Combs of Kentucky, M. D. Purdy of Minnesota, Nathan Merriam of Nebraska, William Savacool of New Hampshire, I. K. Taylor of New Jersey, A. Y. Moore of North Dakota, G. C. Priestly of Oklahoma, H. W. Coe of Oregon, E. F. Tuttle of Rhode Island, T. H. Wanamaker of South Carolina, G. Y. Taylor of Tennessee, Moroni Heiner of Utah, H. N. Jackson of Vermont, Lorenzo Dow of Washington and R. D. Carey of Wyoming.

COUNTY WARNING TO AUTOISTS

All Not Having 1916 Plates After March 1 to Be Arrested.

Sheriff Bode of St. Louis County announced yesterday that beginning March 1 drivers of automobiles not bearing 1916 license plates in St. Louis County will be arrested on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without a license. He said no excuses would be accepted. Chief of Police Young several days ago announced also that the automobile license law would be enforced in St. Louis beginning March 1.

DEMOCRATS TO PICK DELEGATES TO STATE CONVENTION MARCH 14

Chairman McClung Fixes Date for County Gatherings and St. Louis Ward Meetings.

Chairman McClung of the Democratic State Committee, in a formal call yesterday set March 14 as the date for the county conventions and St. Louis ward meetings to choose delegates to the State convention at Jefferson City, March 21. The State convention will elect a national committeeman for Missouri and four delegates and alternates to the national convention at St. Louis in June.

Each county will be entitled to one deelgate for every 250 votes it cast for Woodrow Wilson in 1912. The St. Louis delegation is fixed at 239. The call provides that if March 14 should be registration day in Kansas City the Jackson County convention shall be held March 15.

In Jasper and St. Louis counties delegates will be chosen by representative districts, and in St. Louis by wards. County committees and the St. Louis City Committee are authorized to decide each for itself whether it shall have preliminary mass meetings or primaries.

WOMAN GETS $6000 DAMAGES

Wagon Owner and United Railways Co-Defendants in Suit.

Mrs. Lilly E. Shelton of 1417a Arlington avenue yesterday obtained a judgment by agreement in Circuit Judge Jones' court for $6000 against the United Railways Co. and John C. Steinlage, each defendant being assessed one-half.

Mrs. Shelton had sued for $25,000 damages on account of injuries received by her in a collision Oct. 7, 1914, between a street car of which she was a passenger, and a wagon, at Finney avenue and Whittier street. The wagon was owned by Steinlage.

SMITH-REIS

"The Old Reliable Victrola Dealers"

For those who want Quality

We recommend this latest 1916 Model 215—Smith & Barnes Player-Piano—It's a wonderful value at . . . . $495 (EASY TERMS.)

THIS magnificent instrument is a veritable Musical Triumph—an instrument that combines musical capabilities that will delight the most careful critic. "What wonderful tone! How simple it is to operate! How beautiful the casing!"—everyone says who sees it.

This splendid instrument appeals particularly to those, who have bought Player-Pianos before—who know somewhat of their principles of construction; these are the people we want to examine this latest model SMITH & BARNES. We want to show them and prove to them that, within the magnificent casing of this instrument, is a player-action fully the equal of many instruments shown elsewhere at $700, $800 and even $900.

It is economy to buy such a good instrument as this, aside from the satisfaction of its beauty of tone—its superiority of player-action and the knowledge that you possess an instrument of National reputation, known from the Atlantic to the Pacific and the Gulf to the Great Lakes.

It is economy, because this instrument will stand up under the hardest kind of service for years and years to come; ten years from now this beautiful Player-Piano will be giving the same pleasure and the same satisfaction as the very first day it comes into your home.

$495 is a mighty low price for this splendid Player-Piano. True, it is possible to buy a Player-Piano for less money than we ask, but you will never, never match this quality under a great deal more than we ask, and we stand prepared to prove this statement under the broad glare of comparison with any Player-Piano anywhere.

All black-tread Tires are NOT made—of "BARELOOT" Rubber

GOODRICH SAFETY TREAD

THIS message is written in the Spirit of Prophesy.

A few months ago there were no black-tread Tires on the Market except Silvertown Cord Tires, which we alone manufacture, under exclusive patents.

On January 1st there were no black-tread Tires on the market EXCEPT these same Silvertown Cord Tires, (which we are not yet equipped to produce in half the quantity the market calls for) and,— —Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—made from the self-same "Barefoot Rubber" as we have been putting into the Treads of Goodrich Silvertowns.

But,—Soon there will be not only a horde of "Near-Cord," Thread-Fabric "Cord," and other IMITATION "Cord" Tires, but there will also be the customary crop of "Black-Tread" FABRIC Tire Imitations.

THESE black-tread IMITATIONS will resemble Goodrich "Barefoot" (Fabric) Tires as superficially and remotely as the Five-to-Seven layer Thread-Fabric "Cord" imitations resemble the Two-layer real Cord "Silvertowns."

They will resemble them exteriorly just enough to trade upon the Market created by the merit of the Originals.

While Imitation is said to be "the sincerest flattery" we have had such a surfeit of that kind of flattery that we want to discourage it.

And this is to tell the People, before our Black-Tread "flatterers" put their "me-too-Black-Treads" on the Market, that the essence of Goodrich "BAREFOOT-RUBBER" Value to Consumers lies not in the COLOR but in its composition.

It lies in the especially devised Texture, Flexibility, Cling-quality, Stretch, Lightness and Resilience of that "Barefoot Rubber" alloy which, through years of Research, WE developed to match the marvellous Flexibility, Resilience and Power-conservation of our Two-layer-Cord "Silvertown" Tires.

Without that Silvertown EXPERIENCE we might never have known, or fully understood, the enormous advantage of such a Clingy, Stretchy, Light-weight, and Responsive RUBBER in all Tires.

COLOR alone would have been little help to us in making Silvertown Rubber Treads stand-up in the tremendous ENDURANCE Tests which the 100-Mile-per-hour-Races of 1915 provided.

And color alone,—Black, White, Red, or Gray—can do little for the Consumer who buys a "Me-too" Black-Tread Tire, of imitated make, on the assumption that all Black-Tread Tires must be made of similar materials.

The marvellous "Barefoot Rubber" now used in Goodrich FABRIC Tires (as well as in Goodrich "Silvertowns") is black only because we elected that color, primarily for distinction and association with our SILVERTOWN CORD Tires.

That COLOR has nothing whatever to do with the surprising Stretch, Cling-quality,—Light-weight, and MILEAGE of the "Barefoot-Rubber" alloy.

When, therefore, the usual crop of "flattering" Imitations sprouts upon the Market DON'T assume that OTHER Black-Tread Tires have in them the "BAREFOOT-RUBBER" which made the enormous ENDURANCE of Silvertown Cord Tires possible in the 90 to 103 Mile-per-Hour Races of 1914-15.

NOTICE.

"No Concern in America made, or sold, during its latest fiscal year, nearly so many Motor-Car Tires as did The B. F. Goodrich Co.

"Our published Challenge, still unanswered, proves this."

GOODRICH FABRIC Tires for 1916, with all the added Value that "Barefoot Rubber" gives to them, will be sold on the same "FAIR-LIST" price basis, as we established in January, 1915, through our propaganda against Padded Price-Lists.

No Tires on the Market, Size for Size, and Type for Type, are LARGER—and none more generously good at any price.

"Barefoot Rubber" is now made into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich "Silvertown Tires,"—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Motor Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires and Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels.

Get a Sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Dealer's or Branch. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

CUBS PAY $10,000 FOR GENE PACKARD, KANSAS CITY STAR

Weeghman's Bid Is High in Final Auction of Fed Players at Chicago Meeting, Called to Disband Outlaws.

FEDERAL COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE O. B.

James Gilmore Is Asked to Give U. S. Authorities Papers in Anti-Trust Suit Withdrawn in Judge Landis' Court.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Gene Packard, left-handed pitcher with the Kansas City Federal League club last year, will play with the Chicago Nationals this year, and Pitcher Miles Main, teammate of Packard last year, will throw for the St. Paul American Association club. Packard sold for $10,000.

The transfers were announced following a meeting of the Federal League magnates here today.

Two other sales were announced. Nick Allen, catcher, and Scheer, outfielder with Newark last year, were sold to the Milwaukee club of the association.

Another Meeting Booked.

The final winding up of the league's affairs was postponed three weeks owing to the inability of Ed Gwinner of the Pittsburg club to be present today. At the meeting in three weeks action will be taken to clear up the small indebtedness remaining and all other details which were proposed today.

George Stovall, manager of the Kansas City Federals, met the Federal League club owners and received assurance from Harry Sinclair and others that "he would be taken care of." It was reported that a place would be found for Stovall in one of the big leagues.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Timme of Milwaukee, Norton of St. Paul and Cantillon of Minneapolis, talked with Charles Weeghman of the Cubs about the future of Roger Bresnahan and the proposed transfer of the Cleveland Association to Toledo, but the result of the conference was not announced.

The Federal Trade Commission is planning an investigation of organized baseball and its relations to the Sherman anti-trust law, according to a statement made today by James A. Gilmore, who arrived from New York to attend the final meeting of the Federal League magnates.

Baltimore Feds May Sue.

Officers of the commission at Washington, Mr. Gilmore said, have asked the Federal League for its papers filed in the suit here last winter and recently dismissed by Judge Landis, following the peace compact. Only a reorganization of the methods of conducting the game will insure avoidance of future litigation, Mr. Gilmore predicted. He cited the Baltimore Federal League club as a possible plaintiff in new suits, and also hinted the Ballplayers' Fraternity might find cause for court action.

An assessment of $10,300 was raised this afternoon among the five clubs which remain in good standing in the defunct league, clearing up its indebtedness and practically winding up its business, Mr. Gilmore said. The clubs represented were Chicago, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Newark and Brooklyn, Kansas City and Buffalo having forfeited their franchises and the Baltimore club having declined to participate. According to Mr. Gilmore, the latter's declination forces the extra assessment on the other clubs.

Not to Investigate O. B.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Federal Trade Commission, it was explained at its offices today, has no intention of investigating organized baseball. Commissioner Parry said the commission is making a collection of papers in all anti-trust suits, and in line with this practice has requested a copy of the complaint in the Federal League's recent suit against organized baseball.

Bresnahan, Former Cubs' Manager, Fails to Close Deal for Association Club

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—President T. M. Chivington of the American Association announced today that he had no appointments with Roger Bresnahan, former manager of the Chicago Nationals, in regard to the sale of the Cleveland club, but that a conference might be arranged for next week.

Bresnahan, it was said, proposes to transfer the club to Toledo, its former home, if a deal for the purchase is arranged.

John Ganzel, former manager of the Brooklyn Federals, announced here today that he had withdrawn his bid for the Cleveland club.

"It looks as if they didn't want anybody but Bresnahan to have the team," said Ganzel.

Phillips Exeter Wins.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—Phillips Exeter Academy today won the annual indoor championship meeting of the New England Interscholastic Athletic Association with a total of 31½ points. Huntington School of this city, which won last year, was second with 14½ points.

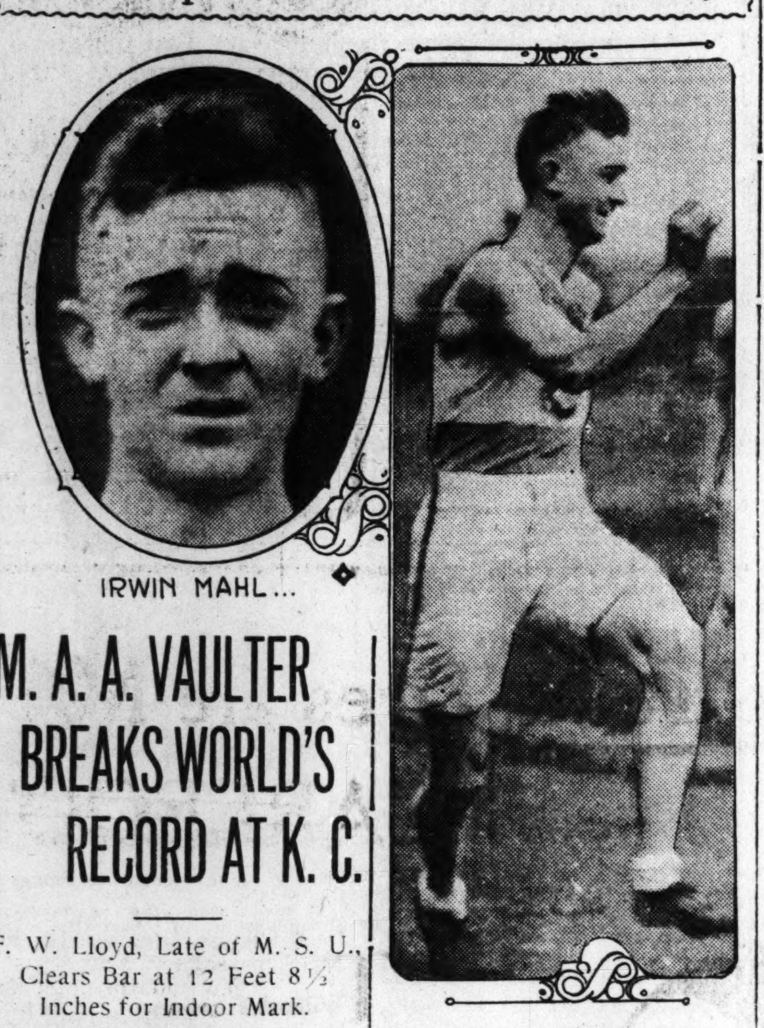
Mack Releases Five.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Americans, tonight announced the release of five players. They are Pitcher Harry Eccles and Shortstop Harry C. Seibold, who goes to the Wheeling Central League team; Pitcher Wilbur Davis to Atlanta (Southern League); Pitcher Walter Anker, Asheville (North Carolina League), and Harry Damrau, a third baseman to Raleigh (North Carolina League).

Mangham Beats Lewis.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 26.—Clarence Mangham, the young golfer from San Antonio, won the third annual invitation tournament of the Houston Country Club here today, by defeating F. M. Lewis of San Antonio, 6 up and 4 to play. Mangham bettered par by two strokes in completing the afternoon round, which he made in 70.

Local Sprinter Who Ran Second to Champion Loomis at Kansas City



IRWIN MAHL...

M. A. A. VAULTER BREAKS WORLD'S RECORD AT K. C.

F. W. Lloyd, Late of M. S. U., Clears Bar at 12 Feet 8½ Inches for Indoor Mark.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 26.—The world's indoor pole vault record for a board floor was broken by F. W. Floyd of the Missouri Athletic Association of St. Louis in the annual indoor meet of the Kansas City Athletic Club in Convention Hall here tonight, according to the announcement of officials of the meet. Floyd topped the bar at 12 feet 8½ inches.

Ted Meredith, the spectacular half-miler of the University of Pennsylvania, ran third, while Earl Eby, running under the colors of the Chicago Athletic Association, was first, and Fred Rodkey, captain of the University of Kansas track team, was second in an invitation 880-yard race. The time was 1m 57 1-5s.

Loomis Defeats Mahl.

Joe Loomis, the 10-stride star of the Chicago Athletic Association, who fared rather indifferently during his recent invasion of the East, "came back" tonight. With a wonderful burst of speed in the last ten yards of the special invitation 50-yards dash, the feature event of the big relay Carnival of the Kansas City Athletic Club at Convention Hall, he breasted the tape just ahead of Irvin Mahl of the Columbian A. C., St. Louis, and proved the evening's hero. A. E. Ward, of the Chicago A. A., was third. The time was 5 1-5 seconds.

In the open 50-yards dash, Ward showed his heels to Mahl, who failed to concentrate his efforts on the tilt with Loomis. The latter didn't compete in the open event, making his superlative effort in the feature race. There was a method to his madness, as the result proved.

50-yard dash, interscholastic—Sherman Landers, Oregon, Ill., H. S., first; Roy Hair, Iola, Kan., H. S., second; Frank Loomis Jr., Oregon, Ill., H. S., third. Time, 5 3-5s.

50-yard dash, open—A. E. Ward, Chicago A. A., Chicago, first; Irwin Mahl, Columbian Athletic Club, St. Louis, second; Watson Collier, Kansas State Agricultural College, third. Time, 5 2-5s.

16-pound shotput, open—L. L. Warren, Missouri University, first; John Barnes, Kansas City Athletic Club, second; John A. Reber, Kansas University, third. Distance, 38 ft. 10 in.

12-pound shotput, handicap—John Barnes, Kansas City A. C., 8 ft., first; John A. Reber, 6 ft. 6 in., second; Marshall Haddock, Polytechnic H. S., 7 ft. 4 in., third. Distance, 54 ft. 8 in.

Special 50-yard dash, invitation—Joseph G. Loomis, C. A. A., first; Irwin Mahl, Columbian A. C., second; A. E. Ward, C. A. A., third. Time, 5 1-5s.

440-yard dash, open—Amos Pierce, K. C. A. C., first; Donald Selbie, M. U., second; G. A. Smith, K. U., third. Time, 55 2-5s.

Intercollegiate relay, one mile—Kansas State Normal and William Jewell College, won by William Jewell. Time, 3m. 50 3-5s.

One-mile run, open—Franz Marcan, C. A. A., first; J. Harriott, K. U., second; Fred Griffith, Oklahoma University, third. Time —4:35 2-5.

Intercollegiate relay, one mile—K. U., first; K. S. A. C., second; U. of Nebraska, third. Time—3:35.

High jump, open—H. H. Friezell, K. S. A. C., first; Joseph G. Loomis, C. A. A., Dick Treweeke, K. S. A. C., and Radford Pittam, M. U., tied for second and third places. Height, 6 feet 2 inches.

Intercollegiate relay, one mile—University of Missouri and University of Oklahoma. Won by University of Missouri. Time—3:36.

Special 880-yard invitation—Earl W. Eby, C. A. A., first; Fred Rodkey, K. U., second; Ted Meredith, University of Pennsylvania, third. Time, 1m 57 1-5s.

Special 50-yard invitation—Robert Simpson, M. U., first; Joseph G. Loomis, C. A. A., second; J. G. Deggy, M. U., third. Time, 6s flat.

880-yard run, open—H. G. Osborn, C. A. A., first; Robert Probst, Columbian A. C., second; Russell Hart, Tarkio College, third. Time, 22 3-5s.

50-yard hurdles, open—Robert Simpson, M. U., first; H. Goelitz, C. A. A., second; Earl Renick, M. U., third. Time 6 1-5s.

1000-yard run, handicap—Floyd Welsh, K. U., 25 yards, first; Ross B. Keys, K. C. A. C., 22 yards, second; Fred Gableman, M. U., 9 yards, third. Time, 2m. 25 4-5s.

Pole vault, open—F. W. Floyd, M. A. A., St. Louis, first; Sherman Lancers, C. A. A., and D. G. Pattison, K. U., tied for second. Height, 12 ft. 8½ in.

C. B. C. ESSMANS BEAT PHOEBE CLUB, 29—28

The C. B. C. Essmans, who own a record of 12 victories against two defeats for the season, yesterday afternoon defeated the Phoebe Club at the college gym, 29 to 28. R. Moriarity, with 16 points, starred for the winners, while Ellerd, with 10, did best for the losers. The winners play the Baden School team tomorrow. The lineup:

Essmans (29).	Positions.	Phoebe Club (28)
R. Moriarity (16)	Left forward	Stanwood (4)
Rohan (9)	Right forward	Ellerd (10)
Gannon (2)— Clark (2)	Center	Weber (8)
Willey—D. Moriarity	Left guard	Kennedy
Kern	Right guard	Hammerstein (6)

Yale Hockeyists Win.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 26.—Yale's hockey season ended tonight with a victory for Harvard: a score, 4 to 2. The game was a fast, hard-fought battle between a team almost perfect in team work, but one that depended too much on individual playing. The result was that the better organized aggregation was victorious.

Cleveland Five Beats Crippled McKinley Quint

Absence of Conzelman and Palmer Responsible for South Siders' Reverse, 29-26.

McKinley High School's make-shift five was defeated by the Cleveland High quint, 29 to 26, in the feature contest of last night's Interscholastic Basket Ball League double-header at the Cleveland court, and as a result the South Siders once again failed to clinch the scholastic court title. In the other game of the twin bill, the Central High team easily defeated the Soldan quint, 39 to 22, and gained a firmer hold on third position in the league standing.

The McKinley five played last night with Capt. Palmer, a forward, and Jim Conzelman, a guard, out of the lineup. Then, Leffler, the other regular guard, was not in the contest after the first half. As a result it was virtually a new team that opposed Coach Midkiff's newly assembled squad.

Leffler Quits Team.

The South Siders could not cope with the Cleveland team's play in the opening period and when the team left the floor, it was on the under end of the score, 19 to 13. Evidently this irritated the McKinley tossers, because they were grumbling. Coach Callan said something, probably uncomplimentary, to Leffler and the player answered the coach. There was a wordy war for a few moments and it ended in Leffler being ordered by Callan to turn in his suit and leave the floor. He was relieved by La Mont.

Yeatman and McKinley play next Saturday night. Should Yeatman win, the two fives will be tied for the lead and a play-off game necessary. Consequently, with Leffler out of the fray, the crimson-hosed lads may lose out on the title honors, unless Palmer and Conzelman recover in time to get into the game.

The Central High five completely outclassed the Soldan team in the second game. Forwards Nelson and McElwee were shooting in splendid form, the former tallying 14 and the latter 17 points. Sweitzer and Strauss at center divided eight points between them. Despite the fact that Forward Smith of the losers played a clever game, the West Enders were unable to cope with their midcity rivals.

Lineups:

McKinley (26)	Position	(29) Cleveland
Menze (8)	Left forward	(10) Cole
T. Thompson (2)	Right forward	(11) Gibson
Feuerborn (14)	Center	(2) Lippert
G. Thompson (2)	Left guard	(6) Krehe
Leffler (0)	Right guard	(0) Schulze
La Mont (0)	Right guard

Central (39)	Position	(22) Soldan
Nelson (14)	Left forward	(6) Savage
McElwee (17)	Right forward	(16) Smith
Sweitzer (2)	Center	(0) Speed
Strauss (6)	Center.
Whiddicomb (0)	Right guard	(0) Epstein
O'Connor (0)	Right guard	(0) Schuster

Officials—Rener and Hardin.

Austin Is First Brown to Report; Clan Mobilizing

James Austin, keeper of the pepper box and guardian of the third sack for the Browns under the Rickey regime, reported yesterday at Sportsman's Park and mitted his new manager, F. A. Jones.

"I'm your little third-sacker," said Austin after ascertaining positively that Charley Deal wasn't concealed in the clothes closet. "Our team is going to be up there fighting and you'll never be able to jar me loose if I ever get a chance at the job," continued Jimmy in his effervescent vein.

"I'm from Missouri, from now on," said Fielder, "and I'm more than willing to be shown."

That closed the interview. Jimmy went away to search for John Lavan and form a conspiracy that will give the Browns a pennant. Other members of the Brown squad will report today, the full squad being booked to depart tomorrow evening at 6:25 for Palestine, Tex.

The first squad of the Giants, totaling 32 in all, passed through St. Louis yesterday on their way to the training camp at Marlin, Tex. Most of the players, who stopped over here yesterday, were youngsters. Christy Mathewson and Charley Dooin were the only veterans. Besides Matty and Dooin the tossers in the squad were:

Wendell, Harrison, Babbington, Jacobson, Kenney, Hunter, Kocher, Sonberg, Roseinger, Elsh, Martin, Ritter, Schepner, Farrell, Schupp, Cole and Ironson.

There were three newspaper men in the party, Mercer of the Globe, Crane of the Journal and Brown of the Evening Sun. A moving picture troupe, Dr. Finley of Pittsburg, Judge Francis X. McQuaid and Capt. Fitzgerald, three fans, and Trainer Mockall and Secretary Eddie Brannick also were in the party. The Giants joined the Cards on the trip South.

DOCTORS REFUSE TO LET MITCHEN OPPOSE JERABEK

New Yorker Rendered Himself Unfit by Imbibing Too Freely, Physicians Say.

HARRINGTON SUBSTITUTED

He Proves an Artful Dodger and Dancer, but Loses by a Decisive Shade.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

When it came time for Jimmy Mitchen of New York to enter the ring to box "Sailor" Jerabek at the South Broadway Athletic Club last night, he was declared by Doctor E. A. Scott, the club's medical director, to be so under the influence of liquor and with a stomach so filled with food that it would be dangerous for him to keep his engagement with Jerabek.

Mitchen protested and asked for an examination by another physician, whereupon Doctor Clarence M. Westerman responded and verified the finding by Doctor Scott, adding that Mitchen had a high pulse, and admitted having indulged in a number of drinks of sherry wine. He advised that Mitchen should not be permitted to go on with the bout.

Tommy Brammel, who has been looking after Mitchen's affairs since the New York boxer came to town, said that Mitchen had been obliged to take off three pounds early in the day in order to make the agreed weight of 147 at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He had remained with Mitchen until 4:30 p. m., and had then left him at the hotel where he has been stopping since he arrived in St. Louis. Brammel said Mitchen had eaten his dinner about 4 o'clock. Brammel stated he had no knowledge of what Mitchen had been doing since he left him at 4:30, and did not see him again until the boxer reported at the clubhouse.

Harrington a Tango Fiend.

Jack Harrington, many pounds over fighting weight, substituted for Mitchen and by clever defensive work—boxing, feinting and holding—managed to stay eight rounds with Jerabek, despite the latter's earnest efforts to end the bout by a knockout. Harrington went down for the count of nine in the second round and again in the sixth round for the same number, but the game boy responded each time and defied Jerabek to finish him. Jerabek, of course, outfought Harrington and had the better of every round, but Harrington deserves credit for his ready acceptance of the bout and the clever manner in which he managed to last out the eight rounds.

The feature bout of the evening was an eight-round bout boxed by Willie Colona and Charles ("Red") Johnston at 115 pounds. It was Johnston's first professional bout and Colona's second. It was beautifully boxed, but Colona seemed to be the stronger of the two and his punches were better placed. H was remarkably cool and met Johnston's rushs with a deliberateness that won applause from the spectators. Johnston apeared very nervous, and but for this might have done considerably better. It was a good bout, however, with Colona having the better of it on points.

A Real Slugfest.

The preliminary bout of the evening was a slugging match between Charles Stapp of this city and Walter Counce of Duquoin, Ill. This was an eight-round bout and supposed to be at 145 pounds, but Counce looked heavier than that. These men slugged through every round, and it was a miracle to some how they stood up under the heavy swings delivered.

Coupnce appeared to be very green at the game, but he is one of the most willing fighters imaginable and kept the more experienced Stapp working hard to avoid his heavy, but slow, punches. Both men were in fine physical condition and seemed none the worse at the end of their exciting bout, except that both were arm-weary. Stapp was the winner on points. The latter had the misfortune to suffer a fracture of the fourth and fifth metacarpal bones of his right hand.

Huggins Picks Braves if Evers Plays Cardinals' Showing Up to the Pitchers

Giants the 'Dark Horse' of the Race, Rabbit Says

St. Louis Team's Manager Fears His Pony Infield May Not Stand Up if Doak, Ames and Sallee Fail to Go at Their Best.

Much of the Club's Defensive Strength Rests on Corhan, the New Shortstop—Hug Himself Will Not Be in Lineup.

By W. J. O'Connor.

MILLER HUGGINS called the artillerymen of the 1916 Cardinal class to the colors last night and pushed on to Texas, where he inaugurates tomorrow a campaign, impotent in promise but vitally important to him and his employer, Mrs. Helene Hathtway Robison Britton. The rear-guard mobilizes a week hence and will join Huggins a week from today. Elsewhere in this acount is the complete list of players, with the records of new men.

Not a great deal remains to be said about the personnel of Hug's San Antonio squad. Most of the faces that will be seen there are already well known to local fandom Corhan, the Frisco shortstop, is the most important addition to the squad.

A man's job has been cut out for Corhan. He comes to fill a gaping hole in the Cardinal defense, but he has lavish recommendations from experts whose words carry weight and there is nothing more to do but practice watchful waiting. Steele, Williams and Hall are new pitchers who made enviable records in the minors, while Outfielders Smith and Cruise have had previous introductions.

Hug Through as Player.

THERE isn't a great deal of "color" to the club. Huggins has announced his retirement and he was the last hectic flush in the emaciated face of the local team. Boston has Evers, Sherry Magee and Maranville to lend it a vivid crimson streak of aggressiveness. Chicago has Zimmerman; New York boasts of McGraw, Mathewson and the champion hitter, Doyle; even Cincinnati has that anarchistic athlete, Herzog, while Pittsburg always, it seems, will be identified by the bandy-legged shortstop, who is old enough to be Roger Hornsby's father.

But the Cardinals, minus Huggins at the keystone, really have none of these unless something unforseen develops within the next 30 days. There isn't any spark; not an umpire-baiter in the bunch.

Withal, there are many players of genuine promise, and a few gems of the purest ray serene—Snyder, Miller, Wilson (defensively) and perchance Corhan.

Huggins was importuned to outline, roughly, his prospects for the coming season before he entrained last night. He immediately began to pull at the halter. However, we'll give you what was ultimately extracted from his carefully trained mind.

Huggins Is Catechized.

IS this team which you are taking to Texas your team—that is, is the personnel of the squad such as you prefer, or did somebody else shape it for you?" was the first question.

"That's a question which I would like to answer in minute detail, but don't you appreciate the fact that I can't do it, gracefully?" was his response.

"Do you think the Cardinals have strengthened in proportion with other teams in your league since last season?" was question No. 2.

"I can't give you a sincere answer on that, either," said Hug, "but I will say that the sudden development of peace plans in December completely upset an interesting scheme I had for rearranging my team. I lost out on two very important deals because of the reestablishment of peace."

"What do you think of the Cardinals' chances?" was No. 3.

"In answer to that I'll say that everything depends on my pitchers. I have such a team that may shape itself and surprise everybody, if it has an opportunity to organize behind tight pitching. I intend to use virtually a juvenile infield—Miller, Betzel, Corhan and Beck.

"There is promise in this quartet, but you must realize that an inexperienced infield, such as it is, may be completely demoralized by weak pitching. If I can get away to a good start on the hurling hill, these youngsters should perfect a defense that will stand up later under more severe tests. If Doak comes back to his 1914 form, Ames maintains the pace he set last fall and Sallee goes along as he has, I have good prospects. Otherwise I haven't.

Boston Looks Good to Hug.

"I REGARD Boston as an improved club. Allen and Knetzer, obtained from the Feds, should give Stallings more pitching, but I won't predict Boston's chances entirely on its pitching. If the Braves win, it will be solely because Evers plays regularly. He's their biggest winning factor. Put him in 135 or more games and I'll pick the Braves to win the pennant. Nehf, Rudolph, Hughes, Tyler, Ragon, Knetzer, Allen and Barnes should be good men with Evers at their back. This club, with Evers, looks like the class of the league.

"New York is the 'dark horse,' in my estimation. I don't pick them because of Kauff's presence on the club, however. McGraw had a good team last season, with bad pitchers. Perritt is better than he showed. Tesreau is dependable. I think Schauer is now ripe and will come through. Anderson, they tell me, is good enough to win. Stroud is fairly reliable, while there's the chance that Matty may be available for finishes. This is a good team, my idea of the league's dark horse.

"Chicago is an enigma. The Phillies haven't strengthened, but any team with an Alexander always will be there or thereabouts. Cincinnati should have better pitching, but they must have a lot of it to be a vital factor. That's all I have to say."

Huggins beautifully avoided any reference to the Cardinals. He ignored Pittsburg and Brooklyn, from which, we take it, he wishes us to infer that they "don't belong." The chances are 1 to 100 they don't.

It's All Up to Hug.

AS to Huggins personally, he has a great deal at stake this campaign. To the great mass of fans his reputation, in truth his salvation as a manager, hangs by a worn thread. But there is a great deal to be said in Hug's defense. One might properly discuss his position chronologically, since his ascension to the managerial throne, prefacing it with the statement that there exists in the club he's working for the most unique situation in baseball. The team is owned by Mrs. Britton, and watched over by her husband.

Bob Whites Play M. A. A. Today in Municipal League

Contest Will Be Feature of 15 Soccer Attractions Scheduled in Public Parks.

The feature game today in the Municipal Soccer League will be played in Group No. 2 at Fairground between Bob Whites and M. A. A. kickers. At present the latter is one point behind the leading Ruhrs. A victory today, though, and a defeat for the Ruhrs, who play the tailend Leacocks, will put the Cherry Diamond kickers out in front. Besides Group No. 1, this is the only division in which the pennant winner is in doubt. Thirteen other games are scheduled for today.

The complete schedule is as follows:

FAIRGROUND NO. 1.
Perpetual Help vs. St. Augustine.
St. Teresa vs. St. Liborious.
GROUP NO. 2.
Ruhrs vs. Leacocks.

Post-Dispatch Staff Man Will "Cover" Texas Training Camps

FIVE major league ball clubs will pitch their training camps in Texas this spring and at least four of them are potent pennant pretenders. The Browns depart tomorrow night for Palestine, where Fielder Jones will begin Tuesday the herculean task of molding a first division club from the material acquired by the consolidation of the Terriers and Browns.

W. J. O'Connor, a Post-Dispatch staff man, will accompany the Browns and after comprehensively reporting developments in their camp will go to the headquarters of the White Sox, Giants, Tigers and Cardinals. Miller Huggins will do his preliminary work at San Antonio and O'Connor will spend sufficient time there to give the fans an idea of what they may expect for 1916.

Joplin Is First City in Missouri to Have a Boxing Commission

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 26.

THE City Commissioners today passed an ordinance permitting boxing in this city and named a boxing commission of three members.

A limit of 15 rounds, with a medical examination of fighters, was provided for. The boxing game has been at a standstill here since State officials filed charges against the local club several months ago; but now it is expected to open up within a few days.

The kidney punch is barred in the new ruling.

Kinsella Retains Squash Title by Defeating Feron

Champion Who Wins in Straight Sets Will Meet Lafforgue of St. Louis Mar. 25.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Walter Kinsella, national professional squash tennis champion, successfully defended his title here today, defeating Stephen J. Feron, professional of the Harvard Club, in straight games in the second series of their match. Today's scores were 15—7, 15—3, 15—4. The champion also won in straight games on Thursday last by scores of 15—7, 15—6, 15—7.

Kinsella, who won the title from Feron last year, will meet Frank Lafforgue, St. Louis professional, in a series of matches beginning March 25.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TITLE CONTESTS THIS WEEK

The championship games of the Sunday School Basket Ball League begin next Tuesday night at Louisiana Hall. There are three teams which will play off for the championship. Grand Avenue United Presbyterian won in League B, and St. Phillips Episcopal in League C. There is a tie between Compton Heights Christian and King's highway Presbyterian in League A.

This tie will be played off as a preliminary game Tuesday night, and the Grand Avenue and St. Phillips will play the first championship game.

Mucks Sets New Conference Mark In the Shot Put

Badger Star Gets Heave of 48 Feet 7 Inches in Dual Meet With Illinois.

URBANA, Ill., Feb. 26.—Arlie Mucks of Wisconsin broke the Western Conference shot-put record today with a heave of 48 feet 7 inches in a dual meet which the Badgers won from Illinois, 44 to 42, by winning the relay. The best previous "Big Nine" record with the shot was made by Ralph Rose of Michigan, who, on June 4, 1904, was credited with a put of 47 feet ¼ inch. Rose's record was made outdoors while Mucks made his today in the new Armory here.

Besides Mucks' performance, the showing of Capt. Mike Mason of Illinois was a feature. He broke the Illinois record in winning the mile in 4:27 by 10 4-5 seconds, and took the two-mile run in 9:52, bettering the former local mark by 10 2-5 seconds. At Wisconsin's request the broad jump, Illinois' strongest event, was omitted.

Summaries:

Sixty-yard dash—Smith, Wisconsin, first; Hohman, Illinois, second; Carter, Wisconsin, third. Time, 6 1-5s.

Sixty-yard high hurdles—Ames, Illinois, first; Burke, Wisconsin, second; Heitzen, Wisconsin, third. Time, 8s.

Mile run—Mason, Illinois, first; Schardt, Wisconsin, second; Merrill, Wisconsin, third. Time, 4m. 27s.

Half-mile run—Harvey, Wisconsin, first; Spink, Illinois, second; Forsberg, Wisconsin, third. Time 2m.

Two-mile—Mason, Illinois, first; Felton, Wisconsin, second; Bemish, Wisconsin, third. Time, 9m. 52s.

High jump—Webster (Caldwell) and Bush (Illinois) tied for first. Height, 5 feet 8 inches.

Quarter-mile run—Williams, Wisconsin, first; O'Meara, Illinois, second; Field, Wisconsin, third. Time, 51 4-5s.

Shot-put—Mucks, Wisconsin, first; Husted, Illinois, second; Becker, Wisconsin, third. Distance, 48 feet 7 inches.

TOMMY BURKE SHADES HOWARD IN GOTHAM GO

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Tommy Burke, the middleweight of St. Louis, won by a small margin over Johnny Howard of Bayonne tonight in a fast and exciting 10-round bout at the Clermont A. C. in Brooklyn. Burke used a good right-hand hook, which he landed frequently on Howard's jow. Once Burke drove the Bayonne fighter across the ring with his right, but Howard came back strong and was fighting fast when the bell rang.

In a game replete with sensational shots from the field and abounding in exciting rallies, the Washington University basket ball quintet defeated the St. Louis University five, 23 to 22, at St. Francis Gymnasium last night and thereby retained the local collegiate court supremacy.

Last night's victory was the second of the week for the Pikeway team over the Billikens, the contest of last Tuesday night having gone to the maroon tossers, 23 to 21. The third contest of the proposed three-game series will not be played, inasmuch as Washington now has the title safely stowed away. The Pikers, in winning two straight games, repeated their record of the 1915 season, when they gained the local laurels by trimming the St. Louis five in a similar manner.

An unusual shot by Center Urban Busick in the last minute of play which tied the score and paved the way for Capt. Bill Berry to net a free throw as the final whistle was blown was the main factor in the victory of the West End squad. With St. Louis U. leading, 22 to 20, about 40 seconds before the completion of the contest Busick received a pass from Miller near midfield. Half-blocked, he threw the ball over his head and it alighted in the Billiken net. Just as the timekeeper was to announce time up, Gleeson fouled Stout by holding. Berry cleanly netted the ball and the game was over.

Unusual Throws Made.

Very few of the field goals thrown last night were of the usual variety. In most every case they were long ones or from the sidelines or from a difficult position. On the other hand, a number of what should have been easy baskets were missed.

Washington played a defensive game almost throughout the contest. The Billikens took the jump in the early part of the game and after the first five minutes of play until the time that Berry shot the decisive goal from foul line, the Pikers were on the small end of the score.

The biggest breach in the score was at the close of the first half when the Grand avenue passers were in the lead 16 to 9. First blood was drawn by the losers, when Diethelm, who started at center, tallied a neat basket shortly after the start of play. Then Bill Berry, who stars in every game that the Pikers play, tied the count by basketing while on the run. Three points by Hansel and a field goal contributed by Donohue made it 7 to 3. The Pikers then tied the score, only to lose the advantage and then tie it again. With the count nine up, the Billikens ran out with three field goals and a free throw.

Pikers Tie the Score.

Coach Frieke's squad came back with a vengeance in the second half, scoring nine points while the Groganites counted once. At this stage the tally was 17 all. Then the Billikens spurted to a five-point lead, making it 22 to 17. The blue and white lads never scored again. Stout registered a field goal. Berry flicked in one from the black mark, Busick played his little hero stunt and then Berry proceeded to win the ball game. It was some exciting affair.

But we have it from Bill Edmunds, who directs athletes out at the Pikeway, that the Maroons are not one lick better than the Billikens. Bill contends that any team that loses two games by one point and another by two, won't suffer by comparison with its conquerors. Except in its last spurt, the Pikers did not look as good last night as did Grogan's unfortunates. The passing was inferior, and errors in team-play bulged out at ties. But then, they were two evenly matched teams and they both played cleaner contests than have any of the Conference bullies, which have appeared here this season.

Wisconsin Officials Will Not Sanction Go Between Champ Welsh and Munger

APPLETON, Wis., Feb. 26.—The Wisconsin State Boxing Commission today refused to sanction the Freddie Welsh-Ford Munger 10-round boxing contest scheduled here for March 10, claiming that Munger's "class" as a boxer is not of sufficient caliber to warrant a match with the lightweight champion.

An effort will be made to secure another opponent for Welsh.

Poor scores marked last night's round in the South Side Handicap tournament on the Werder-Hughes alleys. Not one of the 10 leaders in either class was displaced. In the two-man event the combination of Stevens and Swan, aided by a 99-pin handicap, did the best rolling with 1122. Stevens counted 524, while his partner did 499.

In the individuals a 590-count paced the field. This total was turned in by Rohn, who was handed a donation of 42 pins. He had games of 199, 150 and 199 for a scratch total of 548. Stratman, 584, and Lehman, 583, were next in line. Last night's scores:

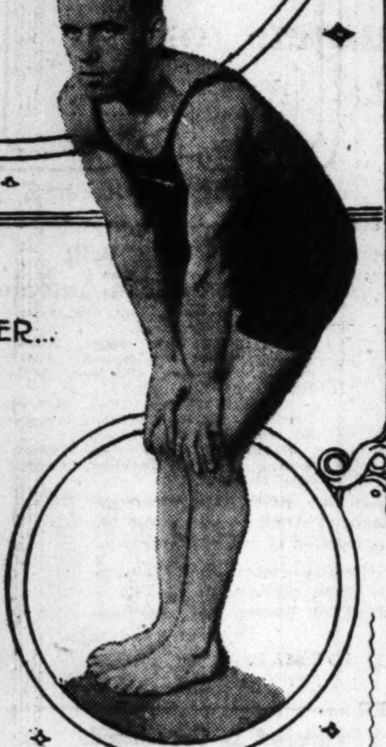
19-Year Old Swimmers Menace Records

Vollmer, of N. Y. A. C., Already Holds Five Marks

HERBERT VOLLMER...



LEO HANDY

CLEMENT BROWNE..

Vollmer, of Columbia U., Already Holds Highest Honors in Several Events, While Rivals Are Crowding Him Hard.

NOW is the golden age of YOUTH.

Time was when the ripe experience of years outweighed the resilience of alolescence as a factor in athletic struggles.

The axiom "Experience teaches," had a following before hackneyed "Youth will be served" came into existence.

But conditions are changing. More and more we find the age minimum at which champions are developed falling until at the present time many of the holders of world's titles are under 21 years of age.

Youth is now preeminent in nearly all sports. Particularly is this true of swimming, where boys and girls of only a few months' experience outdo veterans of years of striving.

Before the public eye today are three such youngsters who promise to strip the country of laurels at their respective distances. They are Herbert Vollmer, of New York, Clement Browne, of Chicago and Leo Handy, of Brookline, Mass.

None of this trio is over 19 years of age. Handy is still a schoolboy in Brookline High. Each is 19 years of age. All hold records established in the last two years, and all of them are improving, almost with each contest.

Vollmer Holds World's Records.

VOLLMER, of Columbia University and the New York A. C., has broken world's records at every important meet this season. He is a self-made champion. He picked up the stroke he uses—the four beat, single trudgeon crawl—by watching leading swimmers and then took pains to study the scientific principles which govern it, formed his own ideas, and then proceeded to exploit them. He has had coaching, of course, but those who supervised his work were permitted to correct only the faults of execution which every swimmer incurs, and not to change his style.

It was during the season of 1912-13 that Vollmer served his novitiate in the competitive field, wearing the colors of Stuyvesant High. In March, at the scholastic championships, he captured the 50 and 100-yard titles in brilliant manner, breaking the league records at both distances.

The summer found Vollmer sporting the Mercury Foot of the N. Y. A. C. and improving so rapidly that the A. A. U. handicapper couldn't keep him from winning.

In August, 1914, he finished third in the National 880-yard national championship; in September he was attained world's record speed by second in the National one-mile swim, shattering the 1000-yard standard on the way.

After that victories came in quick succession. Most of the district titles fell to his lot in 1915, but it was not until last December that he sprinting 100 yards in the admittedly slow 75-foot pool of the N. Y. A. C. in 54 4-5 seconds, the fastest time ever made under the conditions. Since then he has shattered world's records at 150, 200 and 220 yards, as well as at 200 meters, and because his past performances clearly indicate that he is essentially a middle-distance swimmer rather than a sprinter, there is good reason to believe international figures at the longer courses are now at his mercy.

Vollmer is ideally built for a swimmer. Standing six feet and weighing a trifle under 170 pounds, broad of shoulder and lean of hip, he shows the long, clean, smooth muscles which spell speed and efficiency.

In winning the 220-yard Metropolitan title a week ago last Wednesday, Vollmer established the world's record of 2 minutes 24 4-5 seconds.

Browne a "Barbados Demon."

A MERE tyro in Chicago aquatic circles is Clement Browne, the 19-year-old captain of the Hamilton Club swimming team. And yet he has enjoyed such a comet-like advance that today he is considered this city's leading distance swimmer. In little over a year of active competition he had encroached upon the championship claims of such men of fame as Perry McGillivray, Mike McDermott and Harry Hebner.

Perry McGillivray is the chief object of Browne's ambition. In their first meeting recently in a distance swim, Browne outpaddled the veteran Illinois Athletic Club star in the 500-yard event.

Chicago followers of the tank sport first began to take notice of the lad last summer when he won two Lake Michigan marathons and took second in another, each time beating favorites.

At the Central A. A. U. meet at Indianapolis a few days later, Browne won the one-mile outdoor championship in 25:58, establishing a new mark by 1:19.

He was awarded the diamond medal for scoring the largest number of points by virtue of his victory in the 440 and 880, and second place in the 100 and 220 yard swims.

He was second in the Ohio River six-mile swim, third in the Mississippi River 10-mile marathon, and captured first in the Memphis eight-mile event. He has a new indoor mile record of 23:49, having smashed the old mark by 20 seconds.

Browne was born in Bridgeton, Barbados Islands, off the northern coast of South America, on Dec. 13, 1896. He came to Chicago early in his youth and was educated in the local grammar and high schools. He was a pupil of Coach Harry Hazelhurst at the Y. M. C. A.

St. Louis is among Browne's many dates in his quest for swim honors. He will appear there April 22 in the National A. A. U. 500-yard swim against the pick of the country.

LEO HANDY, the Brookline, Mass., high school boy, has already been featured in the Post-Dispatch. Here are some of his performances:

Broke the scholastic and intercollegiate 100-yard record in 56 4-5s.

Broke the scholastic and intercollegiate record by doing the 220 yards in 2:29 3-5.

Has won the New England 220-yard championship for three seasons in succession.

Gridiron Players Not Obliged to Wear Numbers

Rules Committee Sustains Harvard's Objection to Proposed Change.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—No radical changes will be incorporated in the football code for 1916, as the result of the two conferences of the Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee which closed here today. The suggestion to make a mandatory rule requiring all players to wear numbers in each game was only casually discussed, and no formal vote was taken on the proposition, according to Walter Camp, secretary of the committee.

Opposition to the scheme from a number of the larger Eastern and middle Western university coaches is understood to have developed. The claim was made that to number the players would destroy the strategical value of the game, since scouts from rival colleges would easily solve the complicated offensive and defensive moves built around certain players if the chief factors were plainly identified by numbers.

The rules in general, however, were gone over carefully and a number of changes made both in phraseology and in substance. Among the more important was the changing from a 10 to 15 yards penalty for a foul committed against a player about to make a fair catch of a forward pass.

The committee also ruled that where a team is late in appearing for the second half of the game the offended side shall have choice of goals; made it allowable to bat ball on punt out as well as forward pass, but decided that an opponent may not run into the catcher except in bonafide attempt to catch or bat ball.

Innisfails Must Win or Concede Flag to Millers

Victory for Ratican's Men Today Will End Pennant Chance in Soccer League.

It's up to the Innisfails to stop the Ben Millers in the opening game of the St. Louis Soccer League at Robison Field today or lose all chance for the pennant. It has come to a stage where the Irishmen have to "do or die" and today they will have to "do." At present Foley's kickers are five points behind the pacemakers. The second battle will be between the St. Leos and Naval Reserves.

Following today's contest, only two more remain to be played. If the Innisfails win, they will be three points behind and will still have a chance of winning out. A defeat, though, will put them seven to the bad and even the playing of the postponed game with the St. Leos would do them no good.

Foley will have his strongest lineup in the field today for the clash with the Hatters. Menendez, the Spaniard, who was absent last week, will be back in the lineup. Pete Ratican will use the same players that have brought the colors to the head of the heap.

There's a bit of importance attached to the second game, too. "Bull" Brannigan's kickers can get out of the cellar for the first time this season by downing Brady's kickers. It is expected that several new players, snared from the Municipal League, will line-up with the Leos. Last week Gantz and Burke were introduced and both showed up well.

Paul McSweeney will run the two shows, the first to start at 2 o'clock. Thirty-five minute halves will be played.

SPORT SALAD BY L. C. Davis

Then and Now.

I REMEMBER, I remember,
A year ago today;
The edict of the player was:
"You gotta raise my pay!"
But now a change has come upon
The spirit of the sport;
They're sending telegrams to say:
"I'm ready to report."

I remember, I remember,
And so does Philip Ball,
How dilatory players were
In answering the call.
He nearly got the writer's cramp,
From filling out the checks;
But now, to reach the training camp
They nearly break their necks.

I remember, I remember,
The plutocratic stand
The players used to take, before
They'd take their pen in hand.
They got eight thousand bucks a year,
And still they yelled for more;
But now they're very well content
To play for three or four.

I remember, I remember,
The dreaded 10-day clause;
It was so reprehensible
It gave the players pause.
It took away their liberty
And sewed 'em up for fair;
But now when they attach their sigs
The 10-day clause is there.

Joe Dickson Defeats C. A. Pierce in Squash Match of 135 Games

The match between C. A. Pierce and Joseph Dickson Jr., which the latter won, three sets to two, proved the feature of the annual squash handicap tournament inaugurated yesterday at the Racquet Club. Pierce was vanquished only after a bitter struggle in which 135 games were necessary for a decision. The scores were: 15—11, 10—15, 15—9, 13—15 and 18—14. Other scores:

R. M. Kennard defeated L. C. Wells, 15—11, 12—15, 15—11, 15—12.

E. A. Limberg defeated S. C. Davis, 15—8, 15—3, 15—3.

J. H. Overall defeated Dr. E. T. Senseney, 15—12, 7—15, 15—7, 15—3.

J. Dickson defeated C. A. Pierce, 15—11, 10—15, 15—9, 13—15, 18—14.

A. Y. Wear won from W. S. Pope by default.

JACK JOHNSON ORDERED TO LEAVE LONDON, REPORT

(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Weekly Dispatch says that Jack Johnson, negro pugilist ex-heavyweight champion, has been directed to leave England. He entered a protest, but the authorities were adamant, so Johnson sails for South America next Friday.

It is understood that this action of the Government followed a request that he make an explanation to an official connected with the White Slave traffic at Scotland Yard. Johnson is going to Buenos Aires, as he finds it impossible to obtain the necessary passports for the United States.

Nebraska Star Joins A. A.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 26.—Guy Chamberlain, who is regarded as one of the greatest football players ever developed at Nebraska University, has signed a contract with the local American Association club, it was announced today. Chamberlain is a left-handed pitcher, who had considerable success with the Nebraska nine.

C. White Easiest, Ritchie the Toughest I Ever Met, Fighter Ted Lewis Declares

British "Pug" Who Has Opposed the Best Boxers in the Light and Welter Divisions, Scouts the Idea That Chicago Lightweight Is Hard to Beat.

By John E. Wray,
Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH Jess Willard in New York, at work for his bout with Frank Moran, March 25, at Madison Square Garden, Tex Rickard and Sam McCracken, the showmen, will move into position their heaviest publicity batteries and open fire.

The capture of Paris or the Kaiser might supersede the championship fight news in the New York newspapers; but nothing short of that will suffice to do it.

FRED WELSH...

The publicity campaign that put over the McFarland-Gibbons affair cost thousands of dollars and kept not only the New York papers but those throughout the country deluged with "feature" matter about the show.

The same tactics will no doubt be pursued in connection with the coming contest, although, truth to tell, it does not appear to need much boosting. This statement is based on the announcement made by Tex Rickard that all seats would be sold by two weeks before the date of the big scrap.

Full House Guaranteed.

WHETHER that assertion itself was a crafty bit of diplomacy to hurry the reluctant come-ons into the box office is mere guesswork. But it seems pretty well established that not a seat will remain unsold of the 12,600 said to be available.

With a capacity "gate" of about $120,000—probably it will be more like $150,000—the promoters stand to win about $40,000 on their daring scheme.

More power to them, if they get away with it. It took nerve to promote this costly enterprise. And while many of us may consider the bout a hopeless affair, scientifically, there is no doubt that it will be on the square and that the men will try.

But the man who sees $25 worth in a 10-round, no-decision gambol between two mastodons, could smell parma violets in a limberger cheese.

Ted Lewis to Rest.

FIGHTER Ted Lewis has earned the rest he promises himself, beginning this week. Twenty-eight battles in eight months and six in 30 days is a record few boxers can duplicate.

This is especially to be considered, since not one of the men he has met has been cheap or a weakling; on the contrary, they have ranged in weights from lightweights like Charley White to 136-pound opponents like Knockout Brennan.

Lewis is an astounding person physically. He looks small in the legs, although his battling equipment is well developed.

He declares on his honor that he can do 135 ringside, and will make 133 pounds at 3 o'clock for any fighter. He prefers to battle at about 139 pounds, he says. The last may be true, but the 133-pound stuff appears bunk.

Notwithstanding this, he has just issued a challenge to fight anybody that will weigh 158 pounds or less, TWENTY ROUNDS. He will take on Jack Dillon at 160 pounds for 10 rounds!

On the other hand, he is willing to fight Freddie Welsh for the title and weigh just what Welsh weighed when he won it—135 pounds. Meeting Welsh one day recently Lewis said:

"Come on, Fred, let's battle for the title. I'll do the weight for you."

"Aw, come on and have a drink—forget it," was the reply he said Welsh made to him.

Incidentally it is being hinted around that Freddie is having a bit too many wee draps for the good of his system.

Rather Fight, or Manage?

WHILE on the subject of the get-rich-quick kid, what money a fighter EARNS and what he GETS are two different things.

For example, it is said that Harry Pollock gets 40 per cent of what Welsh takes in; too stiff a proportion, seeing that Welsh reserves the right to turn down any matches made for him, and otherwise dominates his boss.

Lewis was asked what "divvy" he made with his manager, but he declined to state. A little later on, however, when discussing the subject of managers, he said:

"Jimmy Johnston, my manager, has absolute charge of my affairs. He makes the match, and orders me to report on a certain date. I'm there at the weight, and furnish the fight. It's always up to schedule, too, if I do say it. That's why we do so much business.

"Johnston looks after all the finances. I wanted to leave it all in his hands, and take his word for it; but he insists that I sign papers showing that each fight's business has been properly closed. Sometimes I let the checks ride. I haven't touched a cent for the last four fights.

"I think a manager who handles everything connected with a fighter should get a fifty-fifty split, especially if he brought the said scrapper out and gave him a chance to make good."

Presumably this remark applies to Lewis himself. If it does, Lewis has been making—allowing for the split—about $20,000 a year.

Welsh to Meet Wolgast.

SO much uncertainty surrounds the movements of Freddie Welsh and Wolgast that it is not possible to figure reliably on reports of their engagements. At present this pair is matched to box in Milwaukee on March 6, but both have recently been matched and unmatched often.

Wolgast has begged for this bout. But although he is younger in years than the world's title holder, he is due for a beating, if the recent form of this pair is any criterion. Wolgast appears to have gone back so far that his case is hopeless.

"White Is Easy"—Lewis.

WHO is the best man you have met—Charley White?" Ted Lewis was asked.

"White? No, he was the easiest," replied Lewis. "I had no trouble hitting White, and I knocked him down, too. He couldn't land effectively on me at all. Willie Ritchie was the most dangerous of all the men I met. Ritchie's great fault is lack of variety. If he could vary his system he'd fool a lot more of them than he does.

"Benny Leonard's the boy they'll all be looking out for in the lightweight world. He'll come close to winning the title, before long.

"And, by the way, I see where you say I own no titles. Perhaps I don't, now; but I have held two. I was featherweight champion of England. I won the $2500 belt by beating Lambert. I had to return the emblem when I found I could no longer do the weight.

"I also won the welterweight championship of Australia from Hugh Mehegan in Australia. That was when I was just a kid."

Willard Finances.

THINK a minute, Rothschild! Before investing in French consols, lease a fighter and shake him down. We place before you Jess Willard, who one year ago was broke.

Here's what is in store for him, through a mere 30 minutes of ring dalliance:

$40,000 for his share, win, lose or draw.

$7500 for signing the contract to fight.

Revenue from sale of admissions to his training quarters. This will total a sum that has been estimated at not less than $75,000.

Now, then, Mr. Rothschild, consider also that after the one fight is over Willard will go on the road with a circus at $1200 per day for two shows daily. His engagement extends into October, after which he will probably fight Moran a 20-round contest for a big purse.

Thus, in a little over a year Willard will have earned about $400,000 for his promoters, unless their figures lie.

Isn't it a fine opportunity, Mr. Rothschild, especially when all you have to invest in a fighter is a little time and a world of hot air?

Examination Shows Willard to Be in Perfect Physical Condition; Weighs 272 Lbs.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Jess Willard, world's heavyweight champion, was examined by a physician for the New York Athletic Commission today and pronounced in perfect physical condition. Fully dressed he tipped the scales at 272½ pounds. Willard said his clothing weighed 10 pounds.

It was explained that Willard's weight and condition were of interest to the commission, which desired to be convinced that the public was being fairly treated in connection with the heavyweight's coming championship bout with Frank Moran.

The commission summoned Willard, Tex Rickard and others to appear before it on Monday with all the contracts and agreement for examination and approval.

LOOMIS, ARONSON, RENICK AND MAHL IN SPECIAL 'FIFTY'

Entries Closed for Feature Dash Event of Missouri A. A. Games at Coliseum.

HUTSELL BACKS M. U. STAR

Renick, Who May Represent Local Club Next Season, Is Conference Champion.

One of the feature events of the indoor meet of the Missouri Athletic Association at the Coliseum on March 25 will be a special 50-yard dash, in which four stars of the country will compete. The entrants for this event, Joe Loomis, Earl Renick, Irwin Mahl and Gus Aronson, were announced yesterday. No other entries will be accepted.

All the runners with the exception of Renick are known to local track followers. Renick will carry the colors of Missouri U. in the event. He is a protege of Wilbur Hutsell, the new cherry diamond coach, and has a record of 5 2-5s. for the 50 yards.

Right now Renick is ranked as the best sprinter in the Missouri Valley Conference, and he was selected by Hutsell to run in the event, because the latter believes he is just as fast as Irwin Mahl, the local champion. In all probability Renick will compete for the M. A. A. after he completes his college career.

Loomis Seeks Revenge.

There's little use of going into detail about Loomis. He's known to all the athletic followers of the country. The Windy City flyer, who has a 10-foot stride, has been beaten a good many times since he won the national 100-yards championship in Frisco last summer, but he is going to make a hard attempt to wipe out all these black marks when he faces the starter's gun in the "special 50" at the Coliseum.

Loomis' greatest downfall in the present indoor campaign has been in races with Howard Drew, the negro, who is pulling a sensational "come-back." Drew will not be entered in the race at the Coliseum, so maybe Loomis will be able to show his heels to the remainder of the crowd. He'll have to travel some to beat the field.

The other two entrants in the race, Mahl and Aronson, are local boys, both developed right here in St. Louis by Paddy Fitzgerald, the Columbian A. C. coach. Both of them own victories over Loomis. Mahl's came in a special 100, while Aronson showed his heels to Delaney's star in a handicap century dash here. It was said after the race that Aronson had beaten the gun.

Aronson Tries "Comeback."

When Aronson starts in the Coliseum race it will be something of a "come-back" for Gus. The C. A. C. flyer has been out of it for a good while, but he's training faithfully for the event and expects to reign as "king of the St. Louis sprinters" after he has crossed the tape. Aronson's main fault heretofore has been lack of training, but this will not be the case if he is beaten March 25.

The race on March 25 will be Mahl's first real appearance before the home fans. He's participated in several local meets, but never against the stars he will face at the M. A. A. games. Last year in the Armory meet he breasted the tape in 5 1-5s. in the 50, but he was aided by a three-foot handicap, so his time really was for 47 yards.

So when this quartet gets together at the Coliseum it will be nip and tuck for leading honors from start to finish.

Maupome May Be Next to Tackle Ellis for Title

Pierre Maupome, the Mexican cue-wielder, representing this city in the Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League, may be the next to play Charles Ellis, the new champion, for the three-cushion crown. Maupome's challenge, accompanied by the forfeit money, already has been sent in and word of his selection is expected in the next few days.

In league matches played to date, Maupome has something on Ellis. Both his meetings with Ellis, here and in Pittsburg, resulted in 50-33 victories for the local star.

Only Gilt-Edged Pitching Can Save the Cards, Huggins Says

It is a matter of record that they are not in on the inner councils of the national league. The peace-pact signed in December was news to them as well as to those on the outside. But despite this, Mrs. Britton has last say and it was her antipathy to Federal League players, entirely for sentimental reasons, that prevented Huggins from acquiring any of the surplus outlaws.

But let's deal entirely with Huggins. He became manager in 1913 and inherited what looked like a promising club from Roger Bresnahan. The collapse that spring of Arnold Hauser, tore a tremendous hole in the team and the Cardinals finished last. Hug hardly was to blame.

Through his cunning and keen business ability he made the now famous Mowrey-Koney-Harmon swap with Pittsburg and faced the barrier in 1914 with a team that was a contender from the go. His club finished third, made real money, the fruits of his swap with Pittsburg, and drove Fred Clarke out of baseball. Koney, Mowrey and Harmon didn't put a punch in the Pirates.

Cards Had Great Chance.

AT the close of the 1914 campaign the Cardinals had genuine pennant prospects for 1915. The roster included Magee, Wingo, Perritt, Miller, Doak, Sallee, Snyder, Beck and Wilson as the nucleus of a championship team. These players had lifted the club into first division for the first time in 23 successive flagless seasons. For the first time in the club's bleak history there were genuine pennant prospects. The league looked weak. Hug needed only a shortstop and a slugging outfielder and another pitcher to be positively a winner.

He acquired an outfielder, Mr. "Tee" Long, who carries a punch despite his weak defensive work. He got a pitcher, Mr. Meadows. By rights he should have won last year's pennant.

But there had been a break in the sweet rhythm of success, a discordant note in the harmony of pennant prospects. Magee, Wingo and Perritt, juvenile assets worth $50,000 in these days of frenzied finance, slipped away because the Robison Field business office refused to stand for a tap of say $5000. Magee could have been saved for $500. That we know.

These players made unjust and unreasonable demands on the club. They had contracts which they should have respected, but we must not forget that they were participants in a war and all is fair in war.

With Magee, Wingo and Perritt went the Cardinals' pennant chances. The club finished sixth last season, not far from fourth place and no farther from last place. It was a three-club scramble between Boston, Philadelphia and Brooklyn with the other dogs of war eating the dust. If you didn't get third money it mattered not whether you finished fourth or eighth.

For this year the team still feels the loss of Magee, Perritt and Wingo. It is a club harder to diagnose than any in the league. It is colorless, but has an able manager, who is working harder under trying conditions that most men would work. He's trying and we hope he succeeds.

If the Cardinals come through with a bang-up fight next season they will be an attractive team mostly of youngsters, and a genuine sensation. If they fail, faith will be lost in Huggins, the Brittons and the National League.

There's a limit to human endurance and it has been severely tested by trifling details, such as incorrect score cards, and a score board famous the circuit over for its lies.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

KEEPING TIRES GOING

Within the past week repair men in every part of the country have been notified by the B. F. Goodrich company of an improved method of tire repair which will save car owners thousands of dollars.

Two principal difficulties have been found with repairs as made heretofore. The repair man often has not taken the injury out of the tire. Piles of fabric have been heaped upon the injured parts but the injury itself remained. The repair was no more than a patch, a makeshift, and often the patch was as stiff as a piece of armor plate. The stiff patch and the resilient tire body parted and the tire "shuffled off" before its time.

Again, in some cases, repair materials have been used which were not designed to harmonize. As a result, part of the tire was either overcured or undercured.

Under the new method the same tools and equipment are used, the repair costs practically the same as heretofore, but the tire goes back on the road nearly as strong as before injury.

USE GIANT PNEUMATICS

Speaking of the giants in pneumatic form which the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. builds for service on trucks where additional cushioning is requested—for instance, in transporting furniture, groceries, produce, hardware and other products which are subject to breakage or deterioration when jolted, R. S. Wilson, manager service tire department, states that letters are being received every day from all sections of the country, containing expressions of satisfaction that both the product and the selling plan are right.

"These big pneumatics, which range in size from 36x6 to 42x9," says Mr. Wilson, "have been put to the most rigorous tests of the show-me kind and everywhere have emerged triumphant. We are the pioneers in introducing a big pneumatic tire for automobile trucks and have necessarily had to blaze our own way—and the way for others. At first real selling effort was required to introduce them, but now that they have vindicated themselves, their sale has been greatly accelerated. Their field is rapidly developing. Nearly every truck manufacturer in the country will now honor specifications for our big pneumatics.

"More depends upon the tire equipment of a truck than has been heretofore recognized. Some, appreciating the value of extra cushioning in deadening vibration, the deadliest enemy to the life of a truck, have been using dual pneumatics on the rear wheels. But the satisfaction with the service received from them has been far from complete. The large pneumatic has many advantages over dual equipment."

"The maintenance of equal air pressure in dual tires has been difficult, and the removal of the inner tire in case of tire trouble has been the bane of truck owners. Their susceptibility to puncture under the heavy loads carried has also been one of the disadvantages to contend with. All these are triumphantly overcome by the large pneumatic."

FRANKLIN IN NEW HOME

The Franklin Automobile and Supply Co., long at 1527 North Grand avenue, has just been incorporated by Dr. S Klein, George Gruenwald and Mrs. Klein, and will shortly remove to 3009 Locust street, where a building is being erected for the company's use. The company will remove at once, however, to 3215 Locust street, where salesroom, shops and service station for the Franklin car will be opened and in operation in a few days.

PEERLESS AGENCY GOES TO PARK AUTO CO.

S. S. Primm, president of the Park Automobile Co., announced Saturday that his company had secured the agency for the St. Louis territory for the Peerless car. One of the new Peerless eight-cylinder cars will be here in a few days. The contract was closed by S. S. Primm and A. T. Primm at the Peerless factory in Cleveland.

"The new model 56, eight-cylinder Peerless car," said S. S. Primm, "is a development of the building of high-grade cars by the Peerless company since 1902. The new car has 125-inch wheelbase, weighs 3500 pounds, carries the new high-speed Peerless eight-cylinder motor and special Peerless carburetor."

The price of the new car is $1890, f. o. b. factory.

The Park Automobile Co. also handles the Chalmers line in the St. Louis territory. To meet the new conditions, requiring ample show and storage room for the new line, the company has leased the building adjoining to the west, formerly occupied by the Peerless agency, which adds 2700 square feet of space. The two combined will make the largest automobile building in the West. Frank Weaver, former Peerless representative here, will join the sales force of the Park Automobile Co.

PATENT GRANTED FOR "CHUMMY" ROADSTER

Elmer Apperson, pioneer automobile manufacturer and president and general manager of Apperson Brothers Automobile Co. of Kokomo, Ind., has been granted a design patent on their "Chummy" roadster four passenger body, according to a telegram to J. W. Leigh, St. Louis agent for the Apperson car.

This is the first time in the history of the automobile industry that the United States Patent Office has recognized a novel idea in automobile construction. Although seating four passengers, it is a true roadster type in exterior appearance The seating arrangement provides two individual seats, divided by an aisle way, with the rear seat accommodating two grown people with comfort.

NATIONAL SEEKS AGENT

L. H. Conde of the National Motor Vehicle Co., Indianapolis, is in St. Louis to close the agency for the National car.

"The auto spirit of Nineteen-sixteen is epitomized in the word 'Highway,'" according to George M. Dickson, managing director of the National auto factory at Indianapolis. As a result, the new National 12-cylinder and six-cylinder, have been named "Highway" cars.

"All over the United States," said Dickson, "there is a quickening of activity and pride in highways, and posterity will ever be indebted to the efforts of the originators of the Lincoln and Dixie highways. The year of 1916 promises to be a big year in cross-country touring. The amount of good roads work that has been done, and the tremendous car sales of this year means that the motoring public will live on the highways as never before."

TO SELL DIXIE FLYER

The Colonial Motor Car Co., 3948 Olive street, announces through W. C. Shields, manager, that the Dixie Flyer will make its formal entry into the St. Louis market Monday. This is the mysterious car which was exhibited first at the St. Louis Auto Show last fall without a name and for which the public was asked to select a name.

The car is built by the Kentucky Wagon Mfg. Co. of Louisville. It has 112-inch wheel base, four-cylinder motor, dyneto starting and lighting system and is to be sold complete for $775. The Louisville factory also builds the Old Hickory truck chassis, which is priced at $785, which is also to be handled in this territory by the Colonial Motor Car Co.

CADILLAC TO EXPAND

The Cadillac Automobile Co. has leased an additional building at 3917 Olive street, formerly occupied by the Fisk company for salesroom and storage for used cars. The new place has been handsomely decorated and well equipped. An additional story is also to be added to a part of the present building across the street to meet the requirements of a rapidly growing business.

LOCAL RIM FACTORY

The St. Louis Welding & Mfg. Co., located at 3316-22 South Broadway, is manufacturing in St. Louis the Nulox Rim for automobile wheels. The rim can be changed in quick time and obviates rim-cutting, puncturing when changing, hammering and the possibility of a sprung rim. The company is capitalized for $150,000. W. M. Dunphy is general manager.

WOODS CO. DEVELOPS DUAL POWER CAR

Details have reached the Woods Motor Vehicle Co. of St. Louis as to the new Woods "dual power" electric car. The new design has a gas hood effect and the rear is built to conceal the spare wheel and tire. The car operates either with gasoline or electricity and the motor in use reduces the battery weight about 600 pounds. It develops 14 h. p. The car starts as an electric and can be shifted to gas or the motor can be used to recharge the batteries. The car has all the appointments and luxuries of the electric car, and adds to it unlimited mileage and the advantages of the gasoline motor. One of the new cars is expected at the St. Louis agency shortly.

United States 'Chain' Tread Tires

Dig-in and Suction

The 'Chain' Tread Tire has the two necessary features to prevent skidding and slipping, particularly on wet pavements—the dig-in and the suction.

The height of the chain above the surface of the tire gives the dig-in quality.

The cup-like shape of the links gives the necessary suction to hold to the road.

REO
On the Subject of—Commercial Integrity

THE REO FOLK BELIEVE—have always believed and from the first have based the Reo Policy on the belief—that ultimate supremacy in the automobile industry will redound to that concern that has the most scrupulously fulfilled its obligations to its customers.

IT MATTERS NOT whether those obligations are assumed in writing or merely implied in transactions as between man and man—the Reo Folk hold them as sacred.

IF THERE IS ANY REASON—aside from the inherent quality and value of Reo cars—for the splendid Reo success, it is to be found in the reputation Reo has for making good its guarantee.

OF COURSE YOU KNOW—all the world knows—that the Reo Motor Car Company is financially one of the strongest automobile companies in the world.

AND YOU KNOW that it is also one of the pioneers in the industry—so that financial strength is not due to lucky chance nor to a brief period of prosperity.

REO STANDING—financially and in the hearts of buyers—is the result of a policy firmly founded in the beginning and consistently carried out through a long period of years.

BUT ALL THAT WOULD NOT MATTER if the heart of Reo were not sound.

IT WOULD NOT MATTER how much money there was back of the Reo guarantee if there were not also Reo Integrity and Reo Good Intent.

THAT IS WHY, knowing the Reo Folk and their ideals, you'll feel safer in selecting a Reo than any other car of similar size or price class.

SPEAKING OF SIZE—do you realize what a big, as well as beautiful car is that New Reo Six?

IT'S A FULL SEVEN-PASSENGER CAR—126-inch wheelbase and on cantilever springs, giving the fullest passenger space and the utmost in luxurious qualities.

DEMAND IS TREMENDOUS—and output of this 7-passenger Six is limited. So if you'd have the most luxurious equipage and the sweetest running car the Reo Folk have ever turned out, your order should be in our hands at once. Today won't be a minute too soon.

TOOK SALESMEN TO PLANT

W. J. Parrish, president of the Packard Missouri Motor Co., left Friday night for Detroit to visit the Packard factory, taking with him W. Ashley Gray, who has joined the Packard sales force; George Auerochs of the Kansas City Packard branch, controlled by Mr. Parrish; A. J. Lindsay of St. Louis, who has also just joined the Packard sales force, and who was formerly with the Lindsay Motor Car Co.; E. L. Ferguson, late of Indianapolis, of the local sales force, and Paul G. Bender, who until recently was representative of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. in Berlin, Germany, who also has just joined the local Packard selling force. Bender some years ago was a bank teller in St. Louis and left here with the Burroughs company.

Conservatism

HIGH-SOUNDING and extravagant phrases, as applied to motor cars, are all too common. Thus their force is lost, and they convey no thought other than the impotence of the user.

Unfortunately, too, generalities are often resorted to in the absence of significant facts and convincing evidence.

For every effect there is a cause. The prestige and favor acquired by Maxwell Motor Cars are due to tangible and commanding reasons.

The comeliness of design, the solidity of structure, the economy in upkeep and operation, the ease and comfort in driving and lastly the innate integrity of the whole (exemplified by the World's Motor No-Stop Mileage Record, recently established by one of our stock touring cars)—these are the powerful contributing factors to Maxwell eminence.

Maxwell Motor Car Owners are people, who recognize the wisdom of economy. They expect surpassing service and everything that such service implies. They pay tribute to Value and Worthiness whether in man or car.

AUTO NEWS and GOSSIP

J. E. Patton, special representative of the Haynes factory, is assisting the Newell Motor Car Co. of St. Louis for a time in closing contracts with dealers throughout the St. Louis territory.

H. S. Firestone of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., has been elected president of the Rubber Club of America, the organization which is handling the import shipments of crude rubber to the United States.

The Edison Automobile Co. reports the sale of a Davis 6-cylinder roadster to Sam Lazarus, 4481 West Pine boulevard.

Saxon cars are being handled in St. Louis County by the Parkhurst Motor Co., 407 Meramec avenue, Clayton.

A. G. Gale, special representative of the Dort Motor Car Co., builders of the Dort car, will spend a week with the Newell Motor Car Co., St. Louis handlers of the Dort.

The Champ Spring Co. has opened a sales office at 3120 Locust street and will carry a line of springs for various makes of cars there.

H. G. Donigan, one of the oldest welders in the West, has bought the stock of the American Welding Co. and has opened across the street at Twenty-third and Olive from the former location. He will handle the Menominee truck.

J. E. Mangan has contracted with the Ebbeler Motor Car Co. of St. Louis to handle the Pathfinder car in Alton, Ill.

The new Buick service station opened Monday at 3952 Olive street, was announced to all local Buick owners by special telegram, sent to them Sunday morning. This novel method of advertising, while expensive, was effective.

E. J. Sweeney, assistant advertising manager of the Paige Motor Car Co., Detroit, spent a day last week with the local Paige agents, the Frye Motor Car Co.

DODGE SALES UNUSUAL

Frank R. Tate of the Tate-Gillham Motor Car Co., announces an early opening of spring business. Notwithstanding the bad weather of February, he has delivered 43 Dodge Bros. cars at retail and six to sub-dealers. He also states they have taken eight orders for delivery in March.

Prospects for early spring business have never been brighter in his experience and his retail salesmen have appointments for demonstrations that are keeping them busy every hour of the day.

One salesman, on Thursday, had a banner day, selling four Dodge cars at retail, and two second-hand cars. He expresses a fear that through the shortage of freight cars, which badly cripples the shipment of cars from Detroit and the large demand everywhere for Dodge Bros. cars, there will unquestionably be a big delay in deliveries when the spring rush is fully on.

RENE THOMAS TO DRIVE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 26.—A genuine thrill has been given the motor car speed fans by the announcement that the internationally famed Rene Thomas, winner of the 1914 500-mile International Sweepstakes race, has been given freedom from military service in France and will drive May 30 in the Sixth Annual International Sweepstakes race at Indianapolis. In this brief, significant announcement are condensed volumes. Thomas, phlegmatic master of motor mysteries, fearless, dangerous but not reckless, soldier with many hero medals, aviator with daring exploits to his credit, experienced engineer and gentleman, will be an attraction second to none for the motor car racing season of 1916. He is scheduled to risk the submarine dangers, the floating mine perils, and leave his native country March 25 so that he can arrive here about April 1.

ACCESSORY MEN'S EMBLEM

The Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis will be asked to adopt at its meeting an official emblem which has been designed by President Allan H. Clark, who is vice president of the Vehicle Top and Supply Co. The emblem is intended for use on letter heads, bill heads and statements and indicates that the firm is a member of the credit bureau of the necessary association. It is thought that the use of the emblem will have a strong moral effect on dilatory customers. The association will also adopt officially the credit application blank submitted at the last meeting.

The next meeting will be called "Poster Night," and most of the firms represented will exhibit their most striking posters, signs and trade marks for criticism or praise.

MISS KING BUYS A KING

Miss Anita King, the moving picture star who recently created a world's record for woman driving, by piloting a motor car from Los Angeles to New York, has finally cast her lot for her own personal mount on an eight-cylinder King. The deal was consummated by C. A. English of the English Motor Car Co., Southern California distributors for the eight-cylinder King.

Miss King, who is being featured in film work by the Jesse Lasky Film Co., has given the automobile market a thorough investigation. She selected her car after much inspection and gruelling tests conducted by herself, gained from her transcontinental journey, chose an eight-cylinder King roadster.

NEW TIRE HOUSE OPENS

The Griesedieck Tire and Supply Co. has begun business at 1426 South Grand avenue. Robert Griesedieck is owner of the business. He has been long connected with the local automobile business, having formerly been with L. J. Doerr, and for a time represented the H. & D. Shock Absorber. Alex J. Ganahl, late with the Ganahl Motor Car Co., will be associated with the business. Goodrich and Kelly-Springfield tires will be handled and a complete and important tire repair plant has been installed. A complete line of tire accessories and automobile necessities will be handled.

JOHNSON TO SELL KING

Realizing the popularity and merit of the line the Johnson Automobile Co., 3657 Olive street, has taken the agency for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois for the King eight-cylinder car. The King is built in two models, the five-passenger at $1150 and the seven passenger at $1350. The Johnson will continue to handle the Empire line, the Empire four selling at $935 and the six at $1150. This will give the company one of the best balanced lines carried in St. Louis.

THOMPSON IN PITTSBURG

H. C. Thompson, manager of the Auto Ignition and Lighting Co. service station in St. Louis for the Westinghouse automobile department, left Saturday for Pittsburg, to spend several days at the Westinghouse factory, to familiarize himself with the 1916 and 1917 Westinghouse equipment for cars. On his return he will arrange for larger quarters for the Auto Ignition and Lighting Co.

MAXWELL ENTERS DELIVERY FIELD

Announcement comes from Detroit that the Maxwell Motor Co., Inc. has decided to enter the field of light delivery, using for the purpose the standard Maxwell chassis which is furnished complete, including cowl, instrument board and electrical equipment, but lacking body, which the buyer can have designed and built locally to fit his individual needs. The price is $90 less than the touring car.

With the car the Maxwell company furnishes a scale of dimensions which enable any body builder to fit exactly the standard arrangement for attaching this part to the frame.

The work of attaching is free from any complication of wiring or piping. The chassis comes ready to drive.

FISK HAS MONSTER PLANT

The Fisk Rubber Co., Chicopee Falls, Mass., believes in industrial preparedness. To that end new buildings of size as to completely overshadow the present plant have been completed and are being put into service. The administration building is impressive. A six-story warehouse is 300x105 feet, giving an area of nearly 95 acres. The mill building is 600 feet long by 105 feet and has six floors. Bridges and tunnels connect all of the buildings. The new buildings will more than double the capacity of the company.

CAR SHORTAGE BRINGS RAILROAD "GONDOLA"

The shortage of automobile freight cars has given rise to numerous emergency measures originated by the traffic departments of automobile companies. Charles Shaar, traffic manager of the Packard Motor Car Co. has partially solved the problem by the erection of sturdy superstructures on railroad "gondolas." These housings on flat-cars protect the shipments practically as well as the regular automobile freight cars.

When the covered gondola reaches its destination the dealer is instructed to bill the superstructure back as a carload of lumber, tar paper, etc., which it really is. In this way the car is returned quickly to the factory and can be used for other shipments.

At Manchester, N. Y., about 80 miles east of Buffalo, an assembling point for small shipments of materials destined for the Packard factory has been established. In line with Shaar's plan, these materials are billed through to the factory in car lots and special effort is made to secure cars with wide doors. Similar assembling points for parts have been established near Cleveland, near Pittsburg and Chicago. In this manner Shaar has been able to obtain many cars that are badly needed for shipping Twin Six automobiles.

During 1915 the Post-Dispatch printed 6360 Classified Instruction Want Ads, a gain of 326, and 3635 more than the four other St. Louis newspapers combined printed during the same period.

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER HAIR WHEN FADED OR GRAY

Sage Tea, when Mixed with Sulphur, makes Your Hair Soft, Beautiful and Removes Dandruff at Once.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—ADV.

Tanlac, the Master Medicine, Is Moral of Old Fable of the Man With Two Best Girls

"Like Different Woman Since Using Tanlac," Her Grateful Tribute

"I feel like a different woman since taking Tanlac."—Mrs. E. L. Williams, of No. 5 South Tenth St., St. Louis, states.

"I suffered from loss of sleep. I had no appetite and was very nervous. The trouble originated in my stomach and kidneys. I had headaches every day of my life. I could not walk downstairs, and it was difficult for me to stand. Most of the time I sat in a chair. I could not put on my clothes, it causing palpitation. I got up in the morning more tired than when I went to bed. I was losing weight and told my daughter, 'If I don't get something I can't last much longer.'

"Tanlac has done more than wonders for me—I honestly believe it has saved my life. I sleep well and my appetite is coming back. For the first time in years my heart does not palpitate, and my stomach and kidneys no longer give me pain.

"I want to sing the praises of Tanlac."

Tanlac Is Engineer's "Safety First" Tonic

"Safety first" is a rule that Chas. Benzel, an engineer residing at 3230 Nebraska st., St. Louis, and employed by the Terminal Railway, applies to his engine and himself.

"I had a distressing case of catarrh of the stomach, head and throat," Mr. Benzel stated. "Day and night mucus came from my stomach and head. My food would not digest. I bloated and suffered from palpitation, shortness of breath, dizzy spells and terrible headaches. I could hardly eat enough to keep me on my feet. I was losing strength and weight. I was always constipated.

"I am now in the pink of condition since taking Tanlac. I eat heartily, have my strength back, sleep soundly and am getting heavier. My nerves are toned up. I never have to clear my head and throat of mucus and that is a pretty sure sign the catarrh has been controlled.

A middle-aged man with two sweethearts—the one younger, the other older than himself—is the subject of a fable many centuries old.

The younger woman, unwilling to see in her lover any signs of age, plucked the gray hairs from his head. The other woman, equally jealous against his showing any of the favors of a youth that had already left her, plucked the black hairs from his head.

Between them they plucked him bald. Then, of course, they forsook him.

Many stomachs are as cruelly treated as the lover in the fable.

In the hope of immediate relief (a drastic drug is poured into a stomach already raw and distressed. One function or another instantly becomes feverishly active. To offset its harmful violence, another drug, of opposite effect and equally drastic, is poured down. Some functions now operate violently, while yet other functions, necessary to the general health, cease entirely. In a desperate state now, the stomach is subjected to first one and then another punishment until it is totally disordered and perhaps permanently injures—digestion deranged, liver hardened, kidneys strained and bowels ulcerated.

The conditions which lead many people thus violently to drug themselves are common—disastrously so. Many men and women are suffering from constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, bloating and belching from stomach gas, torpid liver, irritated kidneys, headaches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart or biliousness. Some people suffer constantly from half a dozen of such ailments and take it as a matter of course that they should pass their lives in distress.

If the man in the fable had had one wife instead of two sweethearts he would have fared happily through life with a full head of hair. So, also, if these people with disordered stomachs would have as their ally faithful nature instead of fickle but violent drugs, they would come through life in comfort and happiness.

Nature offers Tanlac to sick stomachs—to the sick system through which stomach sickness has spread like a poison. Throughout the vast world—in the snowbound fastness of the North, upon the blue mountain sides that shoulder the skies, in the steaming jungles of the earth's middle, in the fat bottoms and scant hill soils of both temperate zones, in the soft sunshine of the Far South seas and the little-known lands of the Antipodes—Nature has scattered her remedies. The best of them—all vegetable, free from mineral taint—are gathered and merged into Tanlac with the one purpose of creating a reconstructive tonic which feeds while it heals sick and sore stomachs, and which, through the stomach and its allies, the blood and nerves, builds health, strength and vigor.

A quarter of a million people—two hundred and fifty thousand men and women—in all parts of the United States have gratefully praised Tanlac because it healed and fed their sick stomachs, drove pain from their bodies and brought them health and strength, comfort and happiness and restored to them the joys of life that belong as a right to every man and woman.

Tanlac has brought prosperity to many because it has made them equal to their tasks—fit for their jobs—eager to do their work, whether it is the work of the housewife, the teacher, the clerk, the preacher or professional man, banker, merchant and manufacturer, mechanic, laborer and farmer.

As you read the recommendations of Tanlac by thankful men and women who it has relieved of the ailments named above, you will be impressed with the frquency of some expressions: "It has made a new man of me," "It has made me feel like a girl," "It has made me feel like new," "It has given me new flesh," "I am gaining weight," "Using Tanlac was the best investment I ever made," "Tanlac has put dollars in my pocket," "I can do more work than ever before."

As a tonic for run-down men and women who need better digestions, more strength, more flesh, regulated circulation and a revitalizing of the nervous system, Tanlac The Tonic Supreme has no equal.

Tanlac is bottled health. It is being specially introduced in St. Louis at the WOLFF-WILSON DRUG STORE, 6th st. and Washington av., and at the 7th and St. Charles streets store of the JOHNSON-ENDERLE-PAULEY DRUG CO. by experts from the Tanlac Laboratories, who explain how it should be taken and the benefits that may be expected from its use.

Feels "Fit as Fiddle" Since He Used Tanlac, Conductor Wright States

J. H. Wright, a popular conductor of the Rock Island, living at Eldon, Mo., pays this tribute to Tanlac:

"Tanlac has restored my energy and I feel fit as a fiddle. I used to suffer from stomach trouble and had all the pains that go with it. Although I ate only the plainest foods, my stomach would bloat and be 'sour.' To be nauseated was a common experience with me, and I don't think I ever got more than six hours' sleep in any night.

"I felt listless and tired out most of the time. I had pains in the back and kidneys, my appetite was failing, I was losing weight, and felt irritable and nervous. I 'laid off' on several occasions.

"But Tanlac has worked like a charm. It seems as if I can't get enough to eat, and what I eat is well digested. I have gained five pounds, and sleep better.

"I most heartily indorse Tanlac to all who suffer from indigestion and stomach and kidney troubles."

"Best to My Friends Tanlac for Health"

"You bet I recommend Tanlac to my friends!" was what Joseph M. Sedivec of 1011 Victor street, St. Louis, an automobile mechanic employed at the Lafayette Auto Repair Shop, stated when asked what he thought of Tanlac.

"I suffered a great deal before I used Tanlac," he explained. "I was worried with constipation and indigestion, and had kidney and liver trouble. Every morning I had pains in my back and shoulders, and a bad taste in my mouth. I had gas on my stomach, had no appetite, did not sleep well, was tired out, had headaches, and was bilious. I was generally run down.

"That pain is gone from my back and shoulders. Indigestion, constipation, gas in my stomach have vanished. My appetite is as good as it ever was.

"In fact, I am in as good condition and feel as fine as ever before in my whole life."

TYPICAL TANLAC TALES FROM ALL OVER TOWN

Mrs. Hettie Gosnell, 2120 Clark av.: "I have taken only one bottle of Tanlac and yet I feel like new. For years I suffered from a catarrhal affection of the system, from kidney trouble and indigestion. My weight decreased, and my nerves were run down. My whole system seems to be on the mend since I have taken Tanlac."

Traffic Officer George Hommelson, St. Louis: "I would not be without Tanlac at any price. I used to suffer from stomach ailments. I fell off in weight and was in a run-down condition. Tanlac is a wonderful remedy for constipation and stomach ailments. It helped me from the start. I can now eat anything without suffering afterwards."

Mrs. Cora Todd, 3975 Morgan st.: "For years I suffered from nervousness, which affected my stomach, kidneys and liver. I could not eat with relish because of the fear of gas, sour stomach and smothering spells. I lost weight and could not sleep well. Two bottles of Tanlac have helped me greatly, and I recommend it."

J. W. Nielsen, 1317 Marcus av.: "Tanlac has made me a well and hearty man. Two bottles of Tanlac relieved me of indigestion, bloating, shortness of breath, palpitation, sour stomach, headaches, dizziness and constipation. I am full of energy since I have been taking Tanlac."

J. F. Wamhoff, 6418 Michigan av.: "I can hardly realize I am the same person. I had no faith in medicine till Tanlac relieved me of bloating, indigestion, constipation, faintness, headaches, nervousness. Three years of tussle with stomach trouble had reduced me to a shadow. I was completely broken in health—a nervous wreck. Since taking Tanlac I eat well, sleep well, feel strong and am gaining weight."

Mrs. M. E. Taylor, Madison Hotel, demonstrator at Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co.—"Tanlac has relieved me of catarrh, from which I suffered 10 years, almost constant desire to clear my throat, dull headaches, hawking and spitting, fits of choking and coughing, which awakened me every night. My general health has improved. I have a good appetite and sleep well."

Mrs. A. Harmeling, 2410 East Marcus av.—"I suffered from general run-down condition. When I managed to eat anything I was immediately troubled with gassy, bloated stomach. Every slight noise bothered me. I am glad to recommend Tanlac because it has made me feel like a new woman. My whole system seems to have undergone a change for the better."

W. H. Hinds, 2311 Pestalozzi st.: "Tanlac has certainly made a new woman out of my wife. She is better than ever before. She was in a run-down condition. She had pains in her back, headaches and ate scarcely any food. She was often sick at the stomach and did not sleep well. Her sister in Louisville wrote about Tanlac, and I got a bottle for my wife. I give you my wife's experience in a spirit of gratefulness because Tanlac has made our household happy."

T. C. Crawford, 2844 Lafayette Ave.: "Tanlac has made me feel better than I had ever felt before in my whole life. I had a bad stomach for years. One bottle of Tanlac ran all the pains out of me. Tanlac did a good turn for me and I'll always have a good word for it."

How to Prevent Acid Stomachsand Food Fermentation

You may complain of stomach trouble and yet your stomach may be absolutely normal and healthy. The real trouble—the trouble that nearly everybody has at times—is probably excessive acid in the stomach. You may be quite sure that this is your trouble if your food ferments, turns sour, causes belching, distress after eating, etc. Excessive acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach wall is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise a great majority of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of Bisurated Magnesia, which is a remarkably effective antacid and food corrective. The excess acid will be neutralized and the food fermentation stopped immediately so that your stomach may then proceed to digest the food in a healthy normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for Bisurated Magnesia rather than Magnesia in any other form.—ADV.

PREDICTS ADOPTION OF A SEGREGATION LAW IN ALL CITIES

Framer of Louisville Ordinance Says Sentiment for Plan Is Spreading.

Pendleton Beckler, city attorney of Louisville, who with his assistant, Stuart Chevalier, drafted the Louisville negro segergation ordinance, and has defended it in the courts, spoke at the Real Estate Exchange yesterday in support of the ordinances to be submitted to St. Louis voters at a special election Tuesday.

He predicted that every city in the country would in time see the advantage of a segregation law. He said the Louisville law, on which the proposed St. Louis law was largely modeled, was being enforced to the letter, and that the chief objections had come from white people. These whites, he said, are the ones living or owning houses in blocks which contain a minority of negroes, and which, therefore, are still white blocks under the law, and into which no more negroes can legally move. The tendency is, under such circumstances, that the white people move out, and there is a period of transition, in which the houses that become vacant cannot legally be rented to negroes, and white persons will not rent them. But as soon as enough whites depart, to leave the negroes in the majority, the difficulty ends, he said.

"In other words," he decared, "it will take years before there will be an actual getting together under the provisions of these laws, the negroes in their locality, and the weeding out of the whites to a white locality."

He said that in Louisville the negroes had been protected in their residence blocks against the intrusion of immoral resorts. A Post-Dispatch staff correspondent who visited Louisville to investigate segregation reported that no new immoral resort had been permitted to enter negro blocks, but that resorts had been permitted to continue in places which are now adjacent to negro homes.

Beckler also addressed a segragation meeting last night in the Auditorium at Central High School, under the auspices of the United Welfare Association. William Clendennin, an advertising man, also spoke. The meeting was attended by 100 white people and one negro, who sat apart from the audience in a corner of the hall.

The polls will be open Tuesday from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. in each of the 474 precincts. A majority of the votes cast will decide for or against the enactment of the proposed ordinances, which were submitted under the initiative. The Board of Aldermen had previously refused to pass such ordinances.

Each voter will be expected to vote "Yes" or "No" on each of the two proposed ordinances. One prohibits negroes from moving, in future, into any block now entirely occupied by white persons, and prohibits white persons from moving into any block now entirely occupied by negroes. The other proposed ordinance prohibits those of either race from moving into a block where 75 per cent of the residents, at the time the law goes into effect, are of the other race. If both ordinances were passed, lawyers say, the 75 per cent ordinance, as the more stringent of the two, would supercede the other. If the 75 per cent ordinance is passed, it will make no difference whether the other is passed. If the other is passed and the 75 per cent ordinance defeated, the segregation program will be applied in a little milder form.

If both ordinances are passed, and the more severe one should not stand the test of the courts, it might be possible, for a time at least, to proceed under the less severe ordinance.

300,000 WORDS OF TESTIMONY IN THE GLEN ECHO CLUB SUIT

All Witnesses Heard, but Arguments Wait on Completion of Long Transcript.

The "outs" and the "ins" of the Glen Echo Country Club finished telling their troubles to Judge McElhinney in the Clayton Circuit Court yesterday, after the Judge had listened to six days of continuous testimony, in addition to five days last month.

In these 11 days, according to Court Stenographer Frank Weller, 300,000 words of testimony were uttered. One of the biggest contributions of words was made by S. T. G. Smith, secretary of the club, who testified a part of Thursday afternoon, all day Friday and for nearly two hours yesterday morning.

Twenty-five of the 135 "outs" are asking the Judge to enjoin the nine trustees of the club property against keeping them out of the new organization. Although the testimony ended last evening, the Judge will listen to the lawyers' arguments later.

HOPEWELL'S HOPES REALIZED

Munition Town Gets Its Incorporation Papers.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 26.—Hopewell, Va., the boom war munition town, which without a government for a year has run a course paralleling that of Western mining towns in pioneer days, was incorporated today by legislative enactment.

The new town will have the novelty of an election July 1. It is said there are not enough qualified voters at present in the town to officer it.

NUGENT'S WILL CELEBRATE FIRM'S 43D ANNIVERSARY

The forty-third anniversary of the founding of the dry goods firm of B. Nugent & Bro. will be celebrated by the firm this week with a series of celebration sales beginning tomorrow morning. The firm was founded in 1873 by Byron Nugent and Dan C. Nugent. At that time it occupied a small store on the corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue. Dan C. Nugent is still the active head of the concern, which now occupies two large buildings on Broadway, Washington avenue and St. Charles street, connected by bridges and subways.

At the present time more than 1500 persons are in the employ of the firm and 400 extra clerks have been added to aid in the accommodation of customers during the celebration week.

Officers of the firm state that it has just passed through one of the most successful years in its career and that the prospects for a new record-breaking year appear bright, as during the first two months of the present year there has been an increase of 20 per cent over the corresponding periods of previous years. For the Celebration Week Sale, unusual efforts have been made to gather the greatest amount of merchandise that ever has been offered in the stores.

The firm is the first in St. Louis to install a complete motor car delivery service, reaching practically every point in the city and suburbs. The firm has recently added to its buildings the five-story building on St. Charles street and Broadway in which is the largest rug floor of any store in the West.

The present officers of the firm are D. C. Nugent, president; James G. Nugent, vice president; F. C. Lake, secretary and treasurer; D. C. Nugent Jr., manager; F. A. Cramer, merchandise manager; J. H. Hobelman, publicity and sales promotion; C. H. Wiese, general superintendent, and E. Roethemeyer, superintendent.

During celebration week there will be a street parade, the stores will be decorated with flowers, souvenirs will be given customers and music will be provided during shopping hours.

Never Before Such An Instantaneous And Sensational Success

From every state in the Union we hear of the amazing success of the latest Overland—the $615 model.

At the New York and Chicago Automobile Shows—the two great national automobile events of the year—the $615 Overland was the most widely discussed model exhibited.

And why not? An electrically started and electrically lighted completely equipped Overland with four-inch tires for only $615!

Is there any wonder this car took the whole country by storm?

Season after season for seven years we have experienced one great success after another.

But this one tops them all.

No other achievement in the history of the entire industry parallels this record.

It stands out alone—boldly—conspicuously—unapproached.

Never before has an automobile success been so rapid, so definite and so sweeping.

The $615 Overland has made history. It marks the entrance of a new automobile value—a car complete in every sense of the term at a price which was hitherto thought impossible.

Yet here it is—a powerful five-passenger touring car complete for only $615.

Note that word "complete."

This means electric starter and electric lights, electric horn, magnetic speedometer—in fact, every necessary item. Nothing is lacking. There are no "extras" to buy.

Note that the motor is the very latest en bloc design—the last word in fine engineering.

In addition note that the tires are four-inch size. This is another big advantage. Many cars costing more have smaller tires.

Note that the rear springs are the famous cantilever type. Another advantage. Cantilever springs mean the utmost in riding comfort.

Note the headlight dimmers—the electric control buttons on steering column—demountable rims and one-man top. These are all big advantages.

This newest Overland is light in weight, easy to handle and very economical to operate.

It's just the car the world has been waiting for.

It is large enough for the whole family—moderately priced, within the reach of the majority—economical to maintain—built of the best quality materials—snappy, stylish and speedy—and complete in every sense.

In short, it is just another striking example of how our larger production enables us to build a bigger and better car and still keep the price within reason.

You'll want one, so order it now.

Don't wait, debate or argue with yourself. See that your order is placed immediately.

Then in a few days you and your whole family will be driving your own car.

Remember it comes complete—only $615!

NATIONAL 'HEAVIES' MADE LIGHT OF AT GRIDIRON CLUB

Presidential Bees Gaily Swatted at Newspapermen's Second Winter Banquet.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Gridiron Club, tonight, at its second dinner of the winter, projected itself into the convention activities of next June and helped a distinguished party of presidential makers and candidates board trains for Chicago and St. Louis to meet the fates awaiting them there. In a make-believe railway station the actor members of the club satirized the foibles of some of their guests and some well-known men who were not present.

President Wilson was among those who looked on and he may have received an intimation of the opposition he will meet later in the year. Vice-President Marshall, the Secretaries of State, Navy and Interior, the Brazilian Ambassador, the Chinese and Bolivian Ministers, several members of the Senate and House, officers of the army and navy, and a number of the most notable figures in the nation's financial and industrial life were present.

The most ambitious of several sketches presented by the club was the political one. Scrambles to make trains, strange traveling companions and ticket complexities that confounded the railway gatemen offered extraordinary opportunities for fun making. Passing through the Chicago gate were regular and progressive Republicans, characters representing former Senators Burton and Beveridge, former Vice President Fairbanks, Senators Sherman, Borah, Cummins, Weeks and Penrose, Representative Cannon, former President Roosevelt, William Barnes and George W. Perkins of New York. Through the St. Louis gate passed Secretary McAdoo, Postmaster-General Burleson, Charles F. Murphy of New York and William Jennings Bryan.

A Shot at Senator Burton.

The first passenger to reach the Chicago train was recognized by one of the two gatemen as Senator Burton. Nervous and fussed, he inquired if he were too late, and appeared greatly relieved when told that he was "leading the parade."

"You won't be too late till you get to Chicago," he was informed as the gateman punched his ticket.

Next came a passenger for St. Louis, who was hailed as Secretary McAdoo. He produced a weird looking ticket, finally recognized as mileage, which the gateman examined laboriously. Muttering that it seemed "as complicated as the shipping bill," the gateman asked if a mistake hadn't been made. Its intricacies were explained by methods of addition and subtraction and the passenger passed through grinning. The gateman, recovering, remarked to his "pal:" "That wasn't no railroad ticket; that was today's treasury statement."

Among the next batch of passengers was a tall, heavy-set man, carrying a broken plank under his arm, who tried to crowd through the St. Louis gateway.

"Hey, Mr. Speaker," expostulated the gateman, "this ticket ain't no good. It reads for Baltimore. And it's four years old."

"I knew it!" shouted the passenger, who resembled Champ Clark. "Bill Hearst told me to try to work it off, but the darn ticket never was any good."

Champ Quotes T. R.

The Speaker finally got through on "Missouri mileage," but the plank became wedged in the gateway. As he tried to disengage it, he explained that it "came out of the Baltimore cyclone," and was the last surviving bit of the one-term plank. They asked him what good it was, and he replied that he was "merely following T. R.'s advice—'learn to swim, but always carry a life preserver.'"

Vice President Marshall, extremely nervous, was closely followed by Senator Lewis of Illinois.

"I ought to be nervous," he explained. "He follows me all the time. He followed me up to the rostrum in the Senate today and almost sat in the chair."

Former Vice President Fairbanks, displaying a handfull of tickets for a group of delegates "locked up in the baggage car" of the Chicago special came next. He wanted to leave a few more tickets for any stray delegates who "might relish a little transportation." He was closely followed by two men described by one of the guards in a stage whisper, as "the two wickedest men in the world—Uncle Joe Cannon and Boisey Penrose." The impersonator of Senator Penrose asked: "Is this the regular train?" and was assured by the gateman that "everything is regular this year." Penrose wanted to know if the gateman had seen anyone by the name of Roosevelt hanging around.

"I heard he was going," the Senator mused, "T. R. did me a great favor once—he made some speeches for Pinchot."

"Uncle Joe," urging the Senator to hurry, asked if he expected to pay Mr. Roosevelt's fare.

"I'm willing—if he'll use the ticket I buy," was the answer.

Senator Weeks came along with a great bag which he said was full of New England delegates. He was told to check it, but warned not to let Sam McCall know where he put the check. Next came a passenger, greeted as Gen. Burleson, dangling a string of dummies which he referred to as postmasters. They caused the gateman to wonder if "Gen. Burleson had adopted Frank Hitchcock's children."

Col. Roosevelt was followed by George W. Perkins, and they made a great commotion. Perkins was carrying a bag, which he said was so light it kept flying out of his hands. The gateman asked what was in it.

"Ephraim's diet," replied the bogus Roosevelt. "I'm going to feed it to the Republicans."

The gateman pointed out that Col. Roosevelt's ticket was for the Progressive train and dated 1912, but the Colonel told him he talked "like a Byzantine logothete." Perkins had no ticket. He was merely to see the Colonel on the train he explained.

"Yes, and I'll see him off—at the first trestle," exclaimed the next passenger, familiarly greeted as Bill Barnes. This passenger waved an ax, which he called "an olive branch," to be presented to someone between the fourth and fifth vertebrae."

Time was up and the gates closed when in rushed William J. Bryan. He carried a shotgun on which was mounted a dove of peace, and excitedly told the gateman that he had to get through as he had important business on the St. Louis train. His ticket, the guard said, was only a half-rate clergyman's ticket, but gained his point and was allowed to slip through the gate on his promise to "run" for the train.

"You'll have to be some runner," commented the gateman. "I am," replied Bryan, as he darted away. "Been running for 20 years."

BABY WILL NOT BE 'HE' OR 'SHE' MAR. 4, BUT DISTINCTLY 'IT'

That's the Beginning of the Week That Will Be Devoted to Their Welfare.

Mayor Kiel yesterday issued a proclamation setting aside the week of March 4-11 as "Baby week" in St. Louis. In doing so he called attention to preparations being made throughout the United States for a general observance of the week so as to call public attention to the great loss of life among infants that might be prevented by proper precautionary measures.

The Mayor urged that during the week St. Louisans give to the matter of preventable infant mortality, their thoughtful consideration.

The Woman's Council of St. Louis has made extensive plans for the observance of Baby week. Boy Scouts have agreed to canvass the city with literature telling about the care of babies and leave a small American flag in each house where there is a baby under the age of three years. Parents are to be asked to have the flag displayed in a window during the week.

At the headquarters of the council, 308 North Eighth street, free lectures upon the care of babies will be given daily by physicians, under the direction of the Medical Society.

A portable clinic will be exhibited by the Washington University dispensary, where every means of meeting emergency calls in the care of children will be shown.

Slogans regarding the care of babies will be displayed in street cars and moving picture houses will show films depicting the proper manner of caring for babies.

A better baby contest will be held in the Jewish Educational Alliance March 7 and 8, and there will be an exhibit of proper clothing for infants.

SOCIETY AUCTION YIELDS $789 FOR CHILDREN'S FUND

200 BARGAINS PURCHASED

Society donated $789 to the Children's Aid Society yesterday through the medium of an auction sale at the Lennox Club which continued from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 7 o'clock in the evening. About 200 articles, ranging from diamond rings and mahogany tables to dolls and dishes, which had been donated by men and women of St. Louis, were offered for sale.

About two-thirds of the articles were disposed of at prices which in many cases were ridiculously low and almost brought tears to the eyes of a dealer in secondhand goods who ventured into the clubrooms only to find that every time he made a bid the article in question suddenly increased rapidly in value under other bids, or else was withdrawn from sale.

In addition to the auction, there was a tea room presided over by a number of debutantes and some of the younger matrons. A sign at the door of the tea room announced, "Pay as You Enter." The charge was 25 cents, and a 50-cent luncheon was served. The tea room cleared $42. Miss Dorothy Niedringhaus was in charge of the waitresses.

Several Auctioneers Worn Out.

Altogether, it was a jolly party of friends and the various auctioneers at times had difficulty in making their voices heard. Frank Wyman was the first to essay the task and he succeeded in selling a little wooden birdhouse, painted in black and white, to Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, president of the Children's Aid Society, for $18.

He made numerous other sales but was pretty well tired out when he relinquished the gavel to A. R. Schollmeyer, who conducted the greater part of the remainder of the sales, although Louis La Beaume, E. C. Dameron, J. L. Mauran, Albert Bond Lambert and Eugene Angert took turns upon the auction block and displayed excellent salesmanship.

While the auction was in progress the debutantes did not let the assembled purchasers forget the grab bag There were scores of mysterious packages which could be purchased for 50 cents each and the girls in charge secured $27 before the auction was completed.

Nagel Pays $40 for Ring.

The highest price for any article was $40 which was paid by Charles Nagel for a ring with a chrysophase surrounded with small diamonds, which had been donated by Mrs. Marian C. Blossom. A solid mahogany table, donated by Mrs Nagel, was sold to Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus for $15. It was at this point in the proceedings that the secondhand dealer threw up his hands and quit.

"It's a massacre," he exclaimed, "that table is worth $50 if it is worth a penny."

Nagel smiled when he heard of the complaint of the dealer and told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he thought he did remember paying a somewhat higher price for the table, but he added: "I'm mightly glad to see it go in such a good cause."

There was an unexpected lack of bidding for a handkerchief donated by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President, accompanied by a letter from her secretary and a personal card upon which she had written: "Good wishes." Miss Sarah Turner started the bidding at $1. There was a bid of $3 and one of $4 and the handkerchief finally went to Mrs. Jonathan Rice for $5.

A Dresden china coffee pot, which the auctioneer confidentially informed the audience, had cost the owner $75, was withdrawn from sale when no bid higher than $2 was received.

Many Bargains in Cut Glass.

Many articles of cut glass changed ownership at prices from $1 to $3, which the purchasers laughingly admitted were rare bargains and some stated that these would be reoffered for sale if it was decided to have another sale to close out the articles unpurchased. A set of Sheffield plate was purchased by Mrs. Lon Hocker for $30, and Mrs. John Fowler paid $20 for an inlaid table. Edward Dameron secured two bronze figures for $12. A country house basket, donated by Mrs. J. M. Franciscus, was purchased by Mrs. Nagel for $5, and a miniature painting was purchased by Mrs. Kenneth Burns for $4.

Four silver candleshades, donated by Mrs. Daniel Catlin, were sold to Mrs. Holmes for $4.75 each after some spirited bidding. A brass tea kettle, donated by Mrs. John Shepley, was sold to Mrs. Henry S. Turner for $4.

The autographed books were not put up at auction, but Louis Le Beaune stated that several had been disposed of by private sale. Those in charge of the auction said that the result was highly satisfactory and it is probable that the figures of the actual sale will be increased considerably by disposal of some of the articles within the next few days.

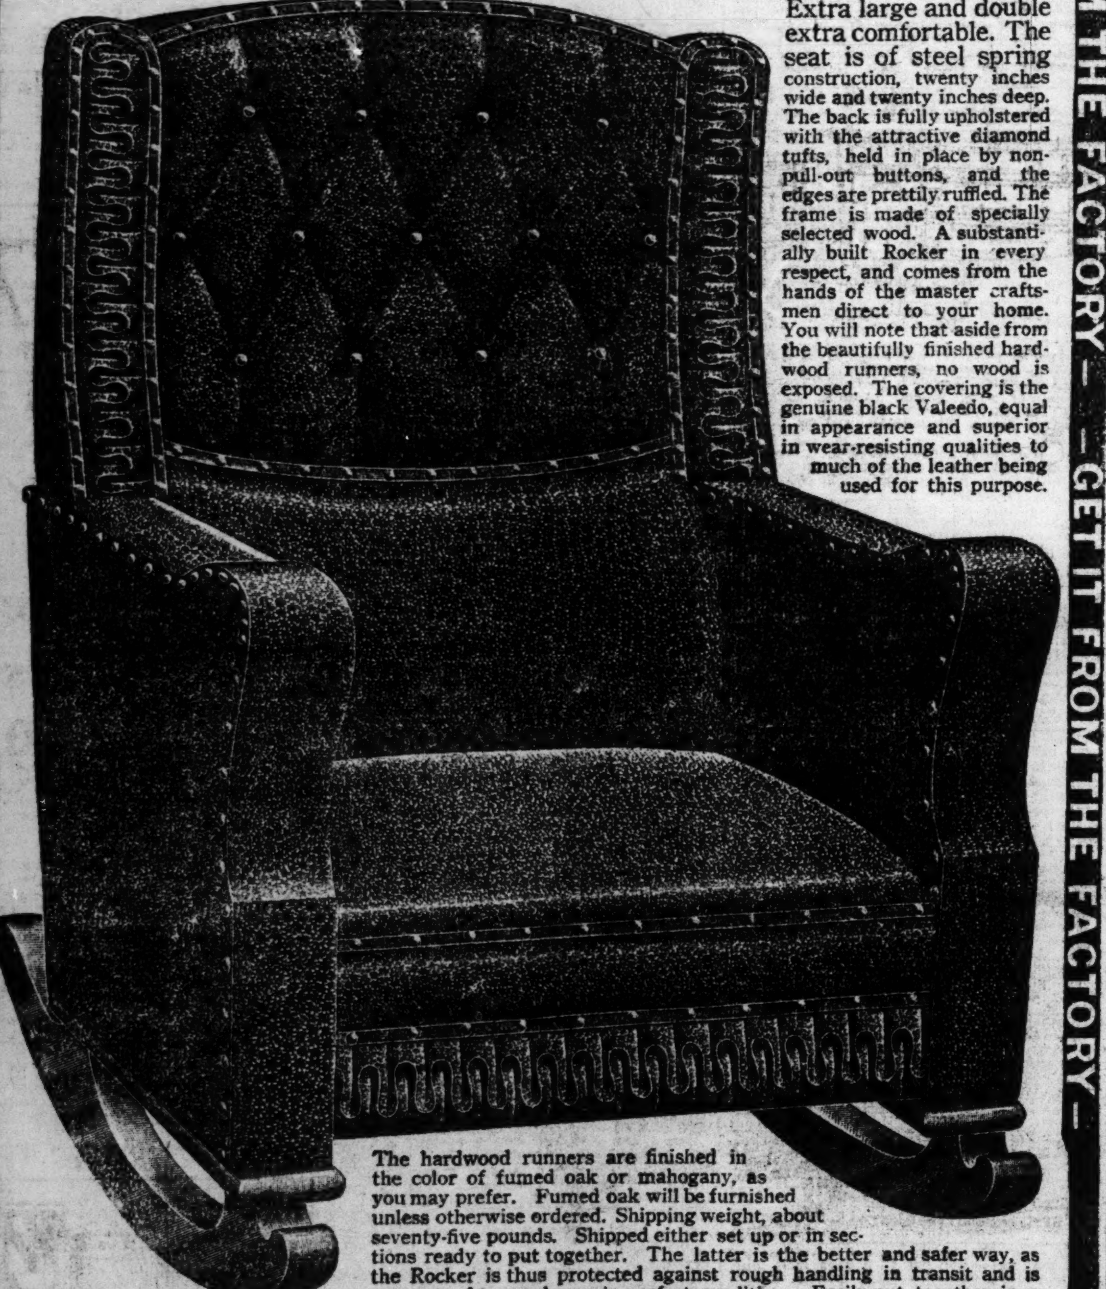
ADMITS HE IS LYMAN WHEN TAKEN BEFORE COMMISSIONER

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 26.—J. Grant Lyman, under Federal Court indictment in New York on charges of using the mails to defraud while operating under the firm name of "John H. Putnam & Co.," today admitted his identity when taken before a United States commissioner for examination.

Since his arrest on a yacht at St. Petersburg, Fla., Thursday, he had declined to answer questions as to whether he was the man sought.



—GET IT FROM THE FACTORY—

SEND NO MONEY

Another example of what it means to get your Home Furnishings direct from the factory. We want you to see this magnificent Turkish Rocker; we want you to enjoy its restful comfort before paying us a cent; we want you to compare it with Rockers, either in leather or imitation, that retail in the stores for $12 to $20. Then, if you are not thoroughly convinced that you have saved one-fourth to one-third by getting the Rocker direct from the factory, you may return it at our expense any time within thirty days from the day it left the factory. If, on the other hand, you are satisfied you have secured the greatest bargain in high-grade upholstered furniture you ever saw or heard of, send us a dollar a month till the special get-acquainted price of $7.65 is paid. Not a penny down till you have had this incomparable factory leader in your home long enough to try it out to your satisfaction.

Extra large and double extra comfortable. The seat is of steel spring construction, twenty inches wide and twenty inches deep. The back is fully upholstered with the attractive diamond tufts, held in place by non-pull-out buttons, and the edges are prettily ruffled. The frame is made of specially selected wood. A substantially built Rocker in every respect, and comes from the hands of the master craftsmen direct to your home. You will note that aside from the beautifully finished hardwood runners, no wood is exposed. The covering is the genuine black Valeedo, equal in appearance and superior in wear-resisting qualities to much of the leather being used for this purpose.

The hardwood runners are finished in the color of fumed oak or mahogany, as you may prefer. Fumed oak will be furnished unless otherwise ordered. Shipping weight, about seventy-five pounds. Shipped either set up or in sections ready to put together. The latter is the better and safer way, as the Rocker is thus protected against rough handling in transit and is guaranteed to reach you in perfect condition. Easily put together in a few minutes. Unless otherwise instructed, the Rocker will be packed in sections, in order that it may reach you safely. Shipment will be made by freight, direct from the Michigan factory to your home. You pay only the trivial transportation charges on arrival and you may return it within thirty days if you are not pleased.

In all large cities we have special delivery service, so that our customers there have no bother in looking after shipments. As soon as the goods arrive they are delivered at once to your home, and you pay only the freight and delivery charges to the driver. Not a cent of the price is payable till thirty days after shipment, and then it is remitted at the rate of only a dollar a month. We have no collectors.

This is a factory leader: we frankly confess it; and we are offering it for the purpose of getting acquainted with you. The offer is open to every reliable housekeeper or her husband in the United States who has not accepted one of our other get-acquainted offers. After we have shipped you this bargain, we expect to retain you as a permanent Quaker Valley customer; but we could not hope to do this if we were not in a position to save you big money on all your purchases of Home Furnishings. From nine great factories we ship direct to the home on the strongest guarantee ever written, namely: a trial of thirty days before you pay us a cent.

So now, sign the coupon and rush it to the mail-box.

HERPICIDE CO.

How Would You Look Without Your Hair?

The answer is too serious to contemplate. And yet, every time hair comes out in the combing you are that much nearer a condition of partial or total baldness. Don't neglect your hair. It's loss is a calamity, which deprives woman of her greatest charm.

Newbro's Herpicide

Saves and Beautifies the Hair

Dandruff robs the hair of luster and luxuriance and causes it to come out. Hence one's system of personal cleanliness is incomplete unless it includes a reliable, sanitary hair dressing. The fact that thousands of ladies daily depend upon Herpicide to keep the hair and scalp clean and free from dandruff is the best possible evidence of the value of this well-known scalp prophylactic.

It is to those who wish to make the most of nature's gifts by having light, fluffy, snappy hair that Newbro's Herpicide appeals most strongly. It has an exquisite fragrance, contains no grease and does not dye or darken the hair. Herpicide is the Original Germ-Remedy for dandruff.

You will like Newbro's Herpicide—try it.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 129-B Detroit, Michigan, for trial bottle and booklet. Applications at the better barber shops. Sold and guaranteed at all toilet goods counters. Accept only genuine Herpicide.

NEWS AND FEATURES OF THE

POULTRY WORLD

HERE ARE THE GROUND PRINCIPLES OF SUCCESS IN THE POULTRY INDUSTRY

Methods of Feeding and Care Found to Be Most Satisfactory and Profitable by the Missouri Experiment Station

MISSOURI has spent large sums on a poultry experiment station at Mountain Grove to determine the most practical and profitable method of producing poultry and eggs. T. E. Quisenberry, one of the most noted practical poultry experts in the United States, was in charge of the experiment station from the time it was founded until last week, when he resigned.

The poultry industry in this State amounts to more than $60,000,000 a year, its value being greater than that of the wheat and oats crops combined. The value of the industry, it is suggested, can be increased to more than $100,000,000 a year by the adoption of the methods of feeding, housing and care, recommended by the experiment station. The methods found to be the most satisfactory and profitable have been described in the bulletins issued by the station, of which Director Quisenberry was the author, and they are summarized in the following article:

The first essential to successful poultry raising is a good house for the hens. These busy producers of wealth are entitled to a comfortable home. For a flock of 50 to 60 hens, which is about the average farm or back yard flock, the Experiment Station recommends the "fool-proof poultry house," 14 feet square. The house should be erected on high, dry ground, and water should never be allowed to stand in the poultry yards. The house should be built of grooved lumber. The front of the house should be not over eight feet high, and the rear not over six feet. The floor may be earth, board or concrete. The cost of the house need not exceed $60. It can be built in two or three days by a carpenter, or any man handy with tools. Plans of the house will be furnished free to Missourians upon application to the Experiment Station. These plans will show details as to nests, sanitary arrangements, etc. Residents of other States may obtain these publications at cost.

Breeds Puzzle Beginner.

The production of table and market poultry and eggs is the principal object of the town-lot and farm poultry raisers. The beginner is often puzzled on the subject of breeds. So far as egg production is concerned, the Experiment Station has demonstrated that there is very little difference in breeds. Any of the standard lines, Leghorns, Plymouth Rocks, Reds, Orpingtons, Wyandottes, are good egg-producers if they have been bred to lay. Egg-laying contests have been conducted by the station for a period of five years. One year one breed makes the best showing and another breed the next year.

Select a good laying strain from any of the standard varieties and you cannot go wrong. It is well to buy your stock from a breeder who has developed his laying strains by trap-nesting. You are then certain to get only good laying stock, which can be further improved by careful breeding and trap-nesting to weed out the drones—or nonlaying hens. Remember that hens are not like bees. The working bees kill the drones, but in poultry raising you will have to get rid of your own nonproductive stock.

By exercising care in hatching your stock you may have hens laying all the year round. The Experiment Station finds that the early hatched chickens, which are well matured by early fall, are the best winter layers. Stock hatched in early April ought to begin laying in October and November. As a rule, the heavier breeds, hatched after the middle of May, will not begin laying until the following spring, but they are good spring and summer layers, and fresh eggs for home consumption are probably more desirable in the summer months than in the winter months, because in the winter months it is not so absolutely impossible to buy in the markets eggs that can be eaten. There is nothing so delicious as fresh eggs from your own poultry yard, and having once acquired the taste for real fresh eggs you will never be satisfied with any product from the market.

Hens Should Be Well Fed.

Hens should be well fed to produce eggs. A good laying ration for spring, summer and fall consists of two parts of wheat and one part of cracked corn, and for the winter months, two parts of cracked corn and one part of wheat. The grain is thrown into litter on the floor, and the hens are made to scratch for their feed. A pint of this mixture in the morning and one and one-half pints at night is sufficient for 10 hens.

To balance the ration for best egg producing results the Experiment Station recommends a dry mash, made of either of the two formulas:

No. 1: 100 pounds of ground oats, 10 pounds of dry beef scraps, two pounds of bone meal, one pound of fine salt, and one pound of powdered charcoal.

No. 2: 100 pounds of ground oats, 100 pounds of wheat bran, 100 pounds of shorts or middlings, 100 pounds of corn meal, 60 pounds of dry beef scraps, 10 pounds of bone meal, four pounds of salt and four pounds of powdered charcoal.

The mash should be kept in hoppers in the poultry house so that the hens may help themselves. To get the highest egg yield, feed some of the mash, moistened with sour milk or water, about 3 o'clock in the afternoons. For green food, ensilage, fresh cut clover or alfalfa, sprouted oats, mangle beets or growing wheat or oats are recommended as most desirable.

Where it is not possible to feed the mashes, the beef scraps and wheat and corn rations may be fed to great advantage, as they contain the proper ingredients for the production of whites and yolks of eggs in uniform quantity. Of course there should be grits and oyster shells always within reach of the fowls.

Those who have to buy their feed will get better results by purchasing the grain and making their own mixtures. Many of the prepared mixtures are made up of poor quality of grain. Instead of buying the ready mixed feeds, buy the proper quantities of wheat and cracked corn separately. You will save from 20 to 40 per cent, and get a far better feed.

What Production Should Be.

The experiment station has demonstrated that a hen producing 90 eggs a year just pays for her feed. Hens from laying strains, properly fed and housed, ought to produce from 150 to 200 eggs each, every year. Leghorns and Anconas, weighing 3½ pounds, were found to be better layers than either heavier and lighter hens, and of the heavier breeds, the six-pound hens produced the highest average of eggs.

The only way to determine absolutely whether all your hens are profitable layers is to trap nest your flock. There are many varieties of trapnests on the market, but they are easily made at home. The nests should be 12 to 18 inches square, and 12 to 15 inches high, so that the hens will have plenty of room. The body of the nest should be built of light material, while the trigger and trap door should be made of ⅞-inch material. The trigger must be set in such a position that when the door is swung inward and rests on the notch it will be invitingly open, and at the same time the opening must be small enough to prevent the hen from walking into the door without touching it with her back. As she steps into the nest she raises the door with her back, releasing the trigger. She is now trapped in the nest, where you will find her after she has laid. By having numbered leg bands on the hens, and keeping a record, it will be easy to determine which hens are paying for their keep, and which are drones. The drones should go to the table or the market, and only the highest egg producers be retained.

Feed Bins Easily Made.

The feed bins, boxes for oyster shells, grit and charcoal, are all easily made. The bulletins issued by the Poultry Experiment Station contain drawings and descriptions of everything needed by the poultryman, from the house, to the smallest accessory, and as only a post card is necessary to bring these bulletins to your mail box, there is no reason why any Missouri poultry raiser should not have, not only expert advice as to how to care for his flock, but also as to what equipment is necessary.

Nobody should undertake to raise poultry who is not willing to provide them with comfortable and sanitary houses and to give them proper care. A well selected flock of hens, if properly housed and fed, will pay good dividends on the investment. Many people who move from the city to the suburbs make the mistake of picking up scrub stock wherever they can find it; of having poor or damp quarters, and never studying the requirements of the hens. The best results are obtained only by those who are willing to give time, industry and intelligence to the poultry problem.

Little Wisdom in Changing Varieties

I believe it is wise to stand by a variety of poultry one has taken up, yet if one gets really tired of it there may be wisdom in trying something else. Most varieties, however, are good.

Breeders choose a variety for varied reasons. Then they hear of some wonderful results obtained by one using another variety, and if they are not making a satisfactory profit out of their birds they change to it only, as a rule, to be disappointed again. The trouble, as a rule, is not with the variety, but with the owner.

There is no better variety for laying purposes than the White Leghorn. Nevertheless, a Leghorn breeder not infrequently reads extravagant claims about some other variety, gets rid of his and takes up the other. If he really likes the latter best this is the wise course to pursue, but the chances are that he will find no variety that will lay more eggs than the White Leghorn. On the other hand, there are some varieties which will lay as many eggs as the White Leghorn.

I have bred several varieties. The best layers I ever owned were Silver Wyandottes, and though I have always been, and am now, an admirer of the Silver Wyandotte as a beautiful and useful bird, I do not believe that, in general, it is a better layer than birds of other varieties I have owned. Indeed, in one Australian laying contest, a pen of Wyandottes was first. Another pen of this variety brought up the rear.

Utility results come from care and skill in breeding, rearing and feeding rather than from the fact that one's birds are of a given variety.

My observation is that breeders who change varieties frequently usually do not suceed with any.

Poultry Problems Solved

Mating Pens.

Will you kindly tell us if we can mate a pen of 4 R. I. Red laying pullets and a Rhode Island Red cock, or must we have more pullets? They are confined in a henhouse 8x10.—W. W., St. Louis.

Your pen is all right. There is no reason why you should not get very satisfactory results from mating one male to four females. Some authorities contend that it is better in the case of a breed like the Reds to have a larger number of females, perhaps eight or a dozen. I think the larger number would do quite as well, but there is difference of opinion as to which would be better. At any rate, the mating you have is a perfectly practical one. Some fanciers who are breeding for fine points for a special purpose will sometimes mate a male with only one or two females, and with good results.

A Kick.

In an article last week on limberneck, when you said decayed meat was the cause, you came very near hitting the spot. Limberneck is neither contagious or infectious, altough it is caused only by maggots or their eggs, when eaten by the chickens. The maggots eat their way through the crop into the muscles of the neck and cause the death of the fowls. I can cure two out of twelve cases if I notice the trouble in time. If the chickens have eaten the maggots, there is no help, because maggots get busy as soon as they are eaten and the eggs hatch in a few hours. I give a teaspoonful of kerosene every hour for four hours. I use a common machine oil can for this purpose. In the meantime I search in the direction where the affected chickens generally run for something dead.

That egg-candling apparatus is good, yet it could have two holes in just as well as one, but it must have an opening in the top for safety.

In your treatment for colds you have the right idea, but you don't go far enough in the use of the permanganate. If you want to see a flock of healthy chickens, come and see mine.

I used to have great faith in the so-called Douglas Mixture. It is a good medicine, but for a cure-all give me the permanganate. I dissolve four ounces in a quart of warm water and then use one tablespoonful to a gallon of the drinking water. My chickens get that once in two weeks.

How Fence-Flying Habit May Be Cured

One of the annoyances of keeping poultry yarded in the city or suburbs is the fence-flying habit of some fowls, especially the smaller, more active breeds. The same trouble is met with on farms where the garden is fenced to keep out the chickens. There are several ways in which this habit may be cured, or at least discouraged. A very common practice is to clip the feathers from the tip of one wing—about 2½ inches. Some poultry raisers make the mistake of clipping the tips from both wings, believing this to be more effective. However, the bird with both wings clipped can do more flying than if only one is clipped. In the latter case it cannot balance itself.

To stop birds from flying some poultrymen fasten a bent wire on one wing in such a way that the fowl cannot straighten the wing.

The nature of the fence has a good deal to do with the fence-flying habit. A wire fence is much better than one made of boards, since the birds cannot see so good a place to alight on the former, nor can they gauge its height. If there are reasons why a board fence should be built, or if there is one on the place, stretch a small wire about six inches above the top of it and the fowls will soon become convinced of the uselessness of trying to fly over it.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

WHEAT AND COTTON DROP, BUT STOCKS HOLD FIRM ON NEW YORK EXCHANGE

Evening Post Expert Questions Legitimacy of Values in Wall Street.

LONDON MARKET QUIET

German Offensive on Western Front Fails to Materially Depress Prices.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today says:

"The rapid downward sweep of prices for such commodities as wheat and cotton, during the past few weeks, will probably cause opposite emotions in the minds of the lately excited producers and speculators, and in that of the thoughtful economist. On the face of things, the declines have many elements of legitimate disappointment.

"The cotton crop now going to market was cut down 30 per cent from that of the previous season, and, chiefly through deliberate restriction of planted acreage, was the smallest yield since 1909. The wheat crop of 1915 was of unprecedented magnitude, but the prospect for next year's crop is not such as to indicate anything like a duplication of it and prices are regulated not only by existing conditions but by prospective supplies. Yet 'spot of cotton' this week reached a figure 10 per cent under the top level of January, while wheat sold 25c below the price of a month ago, and 54c under the high level of 1915.

Speculation Is Checked.

"But this receding wave of speculative prices, bears testimony to one fact at any rate—that in this abnormal economic period values have not been swept to a wholly artificial plane. We are not, in this country, living in an era of inflation, of paper prices. If we were, the wheat market and the cotton market would have been the last to talk. There has been a good deal of talk about artificial influence and unreal stimulus to the markets of United States in this present war time, and a good deal of the movement of the day is certainly at least temporary and, in the long run, unnatural. But the notion that paper currency inflation is responsible for our present condition has been sufficiently exploded already, and if it had not been, the action of the market for the great agricultural staples would serve the purpose.

"How far the iron and steel market—the traditional 'barometer of trade'—can be similarly classified, is a considerably more difficult question. If that market were to be accepted this time, as the foreshadowing of what is to happen elsewhere in American trade, the economic horoscope would be something so abnormal as to baffle all sober consideration. But the state of production and prices in the steel industry, like the similarly extravagant figures of our export trade, is admittedly an outgrowth of the war, and of Europe's purely belligerent requirements. There is not the slightest doubt that, 25 years from now, the 'export-excess' of 1915, will be pointed out as the most strikingly eccentric incident in the century's economic history.

Steel Trade Influences.

"But precisely the same influences which have swung a national trade position from its ordinary moorings have carried the steel trade situation along with it. Perhaps it will not be until the war actually is over that we shall learn just what is the normal position of the industry. In the meantime, it can hardly serve its usual purpose, as the accurate index to other industries.

"Stocks showed irregular changes on the week's trading. Yesterday's market was sharply lower, largely on account of the German's success near Verdun."

LONDON MARKET IS STEADY DESPITE GERMAN OFFENSIVE

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The sudden resumption of military activities on the Western front has caused little surprise here. It was expected on the approach of spring, and was a consequence of the intense conviction—which in fact exists on both sides—that no possible means of shortening the war should be neglected.

The city's judgment of Germany's special stroke at Verdun this week is that the plan was wholly based on a speedy and successful accomplishment of the objective. But the French line is believed to be unbreakable, and there are no present indications, to our mind, of early termination of the war through military operations.

Germany's Position.

Whether the German Government will be influenced by knowledge of impending difficulties in its financial situation, is a different matter. The increasing influence of the Socialist party is another influence. There is excellent information to the effect, not that Germany is embarrassed by lack of food, but that the German financial community is seriously alarmed at the possibility of a collapse of the country's financial and commercial power, if the war is prolonged.

The feeling is that the sober section even of the German people themselves, will ultimately be compelled to recognize the folly of their rulers. The moral influence of President Wilson in determining the issue is still a powerful possibility, if he is satisfied, as we are, that the entente Powers are influenced by no purpose of territorial aggrandizement, but by determination to protect the weak States, and to maintain the principles of civilization.

Our own financial position is improved by the growing recognition that the economic aspects of war are those on which the outcome largely hinges. The revenue from the new taxation is magnificent. The fiscal year ending next month is likely to show an increase of £150,000,000 over the period before the war. Probably the budget provisions will be drastic, including more taxes on imports of luxuries. This, however, is expected to affect your trade with us only slightly. The "thrift movement" which is growing, will itself in all probability have as great an influence as the taxation of imports.

In the economic situation, the next three months should witness important developments. That this is probable in Germany, the continued fall of the reichsmark and Berlin's sensitiveness to the fact are sufficient indications.

Wagner Electric stock sold $2 per share higher on the local Stock Exchange yesterday, to a new high record of $209.50, with closing bids at $209.75, compared with sales yesterday at $207.75. The buying in the stock was influenced by the favorable statement of the company showing over 33 per cent earned on the stock in the last fiscal year.

Trading in the bank and trust list of stocks was fair, and prices quoted were steady. The bond list reflected a good investment demand in several issues at steady values.

The statement of the Wagner Electric Company for the year ending Dec. 31, 1915, issued yesterday, shows gross and net earnings the largest in its history. The net profits totaled $610,475, or 33.9 per cent on the capital of $1,800,000. This compares with $259,228, or 17.2 per cent, in 1913, and $265,335, or 14.7 per cent in 1914. The surplus, after all charges and dividends, was $1,195,092, of which $610,475 was added in 1915. The close of the year found all branches of the company running at capacity, and with business ahead for several months. Operations in 1915 were substantially increased by "temporary special contracts," representing war orders. All regular lines are reported as being in a healthy condition, especially the electric starter and lighting systems for automobiles. In 1916 150,000 "Wagner" equipments will be supplied to cars and trucks of automobile manufacturers. All retiring directors were reelected as follows: James W. Bell, Albert Blair, W. K. Bixby, J. M. Buick, John F. Lee, Thomas H. West and W. A. Layman. The special stockholders' meeting unanimously approved the proposed increase in capital to $2,000,000, and plans of the directorate for distributing the increase.

Butter, Eggs and Poultry.

EGGS—Prices eased off a little, more offering and demand not so urgent as on Friday, bulk of the sales being on shipping account. Erratic course of prices the past week or so is not unusual for this season of the year—big spring movement not far off, yet the possibility of sudden change to wintry weather is not past, consequently the market is very sensitive and subject to radical fluctuations in value: Quote: Fresh firsts at 20c, cases returned ½c less; held, stale, mixed, etc., dull and discounted according to quality.

BUTTER—In light supply and firm, high grades being in best demand and hardest to obtain. Country store packed also firm: Quote: Creamery—Extras at 33½c, firsts at 29@30c, seconds at 26c and ladle-packed 22c. Packing stock 18c—cheesy 15c.

LIVE POULTRY—Receipts lighter than on any day this week, hence trading of a wholesale character of very limited nature; in fact, hardly enough done on which to base accurate quotations. Hen market very firm, the scant offerings being about equally divided between shippers and dressers. Springs in good demand locally and turkeys in urgent demand also. Ducks steady, but geese very dull, a good many being sold at the extreme inside price. Turkeys, 21c; turkeys, old toms, 18c; turkeys, culls, 13c; fowls, 13½c; spring chickens, 15½c; staggy young roosters, 11c; broilers, 19c; cocks, 9c; ducks, 16½c; geese, 8@10c; capons, over 7 pounds, 19c; capons, under 7 pounds, 17c; capons, slips, 15c; guineas, round, per dozen, $3.50.

DRESSED POULTRY—Steady; not much offering. Turkeys, 23½c; turkeys, toms, 21c; turkeys, No. 2, 15c; fowls, 14½c; spring chickens, 16½c; ducks, 17½c; geese, 10@12c; cocks, 10c; capons, over 7 pounds, 22c; capons, 6@7 pounds, 20c; capons, slips, 17c.

LARGER EXPORTS FAIL TO CHECK COTTON BEARS

Range of Future Prices Is Lower on the Week—Spots Are Fairly Steady.

The most encouraging feature to the declining cotton market is the export movement. Exports dropped several weeks ago to less than 100,000 bales per week. In December and January there were exported only about 805,000 bales, a movement overseas that was smaller than known in recent years, during those two months. The last week in December and every week in January totaled less than 100,000 bales. In February the movement began to increase and has apparently settled around 135,000 to 140,000 bales per week, although the first two weeks of February saw a movement of 200,000 bales. The American mills are expected to take 7,000,000 bales, a quantity to which the whole cotton trade agrees, and, with that, the takings from this crop and the surplus of last year's crop may be with some accuracy measured.

Exports on Good Basis.

Apparently the export movement has settled down to a supply basis; that is, there is being taken abroad a sufficient quantity to maintain European stocks at their present level, but not enough to increase them; the present movement, as measured by the forwarding to spinners from Liverpool market, just about supplies the mills with their weekly requirements.

In this abundance of caution, reducing the estimate of the weekly export movement to 100,000 bales per week for the balance of the season, 22 weeks, the total exports for the current season would be 5,600,000 bales. This figure, added to the 7,000,000 bales which American mills are expected to take, would give a total world's taking of American cotton of 12,600,000 bales; such a figure means a reduction of fully 750,000 bales of cotton in the total stock of the United States.

This is a creditable showing and proves that the reduction in acreage last season was well measured and accomplished its purpose. Even though exports from now on should drop to the average of 75,000 bales per week, the total exports for the season would top only 5,000,000 bales, and the total takings would amount to 12,050,000 bales, or about 250,000 bales more than the crop, and a corresponding reduction in the surplus.

Unquestionably, after a decline of nearly 200 points in July cotton, without regard to the ultimate course of the market, it is time to pause and measure the conditions now and during the period of high prices just prior to the decline. As far as the middle of December the exports of this season were more than during the corresponding time last year, but it was only because last year began with complete paralysis of shipping, followed by an awakening and such a late season movement as the cotton trade had never seen before.

This year the movement has never been large as a weekly movement, but has been fairly uniform, when the high rates and scarce freight room is considered. Plainly, this country has become the storehouse for European cotton dealers; the reason for this is too plain to write of, further than to recall the dangers from air-raiders and their bombs when the cotton is stored abroad.

Cotton Is Collateral.

This small export movement, therefor, is not new and discouraging—its steadiness is encouraging, and makes more certain the reduction in acreage, which must be made if prices are maintained, because it enables us to figure with some reasonableness, what the world's takings will be this year, and from that what they will be next year. With such knowledge before them—knowledge of a decreasing stock—bankers are likely to be more confident of the value of cotton as a collateral, even at $50 per bale valuation.

While spots have declined considerably, they have not declined to the point where middling cotton is not safe collateral at $50 per bale, and this year the proportion of low grades is smaller than usual, so cotton men say; and, too, it is doubtful if at any time this season there has been more than $50 per bale loaned on cotton. For this reason the expected enforced "dumping" is not imminent, and, therefore, a collapse in spot prices may not be looked for.

On Oct. 6, July cotton in New York sold as high as 13.67c; two weeks later, after considerable jockeying above 13c, the market broke through and declined, almost without reaction, to 11.83c. From this point there was a recovery, with much fluctuation, until the high point for that swing was reached at 13.30c, on Dec. 8. Here is noted a recovery of 150 points, from a level 30 points higher than the close of the market on Saturday, Feb. 26.

After Dec. 8 the market swung up and down, the extreme low point in the swing being 12.33c, and the high around 13c, the market reaching the latter point several times, and finding fewer friends each time. Between Jan. 7 and 18, the high point for July was in the 13.90c, every day except one, so stable was the market. But there were more each time waiting to sell at the high level, and the market has since that time made an orderly and steady decline.

Quantities of cotton have been sold in the future markets, probably for the most part as a hedge against spots, but to some extent for speculative purposes. In any event, the future market in New York has been sold down to the point where middling cotton would have to be bought for 10⅜c in St. Louis to make a parity with the New York future market. Middling is quoted here at 11.25c, and March cotton, the spot month, in New York, closed at 11.13c Saturday, and March is not out of line with the other months, when the carrying charges are taken into consideration.

That the St. Louis market is not taken because it is an exception, and a more pointed example, may be seen from the Galveston, New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah, Augusta, Memphis, Houston and quotations, which are, respectively, 11.55c, 11.13c, 10.88c, 11½c, 11.32c, 11.38c and 11.50c.

Under such conditions, the sharpest kind of a reaction may be expected, and this without regard to the distant future. Whether one be a bull or a bear, it must be recognized that the future markets are in a dangerous technical position, so far as the bears are concerned.

The break in wheat futures of over 20 cents since Jan. 26, with a 5-cent drop yesterday, has raised the question with traders whether the selling has not about exhausted itself. If history is to repeat, as compared with last year's war market, quotations should be very close to the turning point, unless the war in Europe is nearing a settlement, which naturally would open the Dardanelles to Russian wheat shipments, and no doubt change the entire "scenery" of the wheat pits.

Wheat last year, in the big boom, touched the extreme top on Feb. 5, with the May option in Chicago at $1.67. This year the top of $1.38⅜ was reached Jan. 26. Between Feb. 5 and March 6 last year May wheat in Chicago dropped to $1.35¾. Now we have a corresponding break in values that is very similar to that time. Between March 6, a year ago and May 3, Chicago May wheat had recovered to $1.64⅛; and as the market this year has followed last year's prices very closely, why not expect the movement to continue similar, between now and the early part of May.

The winter wheat crop has been placed by the Government at 540,000,000 bu, or some 115,000,000 bu less than last year, and there is no probability that the spring wheat crop will approximate anywhere near the record yield of 356,000,000 bu of a year ago. Even now the winter wheat acreage has been materially reduced by winter killing, and bug damage, drouth, hot winds and black rust are yet to be figured in the ultimate harvest.

The present liquidation seems the more severe, in that the decline in two weeks has wiped out the gain of two months. That is invariably the way in bear markets. Prices always decline much faster than they advance, for the public invariably favors the long side, and when they become loaded up with speculative contracts, as they have been recently, the rush to sell carries values down in almost a panicky decline.

Technical Position Weak.

Of course the recent technical position of the market was decidedly weak, as farmers have not only been holding their actual wheat, but have been "plunging" on the speculative side of the markets. There is an old saying that when the farmer gets both the cash wheat and speculative wheat on hand, it is time to take to the "tall timbers" on the bull side of the market. This has been aptly demonstrated in the wide decline of the past two weeks, as seldom in the history of the trade has the Merchants' Exchange seen more farmer visitors on the floor than there were when wheat was at the high level recently.

How badly the farmers have been punished in the present decline in wheat is illustrated by the statement made to a Post-Dispatch reporter on the Merchants' Exchange floor yesterday. The farmer had $14,000 profit on a long line of May wheat in Chicago. He sold out at $1.37. When the market broke back to $1.32 he bought 90,000 bushels and said he was going home and wait until the market went to $1.50. At the closing price of May wheat yesterday the farmer's profits were not only wiped out, but he had a loss of over $15,000 on his trades. There has seldom been a time in the wheat market when the "outside" trade lost so heavily as in the present break.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash wheat was 2c to 3c lower and slow sale at the decline.

Cash corn was unchanged, quality considered, with the supply light and the demand limited.

Cash oats were steady on good grades, with selections lower to sell; fair shipping demand.

WHEAT BREAKS 5 CENTS IN CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Excited selling that resulted from pessimistic surmises about developments in the submarine issues and that arose from unconfirmed rumors of the fall of Verdun, brought about a severe break today in the price of wheat. The market closed semi-demoralized 5⅛c to 5¼c net lower, with May at $1.13½ and July at $1.10¾. Corn finished ⅞c to 1⅛@1¼c down, and oats off ½@⅝c to ⅞@1c, but provisions unchanged to 5c higher.

Although wheat showed weakness from the outset, declines in quotations did not become radical until the last hour of the session. Attempts here to explain setbacks in the New York stock market as being possibly due to a less favorable outlook for avoiding an open breach between the United States and Germany were what first gave to wheat the violent downward impetus that turned loose a flood of standing orders to sell out holdings and to put a stop to losses. During the rush to unload an erroneous rumor spread that the Germans had captured the whole fortress of Verdun. The effect on the market was to increase greatly the pressure to sell. Denials about Verdun afforded little or no relief.

Before the stampede of the wheat bulls took place, forecasts of heavy shipments from Australia and Argentina had been something of a weight on the market. Demand was further curtailed by the fact that most of yesterday's big export sales in the United States had turned out to be for deferred shipments. The flurry in the last hour found the market virtually bare of buying orders except those coming from shorts who were in a position to realize profits.

LIGHT RECEIPTS FORCE CATTLE MARKET HIGHER

Week's Price Range Is 15c to 25c Up—Sheep Are in Demand.

RECEIPTS AT NATIONAL STOCKYARDS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year. Ago.
Cattle	13,560	14,165	7,595
Hogs	64,494	81,156	45,835
Sheep	7,480	8,720	9,172
Horses and M.	4,186	5,821	7,332

With light receipts and a stronger demand from eastern points for beef, came a higher cattle market last week. Receipts were moderate, comparatively speaking. The quality was a shade improved over the previous week. There were more $8.00 steers on sale than there has been any time this month. The top was $9.00, paid for a small string, with full loads selling at $8.90. The bulk of the steers on sale went in a range $7.25@8.25. The market displayed strength. Best classes sold 15c to 25c higher, with common grades selling below $7.00, on a 10c to 15c higher level. Buyers were out all week, and rode the alleys with a manner that plainly showed that they were after the beef. The advance now puts the trade on a 50c to 75c higher basis than the low time a few weeks previous.

Butcher cattle also sold higher. Heifers were in fair supply and moved actively. There were advances of 10c to 15c evident all along the line. The best straight heifers sold up to $8.50, with mixed steers and heifers topping at $8.75. The cow supply was good. There was a liberal sprinkling of the choice beef cows fed on a corn diet. These sold up to $7.50, with the bulk of the cows going from $5.25 to $6.00. Market on these classes was 10c higher, and in spots 15c above the previous week. Canners moved well all week, but prices scored no material advance. There was a strong inquiry for veal throughout the week. The market was 50c higher, with the prime grades selling at $11.25. Stockers and feeders were in strong demand all week. Best heavy feeders sold up to $7.50, with stocker steers up to $7.85. This is the highest point of the year. The market was strong to 10c higher, as compared with the previous week.

Southern Receipts Light.

Southern cattle receipts were rather light. The entire supply for the week emanated from territory of the South and East, and no Texas or Oklahoma steers got in. The quality of the supply was common and the showing comprised miscellaneous classes mostly.

There was an advance from the outset of the week. Buyers were strong contenders all week, and the close brought a 10c to 15c advance on grown classes, with yearlings barely steady. The light weights found a higher market early, but the supply became somewhat burdensome and after killers became well filled up they were averse to accepting them at steady rates, and demanded discounts of 10c to 15c late. The bulk of the yearlings at the close sold at $4.65. Canners went from $4.35 to $4.40, with cutters from $4.75 to $5, and some strong grades sold late at $5.10.

There was nothing good in the steer line available, and the rank of them were common scrub steers. They showed a betterment of a big 15c. The clearance for the week was thorough.

Just a fairly good supply of hogs was received, and taken as a whole the market was on the highest basis it has been since the middle of last October. Good hogs with a little weight were scarce, while there was a liberal number of pigs and lights received, and many of them were not very good, as they were from Southern territory. This Southern stuff found a very dull, uneven market. Wednesday was the highest day of the week, when the top of the market was $8.70, and the bulk of the hogs went at $8.35@8.60. Good smooth hogs, with a little weight, that is 200 pounds and over, were best sellers, and went at $8.35 and upwards, while the mixed and plain hogs went largely at $8@8.30, with Southern offerings under $8, some selling as low as $7.75. Rough packers went at $7.75@8.

The best end of the pigs and lights, that sellers were sure were corn fed and could guarantee, went at $7.75@8.25, medium grades sold at $7.25@7.65, the best of the pigs and lights sold at $7.15@7.65, fair to medium grades $6.25@7, and the common kinds $5.50@6. Quite a few pigs sold at $6 and less.

Sheep Supplies Are Small.

An extremely small supply of sheep was received, and the market was on the highest basis in the history of the trade. The arrivals were principally from Colorado, with a few western included, which were fed in nearby States. It was a good, active trade all week, and the demand was much greater than the supply. Early in the week several lots of Colorado lambs brought $11.50, which is the record price for wool lambs on this market, but in sympathy with other markets, values dropped back, and the middle and latter part of the week found best lambs going at $11.25, medium grades at $10.25@11.00, and the poor kinds and culls at $8.00@10.00, according to quality.

The arrivals contained a few loads of yearlings, and the best of them sold at $9.25@9.50, several loads going at the latter price. Best fat sheep went at $8.00, with the medium grades at $7.75, and poor kinds at $6.75@7.50, according to quality and fat. Bucks sold largely at $6.75. Choppers and stockers, also canners, were very scarce all week.

DON'T LET SOAP SPOIL YOUR HAIR

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in; about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

GIRL STARVES TO DEATH; HER THROAT CONSTRICTED BY LYE

Since Dec. 30, Her Only Food Was Milk Taken Few Drops at a Time—Lost 30 Pounds.

Miss Annie Brazis, 19 years old, of 1311 North Twentieth street, died Friday afternoon at the city hospital from starvation resulting from constriction of her esophagus, caused by lye which she accidentally swallowed Dec. 30.

Her esophagus was constricted in three places. She was unable to swallow food and her only sustenance was milk, taken a few drops at a time. The physicians cured two of the constrictions, but could not reach the third. By that time the girl had lost 30 pounds in weight. Five days ago an operation was performed. The third constriction was removed and sustenance was supplied through a catheter, but her life could not be saved.

An aunt of the young woman said that Miss Brazis arose in the night to get a drink and took from a shelf a cup containing some lye. She poured water into it in the dark and drank the mixture.

GENERAL USE OF CUPPLES STATION IS NOT DESIRED

Mahlon B. Wallace So Testifies at Interstate Commerce Commission Hearing.

DISCRIMINATION CHARGED

Warehouse Men Say They Are Unable to Compete With Company's Equipment.

Testifying before Interstate Commerce Examiner Mackley yesterday at the Planters Hotel, Mahlon B. Wallace, president of the Samuel Cupples Woodenware Co., said the management of Cupples Station would prefer that the general shipping public should not use the station.

Wallace's testimony was given at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing based on a complaint by the McPheeters Warehouse Co. and others that the Wabash and the Chicago & Alton Railroads are granting discriminatory freight handling service to tenants of the Cupples Block.

The complaining warehouse companies put several witnesses on the stand, but the burden of their testimony was that the Cupples Station had a freight handling equipment with which they could not compete.

No Policy of Exclusion.

Wallace testified that until 1908 no facilities were provided for shippers who were not tenants of the block, but he said it had never been the policy of the station to exclude outside shippers. In 1908, after the passage of Elkins anti-trust law, a surface platform was constructed in the Cupples Block for the use of the general public.

Wallace described this platform as being located across the width of a 60-foot street and said it would afford accomomdations for five wagons if they were backed in to the platform.

Asked if the arrangements at Cupples Station made it an unusually desirable place for tenants, Wallace said the Cupples Woodenware Co. paid a rental of 20 cents a square foot for its space in the Cupples block, while its rental payments for other property outside the block was 12 cents to 15 cents a square foot. The freight facilities, he said, made the Cupples block space worth more money.

Wallace said he believed that if the burden of trucking and elevating the freight were put upon Cupples Station instead of the railroads, it would be necessary for Washington University to offset this expense by charging higher rents.

Property in Unique Position.

Isaac A. Hedges, manager of the Cupples Station property, testified that Washington University owns property in St Louis to the amount of $10,000,000 or $12,000,000.

When asked regarding the value of the land at Cupples Station, Hedges replied that the plot of ground, 400x1200 feet, occupies a unique position at the mouth of the Terminal tunnel. He said there is no similar site in St. Louis and he did not know of a site with the same advantages in any other city. He said that all land value depends upon its availability for the service for which it is required. While the heart of the city might change, he said, it is unlikely that the value of terminal facilities will change.

Simmons Recalled to Stand.

Frank Mullivan, traffic manager for the Crunden-Martin Manufacturing Co., one of the protestors, testified that the warehouses of his company were served over the tracks which entered between the company's buildings, and that the company had to pay for the unloading of the cars, which amounted to about $10 to $12.50 a day that competitors in the Cupples Block were not required to pay. He said he thought this a discrimination. On cross examination he admitted that no one used the tracks but the Crunden-Martin Co., and that there was an agreement with the railroad that the tracks into the company's plant were for its exclusive use.

George W. Simmons was recalled to the witness chair just before the close of the hearing to answer questions of Examiner Mackley, who wished to be clearly informed as to freight handling at Cupples Station.

Mackley asked if one of the big shippers now a resident of Cupples Station were not within the buildings included in the station property, would the railroads give the outsider the same service.

Simmons said such a shipper's goods would be delivered to the public door, from whence the shipper would have to receive it, just as he would receive it from a certain door on the platform of any railroad station. He was asked why there was not a common platform for all, and he answered that the platform was arranged so that the freight could be handled with most convenience, and that the doors of the residents of Cupples Station were arranged so that the freight could be handled with least trouble.

Facilities Cost Great Sum.

He was asked if the trucking of freight by the railroads did not go beyond the platform precincts under lease by the roads, and he replied that they did not. He said the roads elevated the freight to the higher levels from the rails to designated doors, where truckmen for the shippers received it.

Simmons said the walls of the buildings were the lines of demarcation that showed where the platform service ended. Simmons admitted that a shipper in Cupples Station had some advantage over one who was not adjacent to the railroad tracks, but he asserted that it was an advantage that was overbalanced by the fact that he was paying extra in rentals for the superior facilities that Cupples Station offered, which facilities, he said, had cost an immense amount of money.

OF INTEREST TO MEN

Nervous, tired, broken, tottering men and women, unable to enjoy the pleasures of life, with capacity for business impaired, find in Cadomene Tablets (3 grain) the greatest aid to nature in restoring to the mind and body new strength, vitality and life. If you're in the crowd "moving back," if you're not the same person you were a few months or years ago, it's because your nervous system is shattered, impoverished and inactive. You need the good stimulating and lasting tonic effect of Cadomene Tablets (3 grain) to restore your nerve and muscle strength and give to the body the spring, force and elasticity of youth. Every man owes it to himself and society to be well, strong and enjoy a full proportion of human happiness. Cadomene Tablets afford perfect relief from nervous tendencies and assure proper functioning of the human anatomy. —ADVERTISEMENT.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Catherine Scott, who passed away one year ago, Feb. 28. Requiem mass for the repose of her soul, Feb. 28, at 6:30 at St. Mark's Church.

Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear daughter, mother, wife and sister, Mrs. Ida Steber Rapp, who departed this life eight years ago, Feb. 29, 1908.

Sadly missed by her mother,
MRS. S. M. EDDLEMAN.

In Memoriam.

In sad, loving remembrance of our dearly beloved parents, John G. and Anna M. Stumpf. Twelve years ago, Jan. 28, our dear father was taken away, and two years ago, Feb. 24, our dear mother was taken, too. Oh, how lonesome are the years without both of you.

Sadly missed by Sons and only Daughter, MRS. W. HILDEBRAND.

In Memoriam.

In most loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. L. Zoellner.

February again is here,
To us to be the saddest of the year.
One year ago today
Our dear mother passed away.

Sadly missed by her
CHILDREN. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dearest mother, Amalia Althoff, who passed away one year ago, March 1, 1915.

Just one year ago you left us;
How we miss you, mother dear.
You are gone, but not forgotten
By the ones who loved you so dear.

Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear son and brother, Victor Dreyer, who died Feb. 27, 1915.

Just one year ago you left us;
How we miss you, Victor, dear,
You are gone, but not forgotten
By the ones who love you dear.

Father, Sisters, Brothers and Brother-in-law. H. BARTELS.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear little mother, Mrs. Jennie Wilkinson, who passed away two years ago, March 1, 1914. Missed by her lonesome daughter, MYRTLE.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of William Haltinner Jr., who passed away one year ago, Feb. 28.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTER, BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear sister, Josephine Puese, who passed away one year ago, Feb. 25, 1915.

Weep not for her who dieth,
For she sleeps and is at rest.
And the couch whereon she lieth,
Is the green earth's quiet breast.

Sadly missed by her loving Sister, Minnie Puese; Aunt, Mrs. A. Gieselmann; Cousins, Mrs. A. Bullerdick, Mr. and Mrs. H. Westphalen.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear brother, William L. Gander, who departed Feb. 27, 1913.

When musing of our brother, Will, gone,
We doubly feel ourselves alone.
The burden of his days was hard to bear,
But God knows best—
For He took him home.
Thy sorrow of his sacred dust
For eternal rest—sweet rest.

Sad and lonely. Missed by Sisters, Brothers, Sister-in-law, Brother-in-law and Uncle.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dearly beloved mother, Mrs. Lena Richter, who passed away Feb. 28, 1908.

Just eight years ago tomorrow
Since our mother passed away.
A loving mother, true and kind,
No friend on earth like her we'll find;
God called her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For us she did her very best,
May God give her eternal rest.

Sadly missed by her CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our only daughter and sister, Amanda Heigel, who departed this life March 1, 1908.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

We miss your pleasant greetings;
We miss your smiling face.
Our home is sad without you,
When we see your vacant place.

You are gone, but not forgotten,
Your memory shall never fade.
Our lonely hearts shall always linger
Where our dear loved one is laid.

Sadly missed by PARENTS, BROTHERS AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my beloved husband and our dear father, William L. Gander, who departed this life three years ago today, Feb. 27, 1913.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather round our lonely door;
Silently they bring before us
That dear face we see no more.

Three long years have passed,
Still we are grieving for you;
Happy without you we cannot be,
So we often go to your grave,
Lingering there and trying to be brave;
But oh, 'tis hard to bear,
To go away and leave you there.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In affectionate memory of my dear beloved wife, Emily Lindner (nee Roeder), who died Feb. 24, 1915.

God called her home, it was his will;
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best;
May God grant her eternal rest.

In the graveyard, softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,
In her lonely, silent grave.

Peaceful be your sleep, dear wife;
'Tis sweet to breathe your name.
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.

Time rolls on, it will not stay;
How we felt since that sad day,
With one so loving, kind and true;
How hard it was to part with you.

All the world is gray with shadows,
Clouds have dimmed the sunset's glow.
Just one year, dear, since you left us,
Yet it seems so long ago.

We often sit and think of you
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only thing
Grief can call its own.

Sadly missed by Husband, Relatives and Friends.

EVERY HOUSEHOLD ON FARM IN SMALL TOWN OR SUBURBS

Where oil lamps are used needs and will buy the wonderful Aladdin mantle lamp; burns common coal oil (kerosene); gives a light 5 times as bright as electric. Awarded gold medal at Panama-Pacific Exposition. One farmer cleared over $500 in 6 weeks; hundreds with rigs making from $100 to $300 monthly, acting as our agents. Business men have given up less profitable lines to take advantage of the money-making possibilities we offer. Farmers, ministers, teachers, professional men, men with trades, laborers with no experience selling goods—all are grateful for the opportunity we give them to make money. Phillips in Ohio has a steady business that nets him over $300 monthly, and every buyer is so pleased they help him to sell to others. One man in a district in Missouri suffering from agricultural and industrial depression sold 145 lamps in 30 days, his profits being $362.50. An ex-railroad conductor sold 16 in 3 days, out of 15 left on trial took back only 1 lamp. Mr. Poling in a small Oklahoma town, landed the church, the bank and every store and office in town.

BACK OF OUR LAMP.

Guarding it from the attacks of unscrupulous competitors and manufacturers of unsatisfactory lighting devices, is our guarantee, which is published broadcast, offering to give a reward of $1000 in gold to the person who can show any other oil-burning lamp equal to our Aladdin mantle lamp in 26 important features, such as strength and quality of light, simplicity of operation and absence of odor, smoke or noise. Details of this reward offer given in circular which will be sent on request. Made entirely of brass; doesn't get out of order; easily cleaned. Many in use after 5 years' constant wear. Made in several styles to suit all purposes. Written indorsements by scores of satisfied agents.

NO CAPITAL REQUIRED.

WE SELL ON TIME.

The selling of the Aladdin mantle lamp has brought financial independence to thousands of our men and women agents. To reliable men (we do not want agents who will misrepresent) we sell on credit, enabling them to do business without investing any money. While selling our lamp they are in reality in business for themselves. A few hours' work will satisfy any man with ordinary common sense that he can make more money selling our lamp than can be made in any other line of work. Anyone who sees our lamp in operation will never be satisfied with old-fashioned oil lamps. "Show and sell" is the slogan of our agents, and any man with a rig who is willing to work can make $25 to $100 weekly. Write quick for wholesale prices, territory and sample lamp for free trial.

Sells to farmers and other citizens who eat, have buildings or own livestock.

Sells because the goods have the quality and the price that we can give by selling in large quantities direct to the consumer.

Our salesmen make $300 to $5000 per year. Their ability and activity govern that. We give them the right goods and at the right price and the fact that all of them don't make the big money only proves that all men are not equal as salesmen.

You or anyone else who answers this ad can get our proposition, but don't answer unless you know that you can't make a dollar without putting in a dollar's worth of work. Address R. S. Hill, President.

HITCHCOCK-HILL CO., Wholesale Grocers.
Chicago, Ill.

THE IDEA

Of paying rent is ridiculous when an opportunity is offered to you like the one we are going to offer you. Read every word, get the kiddies and the wife a home of their own where they can romp and get good fresh air, have a yard to themselves. We are offering you a chance of your lifetime. We have a dozen new, well-built, well-arranged 4-room brick cottages with a fine bathroom, electric wired, gas, hot and cold water, cabinet mantel, granitoid cellar and walks; each house has 30-ft. lot; good sheds on rear of lot; this house would cost with lot if you built it yourself, $2650, but we are building a lot of them and will sell you one at $2300, cash payment $300 and balance just like rent; pay while you live in it and earn the balance. Just think of it, a 4-room brick cottage with complete bathroom, 13-in. walls, for only $2300. Several have been sold while being built. Go out today, pick out your future home. End Cherokee cars, get off at Germania st., one-half block east to houses, then see TOMBRIDGE AGENCY,

Want Money?

Let me tell you how to get it. Idaho land is full of it, and the land isn't very high-priced, either. Climate and living conditions are excellent—electricity used for cooking, lighting and heating on many farms—educational advantages unexcelled.

There are many tracts of land—irrigated and nonirrigated—suitable for all kinds of farming, for sale cheap and on reasonable terms. Seed raising highly profitable. I will give complete information to you free for the asking.

FARMS FOR SALE

MISSOURI

SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1000-ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM
20-ACRE FARMS FOR ONLY
$300
ON TERMS OF $10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY,
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1000-acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 more acres in peaches, 133 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries and 150 in vegetables, grains and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes $300, tomatoes $100 ($10 per ton at the canning factory), etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 100-acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 or 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of the land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded brick-bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death, money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

GET THIS FREE BOOK TODAY.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, productivity, products and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in St. Louis and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

GEO. W. OTTENAD REALTY CO.,
808 Chestnut st.

FARM—For sale, 200 acres, about 160 in cultivation; this farm is located in the beautiful valley of Otter Creek, and is an ideal country home; land is level and soil very deep and has a clay foundation; will produce anything grown in this latitude. The free range land joining this farm makes it an ideal stock and grain proposition, as our feeding season is very short, and climate is not surpassed anywhere. The farm alone is substantially inclosed with heavy wire and good rails. There is one excellent dwelling house of 6 rooms, 2-story high, and from the veranda you can see the entire farm. Water both for domestic and stock use; one good barn and other buildings, which belong to a well improved farm. Located on railroad and near station and postoffice and store; 6 miles to county seat, 5 miles to main line of Iron Mountain R. R., 140 miles south of St. Louis. Price, $6000. Write me for terms on half. M. M. Sheets, Williamsville, Mo.

CHICKEN FARM—For sale; 6 acres, fine land, all in cultivation; two-story seven-room house, good outbuildings, plenty of good water; right in town, near good market, particulars. Call or write 4017A Kennerly av.

DAIRY FARM—For sale, 30 acres, near Kirkwood; 11 cows and farm implements, half cash and balance on terms to suit. Address Kirkwood, Mo., R. R. 13, Box 92.

LAND—For sale, 80 acres unimproved land, 4 miles railroad station; 60 acres can be cleared and tilled; nice, level land. Price $4 per acre. C. M. Stevenson, Ironton, Mo.

BUILDING TO COST $1,000,000 TO BE ERECTED ON OLIVE

One of Best Corners in Downtown District to Be Site — Prominent Trust Company Behind Deal—Location and Details Are to Be Disclosed Later.

CAPITALISTS PLAN TO BUY SKYSCRAPER

Transaction Involves $1,000,000—Plans for $560,000 University Club Home Approved—Lindell Boulevard Property in Demand.

With building operations about to begin extensively in both business and the residential districts, the spring season in the St. Louis realty field promises to open auspiciously.

Negotiations virtually have been concluded for the erection on one of the best corners on Olive street in the central business district of a building to cost $1,000,000 aside from the site. The project has the financial backing of a downtown trust company, which will occupy commodious quarters on the ground floor of the building, which will also include stores for retail purposes.

The owner of the corner admitted yesterday that a deal, involving the erection on the site of a handsome building, had been agreed upon. He stated, however, that his attorney was out of the city and that the transaction would be delayed until his return, when details would be disclosed. This deal has been an open secret in realty and financial circles for a week or two, the realty situation in downtown St. Louis, as a result, having been strengthened wonderfully.

$1,000,000 Skyscraper Deal Pending.

Negotiations now pending for the purchase of large holdings on this thoroughfare indicate that Olive street will soon be the center of large investment operations. Financial details, according to reports, will be perfected this week for the purchase by a group of St. Louis capitalists of one of the most notable skyscrapers in this district. Although it will not include the fee, embracing only the 99-year lease, the transaction will approximate $1,000,000, thus opening the campaign in this section on a large scale.

Plans for buildings for Washington avenue, including the 16-story hotel projected for the northeast corner of Ninth and the 12-story store for the northeast corner of Sixth, are going forward rapidly.

Another noteworthy development was the approval by the University Club of plans for replacing its present home at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Grand avenue with an 11-story building, to cost $560,000. Only the four top floors of the building, however, will be used for club purposes, the remainder being adapted for business purposes, with stores on the ground floor.

Supply of Capital Unprecedented.

The principal factor in the revival of building operations in the business districts is the unlimited supply of capital at rates unprecedented in the history of the city.

With restrictions against business buildings on this thoroughfare expired, the advantages of certain parts of Lindell boulevard for automobile purposes is being recognized.

A feature of the week was the purchase by Charles Bittel, president of the Bittel-Leftwich Tire Co., of the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Sarah street, with a frontage of 258 feet on Lindell boulevard by a depth of 213 feet on Sarah street, as a site for a group of buildings, adapted for the automobile business, to cost $100,000.

It is said offers have been submitted for other sites on this thoroughfare available for buildings of this character. Accordingly, much property on Lindell boulevard, which heretofore has been without a market, will now be in demand at attractive prices.

The Franklin Automobile Co. has signed contracts with the Fredonia Realty Co., of which George T. Burdeau is president, for the erection of a building on a lot 75x120 feet, at 3015 Locust street, to cost $20,000. Construction of the building, plans for which were drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, will be begun as soon as present improvements can be razed.

Home as Wedding Gift.

In celebration of the first anniversary of their marriage, Gustav Thal has presented to his wife, Mrs. Augusta Thal, a handsome home at 31 Kingsbury place. The house, which was formerly occupied by Oliver M. Kupferle, was purchased from the Third Street Investment Co. for $35,000. The house is in Queen Anne style, with baths and reception hall, and occupies a lot 60x190 feet. The sale was effected by Ralph Cole of Cornet & Zeibig and Eugene Altheimer. The Thals now live at the Essex Court apartment, at 5530 Delmar boulevard.

Eugene J. Altheimer also announces the sale of a six and seven room double flat at 4320-22 West Pine boulevard, from the Aliette Realty Co. to the West End Realty Co. for $20,000. The property, located in the Cathedral parish, has a frontage of 50 feet.

The Dyas Realty Co. reported the sale of 4445 Vista avenue, a business building comprising stores and flats and occupying a lot 50x150 feet, for Elizabeth Dinius' estate to A. J. Watts, the purchase being made for revenue purposes.

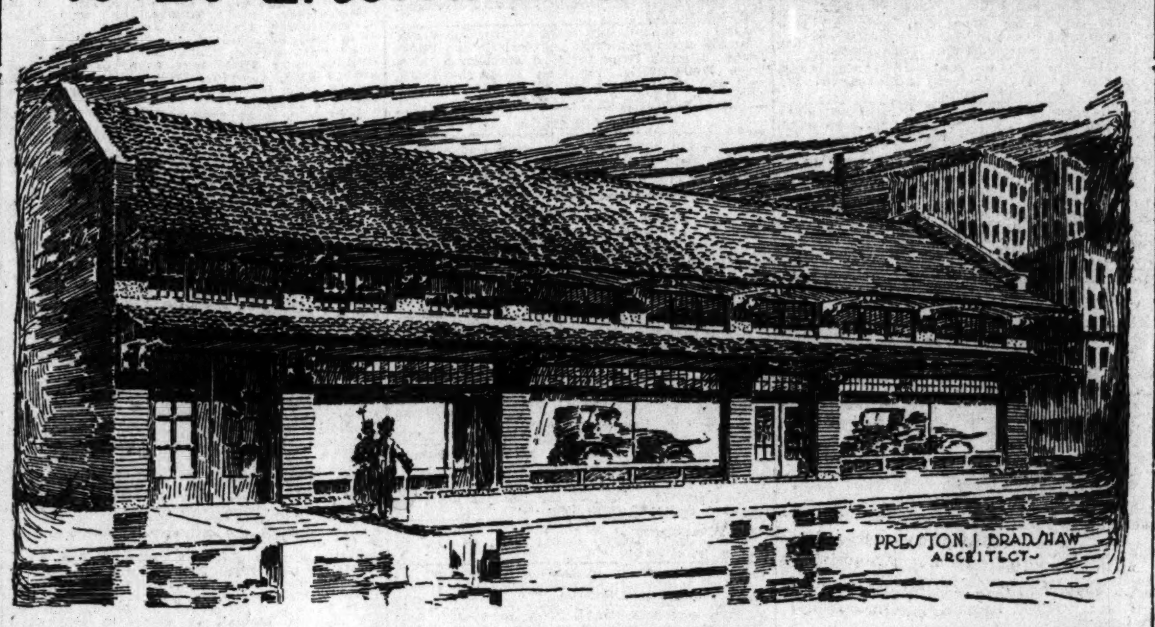
New Automobile Show Room Building to Be Erected at 3015 Locust Street



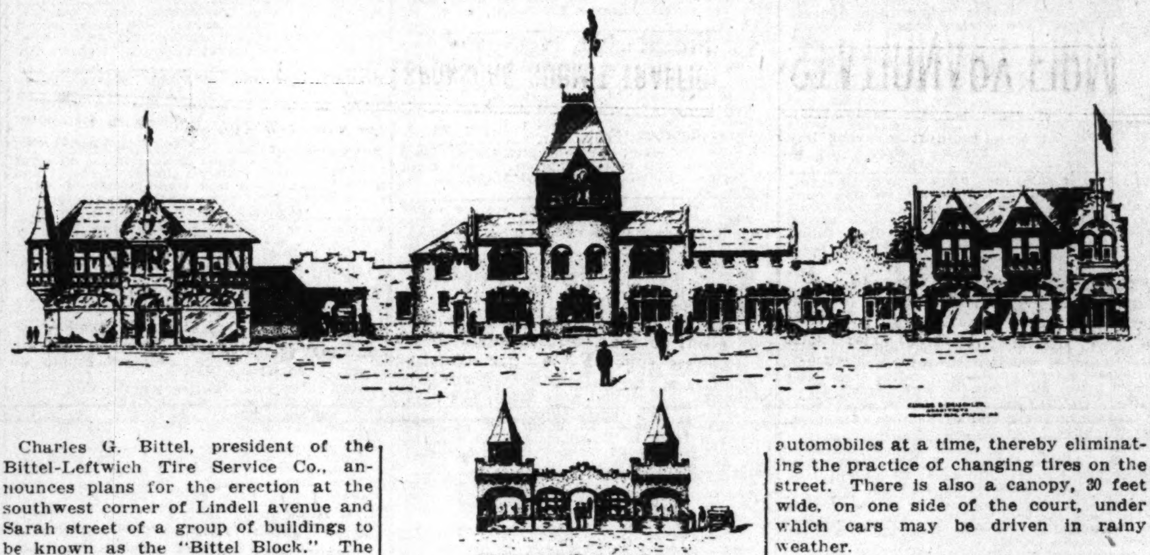
NEGOTIATIONS have been completed with the Fredonia Realty Co., of which George T. Burdeau is president, for the erection at 3015 Locust street of an automobile showroom building for the Franklin Automobile Co.

The building, which will occupy a lot 75x120 feet to an alley, will be of modified English design, which will lend a shop effect to the front. The offices on the first floor will have tile floors and oak finish, while a balcony will make the interior attractive for the display of automobiles.

The lease of the building for the Franklin Automobile Co. was negotiated by Eugene Christy of the Mercantile Trust Co. Plans for the building were drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, under whose supervision it will be erected.

The cost of the building is estimated at $20,000. Work will commence as soon as the present buildings are wrecked. The architect expects to have the building completed by spring.

Architects' Drawing of the Bittel Block to Be Erected at Lindell and Sarah



Charles G. Bittel, president of the Bittel-Leftwich Tire Service Co., announces plans for the erection at the southwest corner of Lindell avenue and Sarah street of a group of buildings to be known as the "Bittel Block." The site has a frontage on Lindell boulevard of 258 feet and on Sarah of 213 feet. The buildings, which will be used exclusively in the sale of tires and automobiles, will be built in a U shape around an immense central court.

The center building, which will be known as the Bittel-Leftwich building, will have a frontage of 158 feet and will provide quarters for all the departments of the home office.

The two side buildings will take the names of the automobile companies which lease them.

These will be 50 feet wide and will have a length of approximately 175 feet. The interior of the two side buildings will be altered to conform with the requirements of the lessees. Over the front ends of the two side buildings, there will be located on each side nine offices, exceptionally large and airy, which will be subletted to reputable firms or physicians will sustain the high character of the neighborhood.

In line with the front of the two side buildings will be a gasoline station located in the central front of the court and built sufficiently low so that it will not interfere with the picture of the whole block. This will give the gasoline company occupying this space decided advantages with the car owners.

The ground-floor plan of the Bittel-Leftwich building, includes many novel ideas and the builder has made it a point to consider users' needs.

The main court will accommodate 50 automobiles at a time, thereby eliminating the practice of changing tires on the street. There is also a canopy, 30 feet wide, on one side of the court, under which cars may be driven in rainy weather.

The drive for the 25 service cars owned by the company will be separated from the public parking space of the court by means of a seven-foot granitoid walk. The buildings will be fireproof, of reinforced concrete and steel construction.

The exterior of the buildings is of "German medieval" design, finished in brick, terra cotta and stucco, with a slate roof. The interior of the sales and show rooms will be finished in quarter-sawed oak, and there will be a central heating plant, as well as a plant for generating electricity.

The cost will be approximately $100,000. Plans and specifications were prepared by and the construction will be under the supervision of Clymer & Drischler, architects.

EASTERN FIRM IS TO OPEN SHOE STORE IN ST. LOUIS

Hanover Shoe Stores Co. Gets 10-Year Lease on Room at 304 North Sixth Street.

A new shoe store is to be opened at 304 North Sixth street by the Hanover Shoe Stores Co., of Hanover, Pa., in a store room leased for a term of 10 years through the Mason-Trepp Real Estate Co., and the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

The Hanover company has 65 retail stores in Eastern cities, but none at present west of Cleveland. The officials of the company stated they would probably open several branch stores here. They have eight stores in New York and seven in Philadelphia. The room the store is to occupy is one of three being reconstructed out of the two stores at the northeast corner of Sixth and Olive streets, facing Olive, recently vacated by the Chicago & Alton Railroad and the Plow's Candy Co.

"WARNING" AD IS OF INTEREST TO BUYERS OF DEEDS OF TRUST

Advises Investors to Make Sure by New Numbers That House Is on Lot as Described.

The "Warning—Before You Buy" advertisement which has been inserted by the J. P. Herrmann Jr. R. E. Co. from time to time is of special interest to anyone who holds a deed of trust or thinks of purchasing deeds of trust. It refers to the new house numbers the city is requesting owners to put up, and the advisability of making sure that the house specified is on the lot described in the deed.

SPONSORS SUBMIT TRAFFIC PLAN FOR FEDERAL BUILDING

Inclined Driveway From Basement to Ninth Street on Locust Contemplated.

Locust street property owners have petitioned Senator Reed and his confreres to have the Government make such changes in the arrangements for handling traffic on the Locust street side of the Federal Building, between Eighth and Ninth streets, as will give it more the appearance of a street and less the appearance of an alley.

They want the vehicles used in the handling of mail and other merchandise to be diverted from the street level to the basement, by means of an inclined driveway. They have had Alfred M. Baker, architect, prepare plans and specifications for suggested alterations of the building which would accomplish this diversion. The plans and specifications, an estimate of the cost, placing it at $63,500, and photographs showing the present use of the sidewalk for vehicles, have been sent with the petition to Senator Reed.

Festus J. Wade, Melville L. Wilkinson and Architect Baker called recently on Secretary McAdoo, Senators Reed and Stone, Representatives Igoe and Dyer, the Government architect and the Efficiency Board of the Postoffice Department, and urged that the suggested changes be made. Secretary McAdoo said that on a recent visit he had noticed the condition of the sidewalk and thought that it should be corrected. The Senators and Representatives expressed a familiarity with the condition and a desire to do all that they could to remedy it.

PRIESTER'S PARK AGAIN TO BE OPERATED AS AMUSEMENT PLACE

Company of South Side Business Men Lease Grounds for Long Term.

Priester's Park at Grand and Meramec street has been leased for a long term to John F. Kurka, who recently organized a company of South Side business men to revive it as an amusement place. The lease was made by Mrs. Mary Blank, the owner, through the Mercantile Trust Co.

Kurka personally will have the management of the park the coming summer.

STATIONARY FIRM LEASES BUILDING ON FOURTH STREET

The Charles Monroe Stationery Co. has leased through William Booth & Co. the four-story building at 406 North Fourth street to which it will remove May 15.

The lease stipulates expensive alterations and improvements to provide for the large and growing business of the stationery company, which is now at 209 North Third street.

The lease is for a term of seven years, with the privilege of 10 years, at a rental that places the property on a substantial income basis.

BORDERS REALTY CO. REMOVES TO THE WAINWRIGHT BUILDING

The Borders Realty Co. has leased suite 512-513 Wainwright building, at Seventh and Chestnut streets, to which it removed yesterday, the company formerly being located in the International Life Building at Eighth and Chestnut streets.

The new offices, which give the company double floor space, have been handsomely furnished throughout and present a most attractive appearance.

This company has made a phenomenal growth in the short length of time in which it has been in business, considering general conditions. It has been most successful in disposing of property in South St. Louis.

It reports that January was the best month for general lines of business, its loans alone aggregating $47,400.

It has made elaborate plans for expanding the various departments of its business. W. E. Borders is president; Harry L. Borders and Ralph C. Becker, managers of sales and exchanges; W. G. Curry, rentals.

It attributes its growth to its aim in getting "results" for clients

WEST END SALES PRESAGE LIVELY REALTY SEASON

North Parkview Undivided Interest Section Promised Many Apartments, Agent Harris Says.

O'REILLY BUYS HOME SITE

Ames Place, Hillcrest and Neighbor Subdivisions Figure Largely in Favor of Home Builders.

Spasmodic purchases in the outlying districts west of Skinker road presage a notable renewal of activity in this section of the St. Louis realty market during the ensuing spring.

North Parkview addition, Hillcrest, Ames Place, West Portland Place, Maryland Terrace, University Heights and Forsythe Place obviously are on the calendar for new high records.

North Parkview addition, according to John S. Harris, who has been appointed to wind up the undivided interest of this subdivision, is engaging the attention of private as well as professional operators.

As the only unrestricted tract west of Skinker road, North Parkview is in demand for apartment building projects. A recent sale of a corner in this addition exemplifies the speculative advantages of operations in that class of property when eligibly located.

Big Profit on One Corner Holding.

The corner in question was purchased three years ago, when the tract was first presented, by three young men who, after paying the taxes and other carrying charges, disposed of it at a profit of more than $2500, the corner being one of the most desirable in the subdivision for an apartment building.

Negotiations are pending with Harris for the purchase of several sites in the tract, which have been selected for large apartments.

Inidentally, Harris disposed of two of a group of houses on the north side of the tract erected by the Delmar Improvement Co., the owner of the land.

North Parkview addition, which lies on the north side of Delmar boulevard, just west of Skinker road and which is fully improved, is being built up with handsome apartment structures.

Sales of lots, as well as houses, were a feature of the week in Hillcrest, all indications pointing to a larger spring and summer in this addition.

This tract lies on the west line of Forest Park and of Skinker road, the improvement of this highway now being under way.

Buys Site for Handsome Home.

Gerald B. O'Reilly, president of the M. B. O'Reilly Real Estate Co., and formerly president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, has purchased a lot on Berlin avenue, in Ames Place, and has plans for the erection of a handsome home. Mr. and Mrs. O'Reilly now live at the Warwick Hotel at Fifteenth and Locust streets. The sale of the Ames Place lot was effected by Elmore Cave & Co.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co., agent for the tract, it is understood, also sold several lots in Ames Place to intending builders.

Sales in West Portland place and in Maryland terrace were also brisk for the season.

Francisous & Kunz have completed a series of high-grade seven-room houses in Forsyth place, at the northwest corner of Forsyth boulevard and Pennsylvania avenue. The buildings are exciting decided interest on the part of homeseekers, the site overlooking Washington University and being otherwise attractive.

All the aforementioned additions except North Parkview are restricted, in the majority of instances, no houses costing less than $5000 being admissible.

NEGRO WAS PAID $1000 PREMIUM TO RECOVER A HOME SOLD HIM

Theodore Hemmelmann Jr., president of the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., has written to the Post-Dispatch, as an argument for segregation, an account of his experiences with four flats he built at 3222-28 California avenue. He had sold two and was negotiating for the sale of a third to a Mr. Enger when, one day, a man and woman looked at the fourth house. The man was of dark complexion, but it was not until after he had bought the house that Hemmelmann discovered he was a negro.

Anxious to get rid of the property, the realty man hastened his trade with Enger and closed it on the afternoon of the day the trade was concluded with the negro. The first night after the negro family moved in they entertained some 15 negro friends at a porch party. The persons who had bought the other three flats were highly indignant and Hemmelmann says his life was threatened. He got the property back by giving the negro a premium of $1000 for it.

Hemmelman gave it is his opinion that negro invasion has caused a loss of $25,000,000 to white property owners in St. Louis.

MAN SAYS HE GAVE $210 TO GET A JOB BUT NEVER GOT PAY

Ado Lang Causes Arrest of George H. Hamilton, Moving Picture Promoter, and Wife.

BOUGHT COAL FOR STUDIO

Production of "The Old Arm Chair," Described as Thriller, Interrupted in East St. Louis.

The thrilling story of "The Old Arm Chair," described as a moving picture of love, adventure and hidden treasure, was interrupted in the making yesterday when its director, George Harry Hamilton, promoter of the Lansdowne Photo Play Co. and of the Ham-Ex Film Co., was arrested in East St. Louis on a charge of working a confidence game. The charge was preferred by the film companies' watchman and superintendent, Ado Lang of 1630 St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, who claimed he had been fraudulently induced to buy $210 worth of stock in the Lansdowne Photo Play Co.

Hamilton's wife, Mrs. Claude Hamilton, 22 years old, also was placed under arrest as having been associated with her husband in the promotion of the film companies. The two, who gave their addresses as 2031 Park avenue, St. Louis, were released on $500 bonds.

After the arrest of the couple the story of their activities in East St. Louis since they came there last November was learned by a Post-Dispatch reporter and their methods of employing actors and selling stock were explained by persons familiar with them.

Picture Only Half Completed.

The picture the Hamiltons were making in their improvised studio in the old dancing pavilion at Lansdowne Park was only a little more than half completed when they were arrested. Forty-two scenes had been photographed and there were 31 yet to make. The work had ben slow because of the difficulty of getting actors and actresses who could comply with the conditions imposed by the Hamiltons. One of the conditions to employment was said to be the purchase of stock.

It was charged by Lang, when he applied for a warrant, that he had had to buy $100 worth of stock to get his two jobs, for which he was promised $50 a month as superintendent and $10 a month as a director. He said he was first asked to buy $300 worth of stock, but that he was told $100 worth would do. Later, he declared, he bought $110 additional stock and then he spent $11.30 of his own money for coal to heat the studio before he learned that none of his salary was forthcoming. He has not received any of it yet, he said, although he was employed several months ago.

Incorporated for $2500.

It was learned that all together about 25 or 30 actors have been employed by the Hamiltons in producing their films, only three of whom were ex¼perienced. The others, it is said, got their jobs only after buying stock. The Lansdowne Photo Play Co. was incorporated under the laws of Illinois for $2500. According to the Secretaryof State of Illinois this stock was held as follows: G. H. Hamilton, $1250; Mrs. Maude Hamilton, $500; Charles Stoos of St. Louis, $200; A. S. Ritchey of Paducah, Ky., $[illegible]; A. P. Smith, $200; L. O. Wakefield of Bloomington, Ill., $100; Douglas Little of St. Louis, $50, and Paul Slezak of East St. Louis, $100.

The Ham-Ex Film Co. was incorporated under the laws of Delaware for $100,000. None of this stock was required to be paid up.

After establishing offices in East St. Louis, Hamilton advertised in the newspapers for moving picture actors and actresses.

Some of those who got jobs were Leland Kirkpatrick of Collinsville road and Fortieth street, East St. Louis, who bought three shares at $10 each; Grover J. Altrogge of 412 Illinois avenue, East St. Louis, who bought one share; Miss Edith Pogesland of Marion, Ind., who answered an advertisement, and Miss Elinor Larkin, 20 years old, of [illegible] Aubert avenue, St. Louis.

BRITISH SUBMARINE'S DARING FEAT

THIS photograph, showing an undersea boat plowing through the ice floating upon the Baltic Sea, was taken from the deck house. Later, as shown in the smaller picture, the submarine was caught fast. The trip was undertaken by Capt. Horton to test the feasibility of using submarines in winter to tighten the blockade against Germany in the Baltic. Capt. Horton brought his vessel back to England in safety, despite the ever present danger of cracking the submarine's thin shell when forcing its way through the ice.

THE most brilliant frolic of the season for New York's exclusive society folk was a "Ball of the Gods," in which the guests appeared garbed as persons of ancient myth and legend. Greek, Roman, Egyptian and Scandinavian gods and goddesses romped with fauns, satyrs, nymphs, spirits, elves, demons and the heroes and heroines of the epic poems. Small fortunes were lavished on some of the costumes. A few of the striking ones are shown on this page.

The ball was arranged by the Society of Beaux Arts Architects and was at the Hotel Astor. It was a saturnalia of fun and bewildering mixups in which Pallas forsook her traditional dignity and flirted outrageously with a stalwart Apollo, while Juno forgot to be jealous when Zeus strolled along with Isis hanging on his arm, with a Mesopotamian dancing girl tickling his august chin with a lotus blossom.

Antwerp, Where Emigrants Meet

No. 7 of "Off for America" Series, the Story of a Yiddish Family Exodus

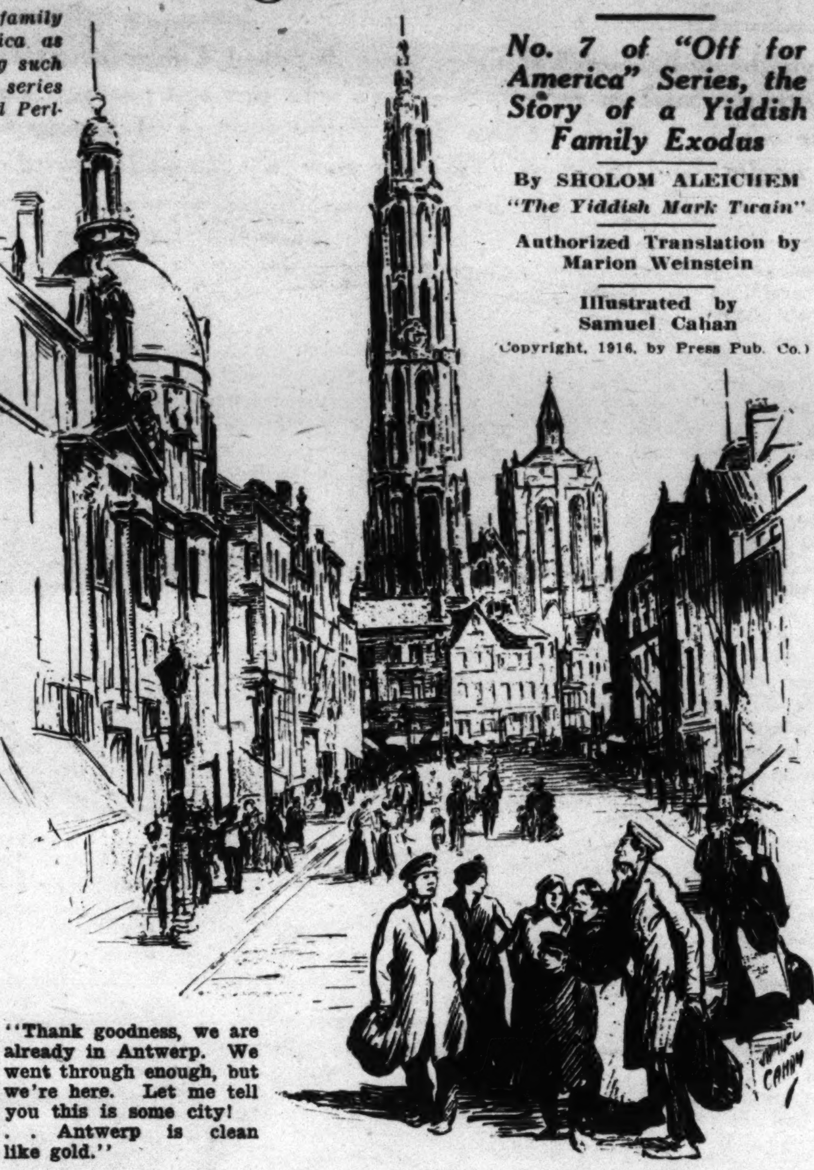
ODDLY mingled humor and pathos mark the adventures of this family of Russian Jews on their seemingly never-ending way to America as chronicled by the clever little lad, Muttel. It is only by reading such intensely human stories as these of the Post-Dispatch Magazine series that an appreciative comprehension of the real prototypes of Potash and Perlmutter can be reached.



"Thank goodness, we are already in Antwerp. We went through enough, but we're here. Let me tell you this is some city! . . Antwerp is clean like gold."

DID you ever hear of a city called Antwerp? There is such a city in the world, and that's where we are going. How do we come to Antwerp? Why, my brother Elihu's father-in-law, Jonah the baker, is going to America, by way of Antwerp. When my sister-in-law Brocha heard that her father is in Antwerp she began to break her neck to get us to go by way of Antwerp, too. Before, she didn't even want to hear of the city. The name did not suit her! But now she has fallen in love with Antwerp! Our chum Pini says he will have to part with us. He prefers to go from Vienna direct to London. Something is pulling him, he says, to London. London, he says, smacks already of America: Englishmen * * * yellow hair * * * checked trousers * * * It's an altogether different world!

"Just go, in good health, to your Englishmen with their checked hair and yellow trousers, and we will go to America by way of Antwerp."

So my sister-in-law Brocha says, and Pini's wife Taibel swells up like a turkey. I have told you, I think, that she has such a habit. At the least little thing she swells up and stops talking. Pini asks her: "What makes you so mad?" So she answers she hates Englishmen. Says Pini to her: "Then you know them? Where have you seen an Englishman?" Says she: "Well, where have you seen an Englishman?"

To make a long story short we are all going to America by way of Antwerp. I don't care as long as we go to America. Our chum Pini and I—both of us—are thirsting for America, more than all the others. We feel that in America the world will be ours.

Pini complains to my brother Elihu. He says: "We travel and travel and are still in the same place." So Elihu says to him: "Well, who is holding you? Go! run! fly!" Says Pini: "How can I fly when your mother wants to get acquainted with all the committees in the whole world?" * * * My mamma hears this and says to Pini: "If you are really such a smart Aleck then you advise me: How can we get to America without bedding?" * * * This holds Pini for a while and they soon make up.

OUR chum Pini can't part with us. The women, too, could never live without each other. It's true they quarrel quite often; they speak daggers to each other. Sometimes they almost come to blows. But they soon make up. If it were not for my mamma the friendship between my sister-in-law Brocha and Pini's wife Taibel would not last long. There would be hair-pulling every day. Especially my sister-in-law. She says herself that she is a "match." She flares up right away. When her bad hour comes over her she will make mud out of you. A second later she grows so soft you could use her for salve. She has picked on me from the very first minute after her wedding. She knows that I don't love her. She gets wild because I laugh at her. She thinks I am always laughing at her. If I look at her she calls that laughing.

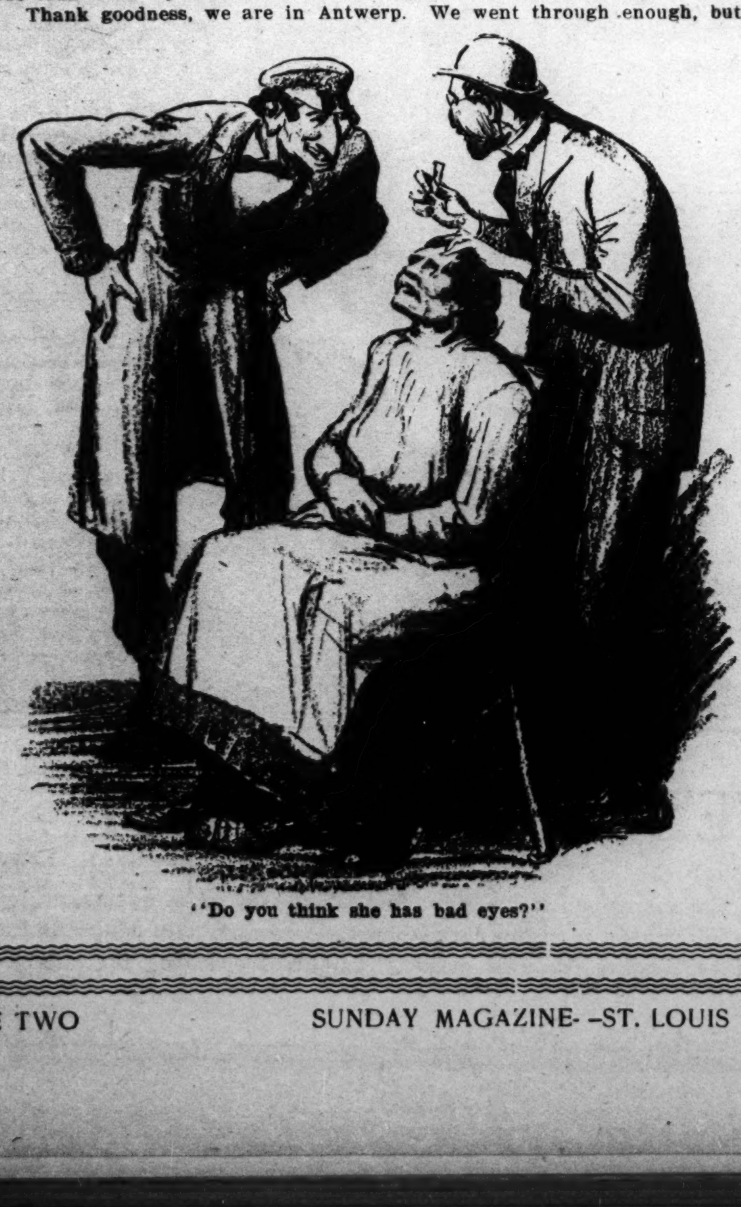
I have already told you that I like to draw and that my brother Elihu hits me for it. Well, once I made a picture of a foot. A terribly big foot. I drew it with chalk on the ground. So you should have seen what a fuss they made! She, that is Brocha, took it into her head that it was her foot I had drawn. She wears No. 13 rubbers. Some rubbers! * * * She fixed me with my brother Elihu. So my brother Elihu began to holler at me as he always does:

"Menschelech? (manikins). So, you are up to your old tricks again, drawing Menschelech?"

I must confess that my fever for drawing Menschelech grows stronger and stronger every day. I got hold of a colored pencil. An emigrant, a little boy, made me a present of it. His name is Muttel, too. We call him "Big Muttel" and me they call "Little Muttel." We have become chums all over again. Because he gave me the colored pencil I drew his picture on paper, while we were riding in the train—his whole figure and his swollen cheeks. I made him swear that he would not show it to a soul because, if my brother Elihu laid his eyes on it, I would see my finish. What do you think he did? Of course, he carried the picture right off to my brother Elihu and stuck it under his very nose.

"That must be Muttel's work! Where in blazes is he, that Mulgetsh with his Menschelech?" So my brother Elihu says. He looks around for me, but he can't find me. I am sitting behind my mamma's shoulders and am choking with laughter. There is no better place in the world to hide than with my mamma!

Thank goodness, we are in Antwerp. We went through enough, but we're here! Let me tell you this is some city! Of course, it can't come up to Vienna. I should say there is a difference! Vienna is much larger and perhaps prettier, too. And has more people. But Antwerp is clean, like gold. What is the wonder, when they wash the streets, scour the sidewalks and shampoo the houses? With my own eyes I saw the houses soaped and shampooed. Of course, not everywhere. For example, in the inns where we are staying with all the other emigrants it is as it should be, muddy and smoky and wet and slippery and close and a racket, an uproar, a hullabaloo. Lively! perfect! just the way I love it.



"Do you think she has bad eyes?"

My brother Elihu's father-in-law, Jonah the baker, has not come yet. Nor our neighbor Pesi with her crowd. They are still on the way. Wearing themselves out somewhere in Germany. "Germany is Sodom!" So the emigrants say, and they tell the most terrible stories! Our misfortune with the bedding that was swiped from us at the border is a dog compared to the misfortunes of the other emigrants.

WE got acquainted here at the station with a woman from Mezshbizsh not, as it happens, a widow. She has, as it happens, a husband, and he is already, as it happens, in America. She is on her way to her husband. It is almost a year since she is dragging herself there with two children. She has been wherever the world has a corner. There is not one city she has missed. She has it out with all the committees. Finally she has managed to drag herself here. Antwerp, after all her troubles, and wants to go on board the ship. But they won't let her. Do you think she has bad eyes? God forbid! She is hale and hearty. Only she is a little off her mind. That is, when you talk to her, she speaks like a person. But once in a while she lets fall a word * * * you can split your sides laughing.

She has taken into her head that she won't eat! She tells us not to eat either. She warns us we should not touch any milchigs (milk) because milchigs is fleischig (meat) here. So my mamma asks her:

"Well, and how about fleisch (meat)?"

"The fleisch is not fleischig here, nor milchig, but parve" (neither one nor the other).

So we burst out laughing, all of us, except my mamma. She says:

"Woe to the laughter!"—and she begins to weep.

"Again? You haven't cried already for a long time? Do you want them to send us all back home from Antwerp on account of your eyes?" * * *

So my brother Elihu says to my mamma—and her eyes get dry in a minute. More than the woman herself my mamma pities her two children, poor things. I don't know why my mamma cries over the children so. The children seem to be quite happy! Whenever their mamma begins to talk foolish they burst out laughing. I soon got acquainted with them. They told me they are to be sent back home, but their mother doesn't want to go. She wants to go to America to their father, who is a "Kaiser" there (he-he-he!) so the people fool her and tell her they are sending her by train to America (he-he-he!) They have talked it into her that a train goes straight from here to America (he-he-he!).

THE wonders that fill your eyes in Antwerp—I can't begin to describe them. Every day a new crowd comes. Mostly poor people, and mostly cripples, and mostly with bad eyes. "Trachomas" they call that. America lets no trachomas in. You may have a thousand ills, you may be lame and dumb and whatever you wish, as long as you have no trachomas on your eyes. Where do you get the trachomas? Wherever you catch it. Sometimes it happens that you don't know yourself where you got it. So I have heard right here in Antwerp. From a girl I heard it. Goldele is her name. She is my age, perhaps a year older than I. It's a pretty story about this Goldele.

I met her in the "Ezra." But you don't know what Ezra is. The Ezra in Antwerp is just like the Alliance in Vienna. Made just for our sakes, for us emigrants. The only difference is that the Alliance is a male and the Ezra is a female.

Well, as soon as we reached Antwerp we went at once to the Ezra. The Ezra does not chase you out; you can come to her whenever you wish and can pour out your heart to her as much as you like. Everything that you say is entered in a book. A girl sits there (they call her Miss Zeitshik) and writes. Really a fine girl. She asked me my name and gave me a candy. But about Miss Zeitshik I shall tell you some other time.

The Teeth of the Tiger

And that is why I am entitled to say that I did not know of Hippolyte Fauville's murder."

"Still, you knew M. Fauville."

"I used to know him, but we quarreled."

"For what reason?"

"Family affairs."

"Family affairs! Were you related, then?"

"Yes. Hippolyte was my cousin."

"Your cousin! M. Fauville was your cousin! But * * * but then * * * Come, let us have the rights of the matter. M. Fauville and his wife were the children of two sisters, Elizabeth and Armande Roussel. Those two sisters had been brought up with a first cousin called Victor."

"Yes, Victor Sauverand, whose grandfather was a Roussel. Victor Sauverand married abroad and had two sons. One of them died 15 years ago; the other is myself."

M. Desmalions gave a start. His excitement was manifest. If that man was telling the truth, if he was really the son of that Victor whose record the police had not yet been able to trace, then, owing to this very fact, since M. Fauville and his son were dead and Mme. Fauville, so to speak, convicted of murder and forfeiting her rights, they had arrested the final heir to Cosmo Mornington. But why, in a moment of madnes, had he voluntarily brought this crushing indictment against himself?

He continued:

"My statements seem to surprise you, Monsieur le Prefet. Perhaps they throw a light on the mistake of which I am a victim?"

He expressed himself calmly, with great politeness and in a remarkably well-bred voice; and he did not for a moment seem to suspect that his revelations, on the contrary, were justifying the measures taken against him.

Without replying to the question, the Prefect of Police asked him:

"So your real name is"——

"Gaston Sauverand."

"Why do you call yourself Hubert Lautier?'

The man had a second of indecision which did not escape so clear-sighted an observer as M. Desmalions. He swayed from side to side, his eyes flickered and he said:

"That does not concern the police; it concerns no one but myself."

M. Desmalions smiled:

"That is a poor argument. Will you use the same when I ask you why you live in hiding, why you left the Avenue du Roule, where you used to live, without leaving an address behind you, and why you receive your letters at the postoffice under initials?"

"Yes, Monsieur le Prefet, those are matters of a private character, which affect only my conscience. You have no right to question me about them."

"That is the exact reply which we are constantly receiving at every moment from your accomplice."

"My accomplice?"

"Yes, Mme. Fauville!"

"Mme Fauville!"

Gaston Sauverand had uttered the same cry as when he heard of the death of the engineer; and his stupefaction seemed even greater, combined as it was with an anguish that distorted his features beyond recognition.

"What? * * * What? * * * What do you say? Marie! * * * No, you don't mean it! It's not true!"

M. Desmalions considered it useless to reply, so absurd and childish was this affectation of knowing nothing about the tragedy on the Boulevard Suchet.

Gaston Sauverand, beside himself, with his eyes starting from his head, muttered:

"Is it true? Is Marie the victim of the same mistake as myself? Perhaps they have arrested her? She, she in prison!"

He raised his clenched fists in a threatening manner against all the unknown enemies by whom he was surrounded, against those who were persecuting him, those who had murdered Hippolyte Fauville and delivered Marie Fauville to the police.

Mazeroux and Chief Inspector Ancenis took hold of him roughly. He made a movement of resistance, as though he intended to thrust back his aggressors. But it was only momentary; and he sank into a chair and covered his face with his hands.

"What a mystery!" he stammered. "I don't understand! I don't understand"——

Weber, who had gone out a few minutes before, returned. M. Desmalions asked:

"Is everything ready?"

"Yes, Monsieur le Prefet."

"Have you searched the house?"

"Yes. It's almost empty, however. There's nothing but the indispensable articles of furniture and some bundles of paper in the bedroom."

"Very well. Take him away and keep a sharp lookout."

Gaston Sauverand walked off quietly between the deputy chief and Mazeroux. He turned round in the doorway.

"Monsieur le Prefet, as you are making a search, I entreat you to take care of the papers on the table in my bedroom. They are notes that have cost me a great deal of labor in the small hours of the night. Also"——

He hesitated, obviously embarrassed.

"Well?"

"Monsieur le Prefet, there is in this house—somewhere—a packet of letters which I value more than my life. It is possible that those letters, if misinterpreted, will furnish a weapon against me; but no matter. The great thing is that they should be safe. You will see. They include documents of extreme importance. I intrust them to your keeping—to yours alone, Monsieur le Prefet."

"Where are they?"

"The hiding place is easily found. All you have to do is to go to the garret above my bedroom and press on a nail to the right of the window. It is an apparently useless nail, but it controls a hiding place outside, under the slates of the roof, along the gutter."

He moved away between the two men. The Prefect called them back.

"One second. Mazeroux, go up to the garret and bring me the letters."

Mazeroux went out and returned in a few minutes He had been unable to work the spring.

The Prefect ordered Chief Inspector Ancenis to go up with Mazeroux and to take the prisoner, who would show them how to open the hiding place. He himself remained in the room with Weber and began to read the titles of the volumes piled upon the table.

They were scientific books, among which he noticed works on chemistry: "Organic Chemistry" and "Chemistry Considered in Its Relations With Electricity." They were all covered with notes in the margins. He was turning over the pages of one of them, when he seemed to hear shouts.

The Prefect rushed to the door, but had not crossed the threshold when a pistol shot echoed down the stairway and there was a yell of pain.

Immediately after came two more shots, accompanied by cries, the sound of a struggle, and yet another shot.

Tearing upstairs, four steps at a time, with an agility not to be expected from a man of his build, the Prefect of Police, followed by the deputy chief, covered the second flight and came to a third, which was narrower and steeper. When he reached the bend, a man's body, staggering above him, fell into his arms: it was Mazeroux, wounded.

On the stairs lay another body, lifeless, that of Chief Inspector Ancenis.

Above them, in the frame of a small doorway, stood Gaston Sauverand, with a savage look on his face and his arm oustretched. He fired a fifth shot at random. Then, seeing the Prefect of Police, he took deliberate aim.

The Prefect stared at that terrifying barrel leveled at his face and gave himself up for lost. But, at that exact second, a shot was discharged from behind him, Sauverand's weapon fell from his hand before he was able to fire, and the Prefect saw, as in a dream, a man, the man who had saved his life, striding across the chief inspector's body, propping Mazeroux against the wall, and darting ahead, followed by the detectives. He recognized the man. It was Don Luis Perenna.

Don Luis stepped briskly into the garret where Sauverand had retreated, but had time only to catch sight of him standing on the window ledge and leaping into space from the third floor.

"Has he jumped from there?" cried the Prefect, hastening up. "We shall never capture him alive!"

"Neither alive nor dead, Monsieur le Prefet. See, he's picking himself up. There's a providence which looks after that sort. He's making for the gate. He's hardly limping."

"But where are my men?"

"Why, they're all on the staircase, in the house, brought there by the shots, seeing to the wounded"——

"Oh, the demon!" muttered the Prefect. "He's played a masterly game!"

Gaston Sauverand, in fact, was escaping unmolested.

"Stop him! Stop him!" roared M. Desmalions.

There were two motors standing beside the pavement which is very wide at this spot: the Prefect's own car and the cab which the deputy chief had provided for the prisoner. The two chauffeurs, sitting on their seats had noticed nothing of the fight. But they saw Gaston Sauverand's leap into space; and the Prefect's chauffeur, on whose seat a certain number of incriminating articles had been placed, taking out of the heap the first weapon that offered, the ebony walking stick, bravely rushed at the fugitive.

The encounter took place at the exit from the courtyard. It did not last long. Sauverand flung himself upon his assailant, snatched the stick from him, and broke it across his face. Then, without dropping the handle, he ran away, pursued by the other chauffeur and by three detectives, who at last appeared from the house. He had 30 yards' start of the detectives, one of whom fired several shots at him without effect.

Sergt. Mazeroux, whose wound was only slight, said, while it was being dressed, that Sauverand had taken the chief inspector and himself up to the garret, and that, outside the door, he had dipped his hand quickly into an old satchel hanging on the wall among some servants' wornout aprons and jackets. He drew out a revolver and fired point-blank at the chief inspector, who dropped like a log. When seized by Mazeroux, the murderer released himself and fired three bullets, the third of which hit the sergeant in the shoulder.

M. Desmalions was white with anger and despair. He exclaimed:

"He's tricked us! His letters, his hiding place, the movable nail, were all shams. Oh, the scoundrel!"

He went down to the ground floor and into the courtyard. On the boulevard he met one of the detectives who had given chase to the murderer and who was returning quite out of breath.

"Well?" he asked anxiously.

"Monsieur le Prefet, he turned down the first street, where there was a motor waiting for him. The engine must have been working, for our man outdistanced us at once."

After questioning Mazeroux upon Sauverand's attitude and the other incidents of the arrest, Don Luis went back to the Place du Palais-Bourbon.

to dance. He manage other people to dance. Now I do not eat moch, but I do not dance at all.

"And now you, you poor leetle keed, now your time comes. If you dawn't stop now, today, and never begeen again, you become fat like me, old Bruni. You will not be happy. You will not be pretty. You will be fat old lady before you are young woman.

"If you geeve up to eat, you can become great arteeste. At feerst you are not pretty, you have no grace. I am sorry I take you for a Bruni svallow! But you learn, and bineby I say, 'I choose good when I choose dat gerl.' And bineby if you take care of yourself, I make a great dancer of you, you make beeg money—not $12 a week, but $1200 a week.

"To be an arteeste is better as to eat too moch, eh? And to dance is greatest art of all—musica, dramma, scultura, poesia—all in one. If you eat and grown to be fat you shall be also unhappy jost de same. If you are arteeste you shall be unhappy, you shall soffer, but you shall be arteeste. You are not goeen to love your dinner more as your art, huh? No! You are goeen to be brave leetle keed and bineby leetle keed is great arteeste huh?"

She nodded her head so violently that she shook tears from her lashes to the fat hand he laid on her fat cheek. And so he left her, put on his perfidious fur overcoat, twisted his wicked mustaches and went his way.

On her way to the theater she remembered Krug's threat, and it frightened her. Then she felt reassured because she had forestalled him by confessing the truth to her adored Bruni. She felt more comforted when she saw Krug smile as she passed him in the wings.

It was so dark that she saw only the whites of his eyes and his teeth. She did not see the swollen lip nor the four lines across the bridge of his nose. These had taken a deal of explaining to the rest of the crew. They had laughed at his contradicting stories. But they had not seen him as he set a little file to gnawing at the wire that lifted Sliver into the air. Half through he filed it, where it would rub across the pulley. And then he waited his time.

Sliver put on her swallow clothes again with a joy as of coming home. She danced and sang like a forgiven prodigal, and when the cue came to soar aloft she tressed sorrow back beneath her with wings as joyous as a skylark's. Even the other swallows felt the lilt of her ecstasy.

And then, at the height of her climb, she felt a queer little jolt in the wire, a tiny slipping, and then—she was no longer upheld, no longer a bird, just a helpless body, falling, falling——

The audience caught a scream of terror, a vision of tumbling feathers, a thud, a motionless heap, a panic among the swallows still in the air, a panic in the very curtain that ran down its wires with a shriek, a hubbub back of the canvas, a pale man who stepped forward to say, "Is there a doctor in the house?"

Then the piano began to clatter, the curtain went up and a comedian in green whiskers and a comedian who wore his hat down over his ears and said, "Oi, Oi!" dashed out and began a duel of wits.

Bruni dragged Sliver upstage as the drop flapped into place. When the doctor arrived they talked in whispers while the comedians on the other side worked like Trojans to coerce the audience into laughter and forgetfulness.

The doctor hoped that no bones were fractured. "She's pretty well padded," he said. Her flesh was at once the cause of her disaster and its remedy. A closer search showed that one of her arms was snapped and the ambulance was called.

Krug heard the gong of the hospital wagon; he saw the still form carried forth feet first. He felt himself a murderer. When Bruni came back to demand the cause of the accident he could not enact the jaunty scene he had rehearsed for himself. He gulped and choked and mumbled the words:

"I knew it was comin'. I been warnin' her she was eatin' too much. She's way over de limit, and"——

"You knew eet comes," stormed Bruni. "Den w'y you not tell me, huh?"

"How do I know de wire wouldn't hold?"

"De wire would hold two of her unless—give-a me de wire."

Bruni did not wait to have it brought. He sought it himself and examined the broken edges. As he dragged them into the glow of a brilliant box light he glanced up at Krug, and Krug cleared his throat and shifted to the other foot. Bruni studied the wire keenly; the polished bevel the file had made was as distinct in one-half of the wire as the ragged tear in the other.

Bruni thought hard a long moment. Then he called to one of his other assistants:

"Giorgio, run get me a police-aman, queeck!"

Krug beat Giorgio to the door. He never came back.

Bruni thought that this was best. It saved the swallows a scandal and Bruni $18 of unpaid salary.

When Sliver came back from the place where she had gone, she was in a white hotel of many beds in one room—a hotel filled with the guests of pain.

She suffered agonies at the surgeon's hands, but her soul had anguishes all its own. She was afraid to see old Bruni, but when he came he was so overjoyed at his diplomacy, his financial coup and the safety of his new daughter in art, that he had only words of comfort.

She was so weak that her secret feud with Krug escaped her close little heart.

"Krug said he'd get me—and he did. Not the way he wanted me at foist. But he got me good and plenty. It was me own fault, though, for tonin' meself into a machinery buster."

"Dawn't you believe you boosta da machine of Bruni. Krug is de machinery booster. He is a—a traduttore, but he make no more de trooble for you, leetle keed."

Sliver was overjoyed to have this remorse removed. But she had others. "All the same, I busted your show and I busted me arm, and you'll never wanta see me again."

Bruni shook his black curls and smiled. "Carlo Bruni is notta de man for leave a svallow veet a brokena ving. Ve play five svallows till you come back."

Sliver squeezed his fat hand in one of hers and chuckled. "I was in another horspital once. They don't feed you very good in horspitals. When I get outa here I'll be sliver for sure. And I'll keep meself so slim they'll have to use opery glasses to see me. From now on I'm strong for you and me art."

He took her at her word. And when she was well she kept it, with the lofty self-denial of a priertess at an altar.

Myriads of women have wept seas of tears because life is so filled with bitterness. Sliver is weeping a little private lake of her own because it is so full of sweets.

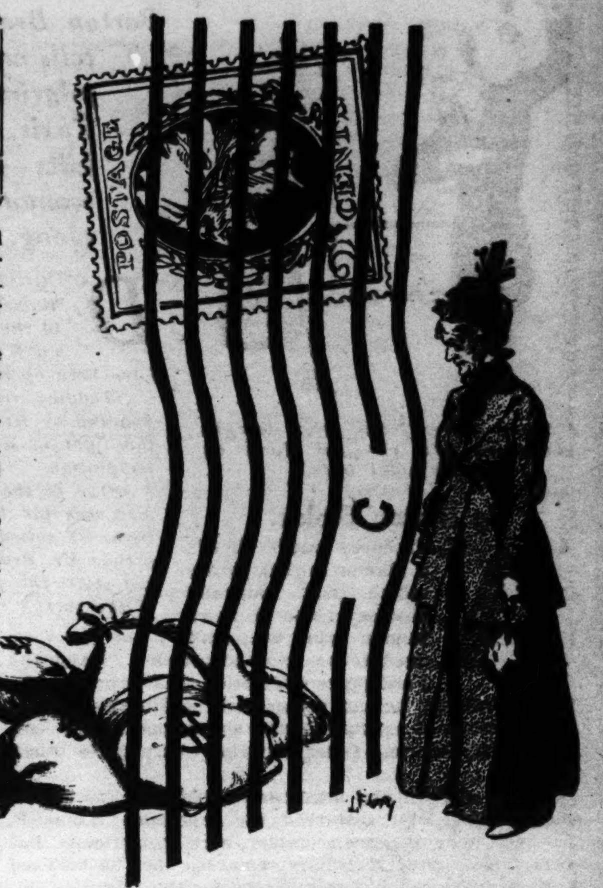
GOVERNMENT'S DEBT TO INVENTOR, WHO SAVED IT MILLIONS, IS UNPAID AFTER 63 YEARS

Although the obligation has never been disputed, Congressmen for six decades have been too busy to recompense man who devised postage stamp canceling machine which is in use to this day—Pathetic story of wrecked life due to official neglect and red tape—Widow, now past 80, still hopeful :: ::



PLEASE take a few letters from your pocket or your desk and examine the envelopes carefully. Any letters will do, any letters which have come through the United States Post Office. Look at the upper right-hand corner. Do you see the heavy black parallel lines—they may be straight or they may be curved—beginning a little to the right of the postmark and mussing up the face of George Washington, or whatever other proud patriot Uncle Sam has honored with a place upon his postage stamps?

Do you know what the mark is? Of course you do. It is the Government's sign that the stamp is cancelled. You don't see anything tragic about it, do you? Well, there is something tragic about it. In one little New York apartment, at least, that sign has a sinister meaning.

It is the home of a little old lady, Mrs. Elmira P. Norton, 522 West 122d street. Those black parallel lines have run across 63 years of Mrs. Norton's tragic life. For her they mean Cancelled Riches, Cancelled Promises, Cancelled Ambition and Life, and Strength. They mean the breaking of a strong man who should have lived to be her protector, the cancelling of almost everything dear in life except the faint flicker of hope that the United States Government will yet arouse itself and do tardy justice. For the use of that stamp Mrs. Norton claims a million dollars.

And this is not a fantastic claim. Her husband, Marcus P. Norton, eventually worn out, heart-broken, done to death in the pursuit of that million, was the inventor of that stamp. His claim to the invention was acknowledged and patented by the United States Government. Its use by the Post Office Department was authorized and, according to the department's own figures, that use has saved the Government twenty millions. The highest courts of the land have recognized the justice of the Norton claim, although the exact amount was never adjudicated, and the Governmevt 40 years ago offered him $100,000 in settlement. But in 1916, 63 years after the Government took over and began to use the invention, not one cent has ever been paid to Mr. Norton or his heirs.

And all this has happened without any real opposition to the Norton claim. The Government has been too busy, that is all. Or there were strenuous calls for economy and retrenchment. Or Congress—only Congress can do anything now—has felt that one more year would not matter in the case of a claim that had waited so long. In the meantime Mrs. Norton, past 80 and going blind, has waited—waited—waited.

MARCUS P. NORTON.

All through the years Mrs. Norton has avoided publicity. She has suffered poverty with aristocratic fortitude and shrank from telling the world. But she could not wait forever, she said, and now tells the simple human story underneath one of the most complicated masses of red tape which has ever gathered together in a single snarl.

Marcus P. Norton, she said, was a young lawyer in Troy, N. Y., when they were married. He was a graduate of Union College, strong, hopeful, optimistic to the core. But he was not a dreamer. He was a practical man who realized the approach of the machinery age. To be an inventor, to save the labor of millions by the careful calculations of a single brain—that was the road to fortune. That is, if the invention could be protected. He became a patent lawyer and specialized in mechanical principles.

He made money rapidly. He was generous with it and did not amass a great fortune, but he was looked upon in Troy as a coming power in the financial and industrial world. It was often the simplest little invention that counted most, he found; so he looked for places where work was being done clumsily and applied himself to simple solutions of the problem at hand.

The postoffice, handling millions of letters, was then cancelling postage with an ordinary cork stamp and affixing postmarks with another. Young Norton reduced the two operations to one by a simple device and had the device patented in 1853. He made several improvements during the next few years, had them likewise protected by patents and submitted the machine for use in various postoffices. The postmasters immediately took over the device and used it. Young Norton felt that he had "landed."

"I used to ask him," said Mrs. Norton, "if it was good business to let them use his patent without paying for it first. But he always answered that it was the Government using it, and if he couldn't trust in the honor of the United States, he couldn't trust in anything."

"The honor of the United States!" The words were familiar, but they were uttered with an indescribably pathetic accent.

Norton had not landed. His invention was used for years, but there was no appropriation to pay for its use. Then he filed claims with the Postoffice Department and ran into unexpected difficulties.

Those difficulties would be unbelievable to one who has had no experience with departmental red tape. Instead of paying Norton for past service, the department decided to investigate the invention and, if satisfactory, take it over for general use. It was held, however, that no postmasters had yet been authorized to use it, and, if they had done so, they were individually responsible for the debt to the inventor. So said the department. But when suits were subsequently brought against the postmasters, not one cent could be collected.

In 1867, however, Norton's difficulties seemed to have vanished. Postmaster-General Alexander W. Randall, then reported to the Congressional Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads: "Norton's stamp is the one desired. It is the best stamp there is. The department has already saved several hundred thousand dollars by its use, and I have no doubt it will continue to save large sums. It is necessary that some settlement be immediately made."

"It's all settled now," Marcus P. Norton told his wife, the woman who is still waiting for that "immediate" settlement in the little walk-up apartment at 522 West 122d street. But he would have to be in Washington to arrange terms. He went to Washington, and back to Troy, and back to Washington again. It took money and time, time urgently needed for his other business. But this was a big thing. The other business would have to wait. And Congress adjourned with no settlement being made.

To trace the ramifications of the Norton claim from that time onward would be impossible. The claim was admitted by the Postoffice Department, which promised that the "Government" would pay. It was upheld by the Court of Claims, which decided, however, that this word "Government" meant Congress and left the court without jurisdiction to adjudicate. Then it was found that the Postoffice Department had not been authorized by Congress to use the device and Congress, in 1870, officially granted such authorization. The Senate then passed a bill authorizing the payment of $100,000 to Mr. Norton.

By this time Mr. Norton's other business had gone to smash. He had been under tremendous expense for legal services and was financially at zero. But he refused to take $100,000. He had a just claim, he maintained, an admittedly just claim for several times that amount, and one that no fighting American need compromise. So Congress adjourned again with nothing done.

Mr. Norton began to borrow money to press his claim. For security he gave interests in the claim itself. The once prosperous lawyer became marked in Troy, as he journeyed to Washington and back, month after month and year after year, pinning all his hopes now upon the eventful just settlement of this all-but-settled claim. But the borrowed money held up the claim still further. There became 17 claimants, and just as it seemed Congress could be prodded into a settlement, the claimants disagreed. Congress therefore delayed action again.

"That claim was our baby food," said Miss Estelle M. Norton, referring to herself and her sister, Miss Ada Norton, who have supported the aged mother since Mr. Norton's death. "When we girls were little children, that claim had become almost a mania with father. Then we had to go without the things we wanted, he would console us by the assurance that we would soon be millionaires. We would live in a palace, have everything we could think of. 'Only wait till the next Congress meets, little ones!' And the next Congress would meet and adjourn and we would hear it all over again."

The Misses Norton are both well known in New York, but few, even of their intimate friends, know of their connection with this strange and tragic claim. Miss Estelle is a teacher of music. Miss Ada is an actress, known to Broadway as Ada Curry.

Mr. Norton died in 1890. "He was murdered," says the aged partner of his life-long hopes, in her sweet, sad voice, "crushed to death by a Government which was too big and clumsy to pay a simple debt. Don't say that I think it was intentional—these big Congressmen simply didn't know. Oh, I believe in the United States Government yet. They WILL pay it some time, won't they?"

Almost every year for 30 years, at the instigation of the Postoffice Department, some bill has been introduced in Congress authorizing settlement of the Norton claim. One of the claimants, George C. Lewis, has become attorney and agent for all, so that there is no further disagreement to block its passage. But the claim seems to be hoodooed and Mr. Lewis is experiencing in a measure something of the perennial torture which Mr. Norton suffered. The bill is usually reported out of committee and dies in the press of business before adjournment.

Senator Townsend has introduced the bill into the present Congress. For reasons unknown to the Nortons, it appropriates only $50,000. "If it passes," said Mrs. Norton, "it means that we will get nothing. The obligations my husband undertook in order to press the claim amount to more than that."

It is hoped by the heirs that the bill will be sent to the House and amended in such a measure that Mrs. Norton will receive a substantial sum in partial atonement for the Cancelled Years.

"It is not merely the money," said Miss Estelle. "It is mother. A million dollars would never pay her for what she has suffered. But if she could receive some reasonable compensation now, she would feel that the United States Government was at last recognizing father."

When Mr. Norton perfected and patented his invention and when it was accepted by the Government back in 1853, the population of the United States was only 25,000,000. In the intervening years it has jumped to 101,000,000. St. Louis then was a comparatively small city of 83,000 inhabitants. There were only 31 states in the Union—Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska and 14 others were territories.

Mr. Norton's invention, with improvements which have been added in recent years, now is in almost universal use in the Postoffice Department. Only in tiny villages and hamlets which barely have risen to the dignity of maintaining a postoffice can the old-style rubber hand stamp and ink pad be found. The machine turns out letters at the rate of hundreds a minute.

When Yankee Whalers Put Out to Sea

who in 1870 attacked and struck a sperm whale. The wounded creature turned on the boat, bit it in two, seized Jenkins in his jaws and dived. The rest of the crew clung to the two pieces of the boat, which still floated, and were waiting for a boat from the ship to come to their rescue when the whale breached from the water close at hand and, to the wonder of the men, threw the mate into the forepart of the broken boat.

"Marvelous as it may seem, Jenkins was still alive and although 'much bruised,' as the log relates, he recovered within a fortnight.

"Almost as remarkable was the case of a whaling captain who was thrown into the water from a boat stove by a right whale. The whale turned on the swimmer, who dived under the creature's body and for three-quarters of an hour the struggle between man and whale continued, the boats being unable to approach close enough to rescue their comrade or to strike the whale.

"Diving, swimming and dodging, the captain strove to evade the huge creature, while the whale struck at him with its flukes, or rearing its stupendous head in the air, brought it crashing down upon the half-drowned man.

"Knowing that the tip of a right whale's nose is extremely sensitive and that the slightest injury to this portion of his head will turn a whale, the captain drew his sheath knife and endeavored to drive it into his assailant's nose. At last he was successful and, the whale retreating, the captain was dragged into the boat more dead than alive, but with comparatively slight injuries.

"Sometimes, however, the whales proved the salvation of the men they attempted to destroy. Such was the case when the boats of Capt. Huntling struck a bull sperm whale off the Rio de la Plata.

"This whale seized the boat in his jaws and chewed it to bits, but another boat rescued the men, while two others went on and planted irons in the whale. Again the creature turned on his enemies, crushed the boats with his jaw, and left 12 men struggling in the sea. Several were scarcely able to swim, and to save themselves two of them actually clambered upon the whale's back and perched astride his hump while a third clung to his side until all were rescued by another boat.

"The whale now had six irons in his body and was fast to three lines of 300 fathoms each, but despite this he was still full of fight and succeeded in smashing another boat. The captain then fired a bomb, loaded with six ounces of powder, into the creature, but instead of killing him it seemed merely to madden him the more and before the boats could escape the whale dashed among them, tossing them to the right and left, and then disappeared, carrying with him 1200 fathoms of line and all the gear and leaving the disappointed whalemen with nothing but four broken boats to show for their long and futile battle."

Even after the whales were killed, the author points out, the whalers' perils were not over, and there are many instances of boats' crews being lost by being towed beyond sight of their ship by a whale and finding it impossible to regain their vessel. An instance of this kind is afforded in the experiences of the men of the bark Janet of Westport, in 1849.

After killing a whale they were towing their prize toward the ship when the boat was capsized and their water barrel, compass and other contents of the craft were lost. For two days they were at the mercy of a heavy sea. In attempting to throw over their boat and empty some of the water one man was lost and two others, who had been up to their arms in water for 48 hours, went mad. They rigged up a sail by dint of the utmost exertion, and as best they could without a compass, steered for Cocos Island, off the coast of Peru, 1000 miles away. For seven days not a crumb of food or a drop of water passed their lips. The heat was scorching. Lots were drawn and one of the men butchered and eaten. On the ninth day a shower fell and a dolphin leaped into the boat. This served to save their lives and for several days thereafter birds approached so closely that the men were able to kill them. Twenty days after being capsized they arrived at Cocos Island.

"No story of whaling would be complete without an account of how two Nantucket captains outwitted a gang of pirates and made their capture easy," the author continues.

"It was in April, 1771, that two Nantucket sloops, under command of Isaiah Chadwick and Obed Barker, were lying quietly at anchor in the harbor of Abaco Island, in the Bahamas, when a ship was seen in the offing flying signals for assistance.

"With the whaleman's readiness to help his fellows, one of the captains lowered a boat and with his men pulled to the strange vessel and went aboard. Hardly had he reached the deck when a pistol was placed at his head and he was ordered to pilot the ship to the inner harbor or have his brains blown out.

"To this he replied that he would gladly take the ship in, but that he was himself a stranger and unfamiliar with the channel, but that one of his men knew the way. The man he designated was then called on board and was threatened like his captain, and as resistance was useless, he piloted the vessel into the harbor, but craftily brought her to anchor where a point of land lay between her and the two whaling vessels.

"The whalemen were then allowed to go to their own vessel and the two Nantucket captains at once held a council as to the best means of capturing the strangers, who they were convinced were pirates, for while on the strange ship the captain and his man had noticed that the crew was heavily armed and that an unarmed man sat alone in a cabin under guard. From this they judged that the ship had been captured by pirates or by mutineers and that the lone captive was the real commander.

"After some consultation an invitation was sent to the captain of the pirates, asking him to dine on the sloop, and this was accepted and the captain with his boatswain came aboard the whaler, bringing the captive commander with them for safety. No sooner were they on board than hidden whalemen sprang forth and seized and bound the visitors, and it was then learned that the vessel hailed from Bristol, Rhode Island.

"The former commander told his rescuers that he had sailed from Bristol for the coast of Africa, had obtained a cargo of slaves, had carried them to the West Indies and had set sail for home when his crew mutinied and seized the ship with the intention of turning pirates. As none of the men could navigate he and the mate had been spared, but had been kept under guard and compelled to obey his former crew.

"After hearing the story the whaling captains told the pirate boatswain that if he would go aboard his ship, release the former mate, who was held a prisoner below decks, and would aid in retaking the ship, they would try to clear him of his part in the mutiny. They then added that they knew a man-o'-war was within two hours' sail and that if the boatswain did not fulfill his promises they would sail to the war vessel, secure an armed force and return and capture all the pirates.

"The boatswain was then sent to his ship, and as the whalemen had foreseen, he made no attempt to carry out their orders and one of the Nantucket vessels then hoisted sail and started as if to pass close to one side of the pirates. Immediately the mutineers shifted all their guns to that side of their vessel, but as soon as the whalers saw this had been done they suddenly veered, jibbed and swept by the ship on the opposite side and out of range before the pirates could shift their cannons.

"The whalers then sailed out of sight, tacked, set a signal as if they had spoken the man-o'-war and steered boldly in towards the pirate ship. Fully believing that the whalers had carried out their threat and had obtained an armed force of bluejackets, the pirates hastily abandoned their vessel and sought refuge on the shore, only to be quickly captured by the inhabitants.

"The whalemen then released the captive mate and put a crew aboard the ship and convoyed her to Nassau, where the leader of the mutineers was hung and the resourceful whalemen were given a reward of $2500 for their part in the capture of the pirates.

"The whalemen at times had mutinies of their own which were far more serious than this, however, and while many were nipped in the bud, or were suppressed before the mutineers were successful, on several occasions the officers were butchered and the ships seized by the crews.

"Among the noteworthy mutinies on whaling ships was that of the Globe of Nantucket, which occurred in 1824, and which scarcely has a parallel for the petty events which caused it.

"The Globe sailed from Nantucket in December, 1822, and no signs of dissatisfaction or trouble with the crew occurred for over a year. While skylarking on deck one day one of the boat-steerers named Comstock, was thrown in a wrestling match with the third mate, Noah Fisher, and, infuriated at the latter's triumph, he became so insolent and aggressive that he was knocked down, and slunk out of sight, muttering threats to kill the officer.

"No attention was given to his threats, however, and nothing more was thought of the matter until on the night of Jan. 25, 1824, the awful tragedy occurred, when Comstock, with four companions, entered the cabin and killed the captain and first mate while they slept.

"Aroused by the noise, the second and third mates, Lambert and Fisher, barricaded themselves in their cabin, but Comstock loaded two muskets and shot through the door, one of the balls striking Fisher in the mouth. The door was then battered in and Comstock struck at Lambert, but missing him, lost his balance and fell into the stateroom, where he was seized by the mate, but after a short struggle escaped.

"Fisher, armed with a bayonet, lunged at Comstock, but the latter promised to spare the men if they would surrender, and Fisher, suffering terribly and badly wounded by the musket ball, threw down his arms, whereupon his brains were promptly blown out, and Lambert's body was run through by a whale-lance. With fiendish ferocity the mutineers then mutilated their victims and tossed them overboard, although Lambert was still alive and screaming for mercy.

"The vessel was now in the mutineers' hands and was headed for the Malgrave Islands, where the mutineers proceeded to strip and loot her. Very soon, however, a drunken quarrel arose over the division of the spoils, and during the fight Comstock, the ringleader, was killed. Taking advantage of the confusion, six of the men who had refused to join the mutineers, cut the ship's cable, worked the vessel out of the bay and headed out to sea.

"After a long and stormy voyage the six men managed to reach Valparaiso, where they turned the ship over to the American Consul and related the circumstances of the mutiny and their escape. The ship was then put in charge of a Captain King and sent home, while a vessel was dispatched to the island to capture the mutineers. Upon arrival there it was found that the murderers had already met with their deserts and that all but two men, William Lay of New London and Cyrus Hussey of New Bedford, had been killed by the natives.

"Another notable mutiny on a whaling ship took place on the ship Junior of New Bedford in 1857.

"The Junior sailed from New Bedford in July, rounded Cape Horn and cruised on the Pacific until December. On Christmas day Capt. Miller served spirits to the men and leaving them apparently happy and enjoying their celebration of the day, he retired to his cabin.

"Early the following morning, Dec. 26, Cyrus Plummer and four men armed with guns entered the cabin, placed the muzzles of their weapons against the bodies of the sleeping officers and fired. The captain was killed instantly and the mates were riddled by bullets, but still lived. The third mate was quickly dispatched by a whale-spade, but the second and first mates managed to escape, and concealed themselves in the hold, although the latter had six bullets in his body.

"The murderers regained the deck, only to be met by the members of the crew who still remained loyal, but after a short parley all gave in to the mutineers. Now that the ship was in their hands the crew devoted themselves to making merry for several days, but soon realized that they were helpless upon the ocean with no one to navigate their vessel.

"Their first fury had now worn off and the two mates were called from the hold, where they had remained for five days suffering excruciating tortures from their uncared-for wounds. As their services were required by the mutineers, their lives were spared and they were ordered to sail the vessel to Australia. When within 20 miles of the coast, the ringleader, Plummer, ordered two boats lowered and after rifling the ship of valuables and provisions, left the vessel and pulled for the land.

"Their freedom was short-lived, however; eight of them were caught and hung, and before their execution made a written confession of the part they had played in the tragedy, exonerating the other members of the ship's company, and by thus turning State's evidence the ringleader, Plummer, managed to escape the gallows.

"But of all perils which beset the whaleman the danger of being crushed in the ice was probably the greatest and more ships were lost by ice than by all other causes combined.

"On two occasions, in 1871 and in 1876, entire fleets were lost in the ice of the Arctic—20 vessels being destroyed in 1876, while the disaster of 1871 was the greatest catastrophe which ever befell the whaling industry, 32 vessels being destroyed, leaving over 1200 persons shipwrecked and causing a monetary loss of over $1,000,000 to New Bedford alone.

"In one respect also it stands forth as the most remarkable of maritime disasters, for despite the number of vessels destroyed, the number of shipwrecked people and the rigors and dangers they faced, not a single life was lost."

The Race for Aeroplane Supremacy

service pilot in a Burgess 140-horsepower pusher, had brought down a Fokker, near Dunkirk, the first part of January.

These recent episodes show that the Fokker is not quite that devilish invention which is depicted so luridly in the imagination of the calamity bawlers of the Northcliffe press. It is formidable, and by the fortune of war it may gain new victims, but the new British fighting machine apparently is a match for it, and there is no cause for panic.

The French also appear equally to have an answer to the Fokker. The Fokker, in the first place, was based on the Morane-Saulnier of Garros, but was given more power and so more speed and climb. The French, therefore, have in hand the basic principles that make the Fokker dangerous. In addition, they have a number of machines that in various ways can measure equal strength against the German flyers.

Among these machines is the little Nieuport, 80 horsepower, which climbs and flies as fast as the Fokker. The Fokker is reputed through German channels to be able to climb 2500 meters in 10 minutes. The Nieuport in turn is reputed through French channels to climb 2000 meters in eight minutes or possibly a little better. It can travel, say, 110 miles an hour. Then comes the Voisin, 140 horsepower, mounting a 37.5 millimeter gun, and while this craft has neither the legs nor the climb of the Fokker, its heavy gun outranges anything that the German machine carries.

The two-motor Caudron, making 100 miles an hour, is the third reply. This is equipped in France with two motors of 80 horsepower each and England uses the same machine with two motors of 100 horsepower each. While this machine also is slower than the German, it can almost be made to equal it in speed and climb by increasing the power of the motors and a plan is on foot to make it carry three men—pilot and two gun firers, one facing front, the other back. This would so increase the zone of fire as to offset the enemy's speed advantages.

According to reports received in Great Britain, the German aviators assigned to duty with the Fokker machines have strict orders to destroy their craft rather than to allow one of them to fall into the hands of the allies. This is due to the fact, it is declared, that one or two features which help to make them effective for air fighting are secrets which the German authorities are striving to keep from the knowledge of the enemy. So far as known, it has not been necessary for any of their pilots to resort to this desperate expedient.

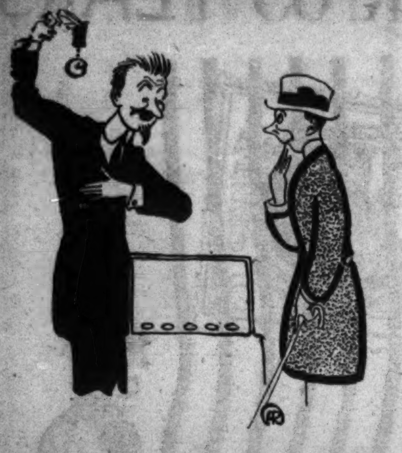
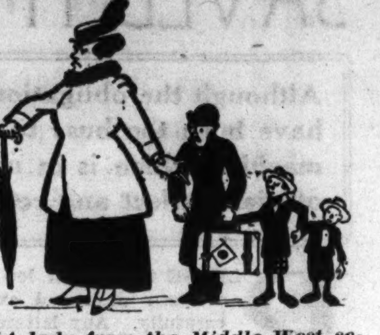
"Charge It to Henry Ford, Please"



"There were folks who bought souvenirs and charged them on their hotel bills."

Berton Braley, humorist, who accompanied Peace Expedition, tells entertainingly of ingenious methods employed by pilgrims to separate Detroit millionaire from his coin—Taxis, ball dresses and opera gowns charged in hotel bills—Some guests went without invitations, and one woman, forbidden to take husband and two children along, sent them on another ship and charged it to Ford



"A lady from the Middle West secured an invitation for herself on divers and sundry grounds, then run in her husband and two children 'as guests of Mr. Ford.'"

DON QUIXOTE of immortal memory was so poor that for a helmet he could equip himself only with a wash basin, but even his lean carcass was picked almost to the bones by human crows. Think of the opportunities, had the Knight of La Mancha been a multimillionaire, for grand and petit larceny which would have been opened to those who preyed upon him!

Judging from the echoes which still come from the ill-fated Peace Expedition financed by Henry Ford, a certain element of the pilgrims regarded him somewhat in the light of a Don Quixote with a bottomless purse—a combination of irresistible temptation.

One of the pilgrims was Berton Braley, the well-known journalist and humorist, who was the bridegroom of the expedition, he having been married just before the Oscar II sailed, and being accompanied on the trip by his bride. In the following article Mr. Braley tells from first-hand personal knowledge, and in his own entertaining style, the methods by which certain of his fellow passengers took full advantage of the party's slogan, which was, "Charge it to Henry."

By Berton Braley.

"ALL expenses paid,"—there's a glamor to that phrase which just naturally dazzles the ordinary human being who isn't used to an expense account. And the Ford peace expedition was largely made up of ordinary human beings, very ordinary—at least in the sense of reputation and social, political or economic importance. Otherwise they were quite otherwise.

In one of the many moments of irritation and excitement which later disturbed the expedition, Louis P. Lochner, general peace secretary, acridly, tactlessly, but nevertheless quite truthfully remarked that he believed a lot of folks had just come along for the ride.

This is in no wise a reflection on the many very able and wholly sincere members of the peace mission, but the fact remains that the gentle grafter and the pleasant parasite, the placid meal ticketer and the smug sustenance seeker were with us in full force.

We were all more or less in that situation, because we couldn't go along in any other way even if we had desired to, which most of us didn't. Several great daily newspapers wished to pay their correspondents' expenses, but were prohibited from doing so by the men in charge.

"Ford, he pays the freight," was the slogan.

He paid it royally—transportation, rooms and meals, laundry and taxicabs, typewriters and tips, paper, pens ink and blotters. Also his efficient aids handled the baggage and nobody had to worry about it. Which was a blessing, for the baggage problem is one of the abominations of European travel.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE people, or thereabouts, were transported, housed, fed and amply provided for in all necessities and many luxuries by a system as smooth running and competent as a dynamo. And that was because the material end of the game was handled by men with brains. If the political and pacifist end had been different—certainly the progress would have been less uneven.

But we were speaking of the gentle grafter and the pleasant parasite.

LET us start with the lady from the Middle West who had a husband and two children. After some angling she secured an invitation for herself on various and divers grounds. An invitation also for her husband and two children had been politely but firmly refused. Which concludes act one of this turn.

Act two finds the lady from the Middle West in New York, where she visited the Ford headquarters and again made a plea for the husband and two children and was again turned down. Scene two of this act discovers the lady in the act of wiring husband and two children to come to New York. Scene three depicts her introducing husband and two children to the Ford authorities again, and suggesting that they were all ready to go. Once again the firm refusal.

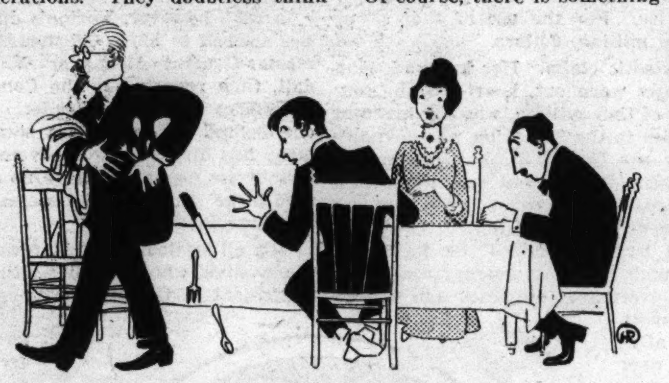
Act three—the Oscar II in midocean. A frantic wireless from another vessel: "Have husband and two children of lady from Middle West aboard. They say charge Henry Ford with passage and bill. What shall we do?"

Conferences and confabulations on the Oscar II. Finally a wireless. "O K. Too late to put them overboard. Charge it to Henry."

Thus husband and two children arrived in Christiania and traveled with the Ford party. They also went as far as Stockholm. It was planned ultimately to ship them back home.

NOBODY yet knows how several members of the party came to be of it, nor why. They had no invitation, they just mingled—and put it over. They cluttered up passageways and took up room in hotels and always filled the first table at breakfast dinner and supper and generally made themselves useless.

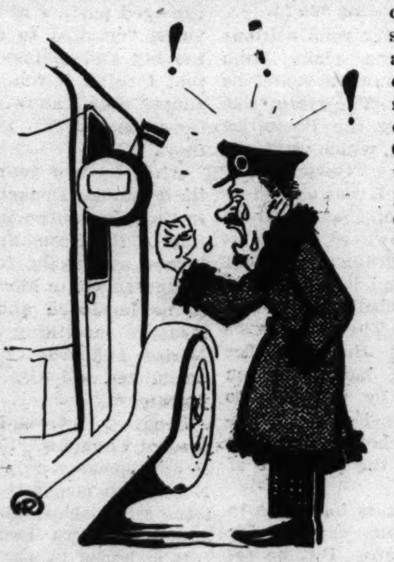
There were folks who went out in Christiania and Stockholm and bought souvenirs and charged them on their hotel bill and tried to get by without paying the items themselves. These were unquestionably the main offenders in ordering wine with their dinner and being peeved when the commissariat wouldn't come across for it. Some of them will have a year's linen supply when they reach the shores of the United States again, and silver service to transmit to future generations. They doubtless think that the hotels lost these supplies, but the fact is that they went on the hotel bill.



"Some of the guests will have a year's supply of linen, and silver service to transmit to future generations."

AT one time it looked very bad for us newspaper folk; we thought our merry jaunt was suddenly to end and began inquiring about steerage rates back to America or canvassing possibilities of a touch when we got our ticket of leave. It happened in this manner:

The inner star chamber which ran things politically for the expedition—Mr. Ford himself being ill—labored much of the time under the impression that one of its chief functions was to hold out or suppress news. Naturally the press gang—notably the members thereof who were sending daily wireless messages—collided constantly with this idea, and so became obnoxious to the knights of the inner temple, who didn't understand either the necessity or the ethics of reporting. So by the time we reached Christiania there was something akin to war aboard the peace ship between the press and the pilgrims, and it was seriously proposed to make the press walk the plank and cease being guests of Mr. Ford.



"Our presence made the taxi chauffeurs weep because their rates were controlled by law."

But when Gaston Plantiff—of whom more anon—heard of this, he emitted a raucous roar and squashed that suicidal policy of hysteria, to the dismay of the inner temple, but the delight of the few sapient souls who had come in quest of peace. So we "journalists" stayed aboard, uncensored and untrammeled—always excepting the kindly trammels of hospitality—as guests of Mr. Ford.

THIS, however, is not the comedy of the experience of being guests of Mr. Ford. It was awful to contemplate the sufferings of some of these guests who came from towns where people bathe on Saturday night in the tubs that come in use again Monday morning. They emitted agonized screams because they had no rooms with bath—in a land where baths are either an annual function—as in Norway—or a social pastime and an athletic sport, as they are in Sweden. For the benefit of the uninitiated let 't be stated that in Sweden a large Swedish lady puts you in a tub of hot water and scrubs you violently with a floor brush and laundry soap—and it doesn't matter whether you are masculine or feminine, either.

Then these delegates went through such bitter pain when they surveyed the food set before them at the hotels. They objected to being served only four courses, when they had been used to seven—one each day in the week. And they took it as a personal insult that only 50 per cent of the natives spoke English. They talked about "foreigners" and wanted to go and see the American Minister about it.

The taxicab business troubled them, too. They didn't see, when taxis cost only 20 cents a mile, why they had to walk clear across the square to breakfast and other meals.

Of course, there is something to be said on their side. They had to be delegates and things, and that meant that they must attend meetings on the boat and meetings in the trains and meetings in the hotels and in halls, corridors and everywhere but in the snow. And they had to listen to speeches, the same old speeches in English from the same old orators who had begun in New York and the only variation was a Norwegian or Swedish speech. Even on Christmas eve the speech habit was so ingrained that a perfectly good evening was spoiled.

Altogether, it is probable that the gentle grafters who got mixed in with the party earned whatever they got, for they had to go to meetings to escape the suspicion of being joy riders; and therefore their graft came high.

IT was a queer aggregation that Henry Ford's advisers and Madame Schwimmer's aids had garnered for the expedition. There was no variety of "ist" and and "ite" unrepresented, from the pacifist to the psycho-analist, and from the cosmopolite to the suburbanite. There were eager and earnest young folk in the student body and keen and cynical people in the press group. There were a dozen or so very able, very competent and unusual men and women aboard the Oscar II and plenty more that were unusual enough, if neither competent nor able.

And when the Frederick VIII brought its Ford addenda, so to speak, we had more of them, from a German-named gentleman—who was jokingly accused of being a German spy and who spent the rest of the journey plaintively explaining that he was not, and who even went to the American Minister about it—to the tall and rangy lady who talked at the Christmas eve banquet for 15 minutes, telling utterly unrelated stories because she was too embarrassed to sit down.

And while Henry Ford furnished the funds, Gaston Plantiff, general sales agent of the Ford company—a "regular guy, believe me"—was the disbursing agent for the trip. Thus it came about that the newspaper gang, characterizing the general joy riders in a song, caroled cheerily to the tune of "Glory, glory, hallelujah:"

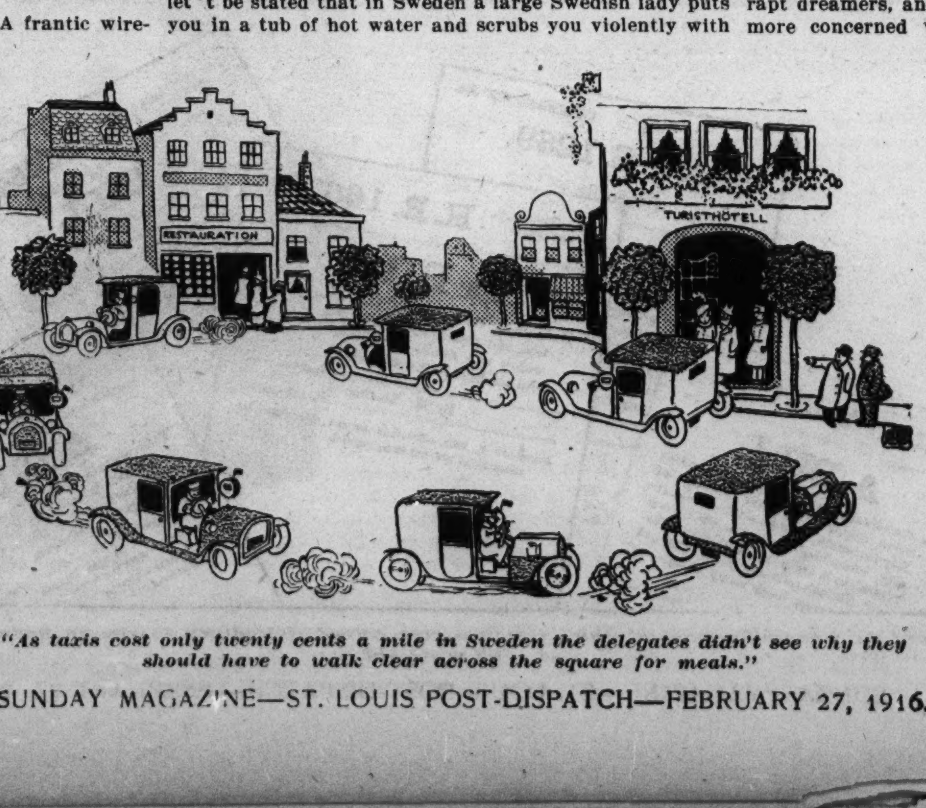
"Send the bill to Gaston Plantiff,
Send the bill to Gaston Plantiff,
Send the bill to Gaston Plantiff,
For he has all the dough."

Students, delegates, grafters and newspaper people, we traveled far and lived high. And if we fought a lot and did a few crazy things, and if about two-thirds of us were nuts and the other third vague theorists and rapt dreamers, and if a few of the guiding spirits were more concerned with their own petty ambitions and meanness than with the success of the mission they prated so nobly about—why, that has nothing much to do with this story, which declares that Henry Ford is all right and we're for him.

What's that? Our bill? Something like twenty or thirty or forty dollars per day per person. We raised the rates of exchange by our presence, and whole cities smiled when we arrived. Also the hotel proprietors and such folk licked fat chops in anticipative glee, and hid the old rate card to print new ones.

Taxi chapffeurs wept because their rates were controlled by law, and the meters were almost unfixable. The honest Norsemen and the honorable Swedes stuck out the receptive mitt and affixed the thirsty leech to the fat purse of the bursar; and the trustworthy Danes did likewise. The motto was: "Here comes the golden shower, get a tub!"

Total? Oh, a half million, three-quarters of a million, perhaps.



"As taxis cost only twenty cents a mile in Sweden the delegates didn't see why they should have to walk clear across the square for meals."

ST. LOUIS GIRL CLUB IDEA IS SPREADING OVER THE COUNTRY

MISS GERTRUDE L. PRACK,

Secretary of the girls' work department of the St. Louis Y. W. C. A. and leader of the first group of Hearth Fire Girls to be organized in the United States.

AMONG the mail received daily by Miss Gertrude L. Prack, secretary of the Girls' Work Department of the St. Louis Young Women's Christian Association are letters which show that an organization of young women which had its inception in St. Louis is rapidly spreading to all parts of the United States. It is known as the Hearth Fire Girls, and was formed by former members of Ernest Thompson Seton's Camp Fire Girls in revolt against the expense, centralized authority and other features of the latter organization.

Although the new body is but four years old, there are, in addition to that in the Y. W. C. A., branches in virtually every Protestant church in St. Louis. Many Y. W. C. A. organizations in the smaller towns of Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas, Texas, Colorado and Nebraska have been modeled after the first St. Louis group and Miss Prack is constantly receiving letters of inquiry from churches, Young Women's Christian Associations, women's clubs and girls' schools all over the country.

When the 45 groups of Camp Fire Girls in St. Louis revolted against the general body, there were approximately 800 members in this city, centering around the group at the Y. W. C. A. Now there are fewer than 250, the others having gone over to the new organization.

Among the causes of dissatisfaction among the Camp Fire Girls was an edict from the equipment office in New York that all local groups must pay annual dues to that office in addition to buying their uniforms and equipment there. It was found that this office planned a national board of directors for the Camp Fire Girls, and did not intend to permit the local groups to have a voice in its government.

The St. Louis girls would not remain Camp Fire Girls, but they liked the organization in itself. They found the work interesting and beneficial and they did not want to give it up altogether. So the 45 guardians got together to consider ways and means of continuing as an organization without remaining a part of the Camp Fire Girls. The curriculum of the Camp Fire Girls, the Girl Scouts and the Ladies of King Arthur's Court were studied, and finally Miss Prack, guardian of the Y. W. C. A. Camp Fire group, evolved a new set of rules and requirements, which was an adaptation of the best elements in the three other organizations, and suggested its adoption by the St. Louis girls under the name of Hearth Fire Girls.

This plan proved satisfactory and accordingly a constitution and bylaws were drawn up and the first group of Hearth Fire Girls in America was formed in February, 1912. This group soon became too large, so it was divided and new groups formed.

When asked how many Hearth Fire groups there now are, Miss Prack said she had not the least idea.

"Whenever I attend a secretaries' meeting at any of the Y. W. C. A. conventions I hear of new groups," she said, "and last summer when I was in New York I found several groups in that city itself and in some of the towns nearby. You see, we have no general officers, and no general headquarters, so it would be impossible for any one guardian to form an estimate of the total membership of the organization in the United States without making a regular canvass of the country."

The foremost appeal of the Hearth Fire organization, Miss Prack believes, is its simplicity.

"The Camp Fire Girls wore an Indian costume with head dress, beads and other ornaments, which called for a considerable expenditure of money. Some of them felt embarrassment when called upon to appear in public in them. In addition, some of the requirements, such as horseback riding, automobile driving and spending so much time in the open every year, called for an additional outlay which we found many of the girls in St. Louis could not afford. There was nothing to do but withdraw or get an endowment.

"In planning the Hearth Fire organization we considered all these points, and have brought the expense question down to virtually nothing. Two cents a week—and that not every week—will cover it all for each girl. For degree symbols we have little stickers which we buy wholesale. The costume is a middy blouse and plain skirt. The requirements are such that any person, no matter how small her means, may comply with them without extra expense, since they are habits rather than diversions.

"In the matter of dues, our constitution permits each group to decide that question for itself.

"Of course, the Hearth Fire Girls was formed primarily to meet the needs of the girls' department of the St. Louis Y. W. C. A., with the object of developing its members socially, intellectually, physically and spiritually, and we have made the general committee of the girls' department an ex officio Board of Supervision. This plan seemed best to us. Other groups may have other governing rules, according to their individual needs.

"Girls from 12 years old up are eligible. Those under 12 are permitted to form groups of Hearth Fire Juniors. Meetings are held every week, and each group has a monthly business meeting when credits and emblems are awarded. There are three degrees of membership, the acorn, the log and the flame degrees. The first requires a girl to attend four consecutive meetings of a Hearth Fire group, to fulfill four requirements from either the compulsory or elective list and to take the vow of fire, which is, 'I promise to do my best to live uprightly, to laugh heartily, to labor cheerfully and to love sincerely.'

"The log degree is attained by presenting 16 compulsory and 24 elective requirements. The compulsory requirements are:

"Drink at least six glasses of water (not ice water) daily for one month.

"Brush the teeth twice daily for one month.

"Know how to: (a) Put out clothing on fire, (b) Stop bleeding, (c) Restore a fainting person, (d) Treat an open cut and frost bites.

"Know how to use the following bandages: (a) Circular, (b) Reverse, (c) Finger, (d) Head, (e) Foot, (f) Sling.

"Sleep with open windows or out-of-doors for one month.

"Be able to answer satisfactorily 10 questions on personal health and hygiene, such questions to be based on the guardian's lecture on the subject.

"Refrain from chewing gum, candy, pickles, sundaes and all drinks except chocolate, milk and water between meals for one month.

"Take at least half an hour daily out-door exercise or stipulated indoor exercises for one month.

"Know how to tie a square knot and break twine.

"Mend a pair of stockings and a knitted undergarment, make a patch and hem some article.

"Keep a written account of all received and spent for personal use in one month.

"Memorize any good poem of not less than twenty-five lines.

"Know the career of some woman who has served her country or state.

"Know all the words of 'America,' the name of the Governor of the state and the Mayor of the city in which you live.

"Take the following vow:

"'Having attained the log degree, I further promise to: Learn all I can, Do all I can, Be all I can, Anywhere I can.'

"In the elective requirements are the nature group, which includes knowledge of elementary botany, ornithology and astronomy, and a little of the practice of each; the health group, which requires cleanly habits, care as to diet and habits of life, systematic exercise and open-air sports. In the latter horsemanship, swimming, rowing, outdoor and indoor games and other similar sports are mentioned, but as they are elective the girls who cannot afford them may easily win their degrees on the less expensive items.

"The three remaining groups in the elective classification are the home group, in which domestic science, general household knowledge such as washing, ironing, sweeping, simple home entertaining, study of good books, music and art, plain and fancy sewing, millinery and dressmaking, are included; the business group, which requires work in an office, as an executive, in social service, letter writing and teaching and prohibits borrowing money or wearing apparel; and the miscellaneous group, in which religious work, history study, etc., are placed.

"There is a camp group, not possible to all, which, with some of the requirements in other groups, forms a third and final degree requirement, that of the flame degree.

"So, you see, it all is quite simple, and altogether practicable, as well as lots of fun—the kind of fun girls of the 'teen age love best."

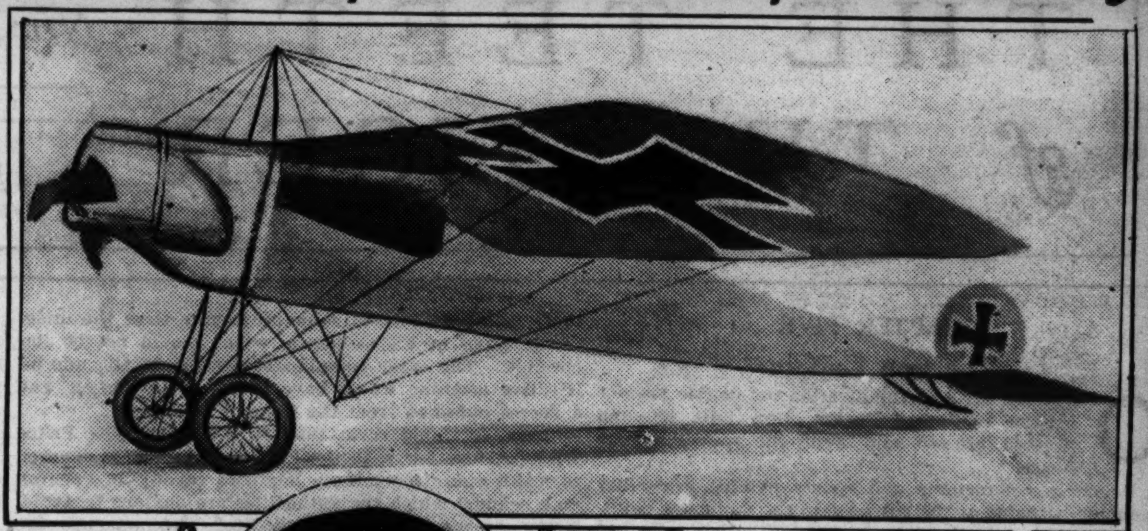
The Race for Aeroplane Supremacy

First complete details of the Fokker machine built by Germany, the success of which has alarmed England—A perfect wasp, manned by crew of one, which does its best work diving for its prey—Odd plan for machine-gun fire :: :: ::



This is the Fokker (German) aeroplane which has been able to outfly and outmaneuver anything owned by the allies. Below—its inventor, Mijnheer Fokker.

NOT even the contest for supremcy in munitions has been more frantic than the race between the enemies in the European war for ascendency in the air. The reason is obvious. Since cavalry has become virtually obsolete, so far as its functions of scouting and reconnaissance are concerned, aeroplanes serve as the eyes of the opposing armies; and that side would have an enormous advantage whose inventors contrived machines able to put out the eyes of its foe and blind him by obtaining an indisputable supremacy over his aircraft.

Therefore a panic was sent quivering through the British Isles when recent dispatches told of a new speedy, fast-climbing, armed monoplane just introduced by the Germans and named the Fokker. The scare was industriously fanned by the powerful Northcliffe press, for the purpose of what it termed its patriotism. Miracles were assigned to this newcomer in the air, and the name Fokker became one of sinister meaning, similar to that of "the goblin uns" in Riley's poem. It was said that the Fokker could climb into the sky almost as rapidly as a Zeppelin; that its speed was such that no other existing craft could rival it; and that its armament was fatal to any hostile flyer which could not escape betimes out of its range.

It was in vain that Mr. Tennan, Under-Secretary of War, announced in Parliament that the Fokker, by its limitations, was confined to defensive fighting. No details were known about the construction of the new sky-fighter, and ignorance invested it with enormous prowess. Lord Northcliffe, through his newspapers, warned the authorities to look sharp lest the aerial supremacy of the allies be endangered, if it was not already fatally impaired.

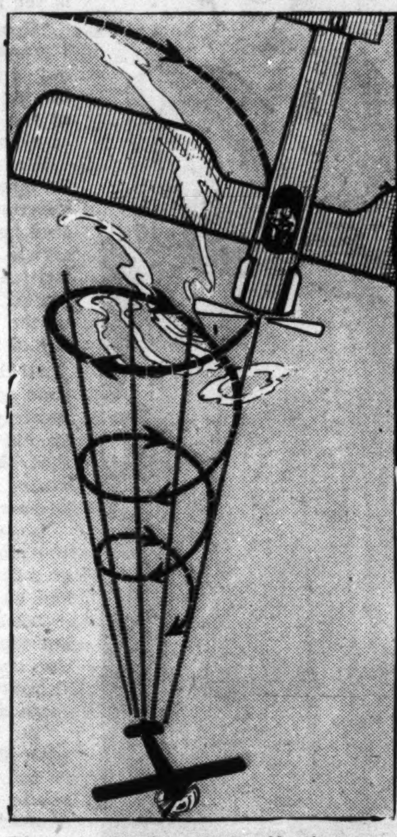


Diagram showing most effective use of the Fokker machine, darting down upon an antagonist while spraying it with machine-gun fire.

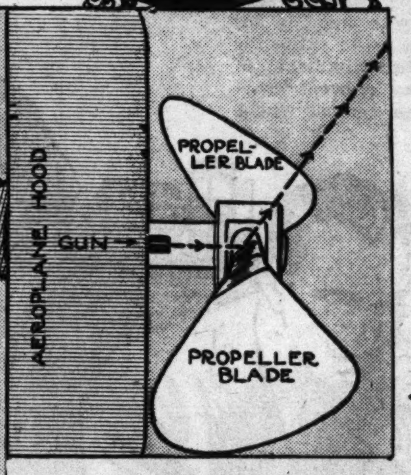


Propeller blades have a deflector, since the rigidly fixed machine gun is built right behind them, and not all of the shower of bullets go unimpeded to their mark.

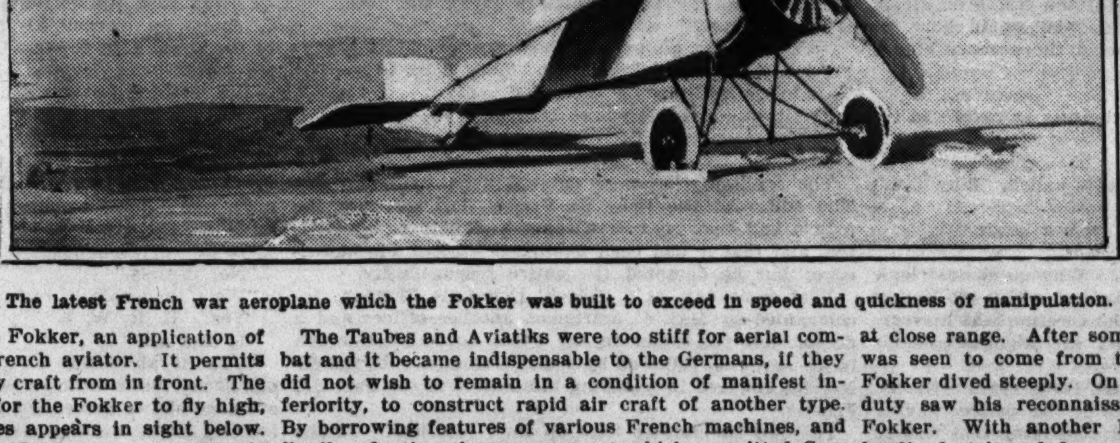
But at last true information concerning the Fokker has reached this country. It appears to be indeed a very formidable fighting craft, swift in climbing, dangerously armed; but one which, being modeled on the French Morane type of monoplane, the allies have without great trouble found means of combating.

The inventor of the machine, Mijnheer Fokker, is a young Dutchman, who has lived in Germany for several years and who is one of the cleverest aviators in Germany. Somewhere about 1911 he built an uncapsizable monoplane before the scientists of other countries had put their theories into practice and had produced the "inherently stable" biplanes.

The new Fokkers are the very opposite to the maker's early effort. All attempts at "inherent stability" has gone, and they are designed to be absolutely under the control of the pilot in every position. This is what makes them dangerous opponents, as they can maneuver with great speed. In general appearance they are close copies of the French Morane monoplane.

It has commonly been assumed that the Fokker was a small machine, but this appears not to be true. The framework of the Fokker, according to the Petit Parisien and other papers, is larger than that of the rapid French aeroplanes of the same type. This makes the wings appear relatively smaller and probably accounts for the statements published in England regarding the smallness of the Fokker.

It is operated by an armored propeller worked by a motor of 150-horsepower. When in horizontal flight it has a high speed, which the Germans say can reach 180 kilometers an hour. Its rising speed has been proved to be high. It can attain 7500 feet in 10 minutes, which is all the more remarkable in view of its large dimensions.



The latest French war aeroplane which the Fokker was built to exceed in speed and quickness of manipulation.

The Fokker was designed in principle to carry only one person, who at the same time acts as pilot and combatant. The pilot has his seat in the middle of the fuselage, which is well armored, especially in the newer machines of this type. The aviator has at his reach a machine gun capable of firing strips containing 250 cartridges directly through the propeller.

Herein is constituted the most important feature of the Fokker, an application of the invention of Garros, a French aviator. It permits the aviator to attack an enemy craft from in front. The favorite method of attack is for the Fokker to fly high, till one of the allies' machines appears in sight below. Then, if the Fokker is of the fixed-gun type, it stands on its head and dives straight for its victim, loosing a stream of bullets as soon as it gets within range. By making the descent ever so slightly spiral the straight stream of bullets becomes a cone of fire, with its apex at the gun and the target inside, so that which ever way the lower machine tries to escape it must pass through that cone.

When the Fokker gets close to its enemy, if he has not already been hit, it approaches directly from behind, firing straight along the body or fuselage, so as to have pilot, passenger, tanks and engine all in one line of fire, and the pursued machine needs to be very quick on its controls to dodge a vital hit.

The Fokker propeller blades are fitted with deflector plates to turn aside bullets that hit them. Only about five or six bullets in a hundred are likely to hit the plates, and the remaining ninety-odd pass between the blades straight for their target. The Fokkers which do not fire through their propellers almost always attack their victims from behind, diving under their tails and coming up in such a position that, while they can shoot up into the body of the pursued machine, the fugitive, even if sitting behind the pilot, cannot shoot at the Fokker for fear of blowing his own tail off.

The Taubes and Aviatiks were too stiff for aerial combat and it became indispensable to the Germans, if they did not wish to remain in a condition of manifest inferiority, to construct rapid air craft of another type. By borrowing features of various French machines, and finally adopting the arrangement which permitted Garros to fire through the propeller, they arrived at the Fokker.

To the Fokker airmen the German military authorities have given a very definite and limited role. Their duty is to mount guard in the neighborhood of the German defensive lines. It is their task to prevent the aeroplanes of the allies from spying out the positions of the German troops, and they are supposed to be always ready to pursue the machines of the allies which arrive for that purpose.

It is also expected that they will attack squadrons of aeroplanes of the allies which are on their way to bombard German positions and prevent them from carrying out their orders. On this account the Fokkers are kept several miles behind that first German line. Most of them are 20 miles inside the German front. When a French or British aeroplane is signaled in movement toward the German position, and if the pilot refuses to be intimidated by the new shrapnel with black smoke which the Germans throw aloft with considerable precision, then the pilot of the Fokker arises and awaits in the sky the adversary's arrival, with his machine ready for the attack, speedy and capable of maneuvering so as to fire from in front in almost any position the operator may choose.

The Fokker monoplane never is allowed to go outside of the German lines, and it is imperatively impressed upon the aviator that he must keep out of reach of the French guns. It is not designed, contrary to reports, as a weapon of attack, but is rather a defensive machine, consumes an extravagant quantity of gasoline, and gasoline is scarce within the German lines. The conditions which are thus imposed reduce the activity of the German aviators who pilot these machines, the latest models of which, equipped with several new improvements, are carefully safeguarded, as they cannot readily be replaced.

Philip Gibbs, writing from British headquarters, says that the British reply to the Fokker is already in the field. He gives no details of its construction, but it seems to be very much on the same lines as the German machine. But already it is doing more than the Fokker (which remains behind its own trenches) by acting as escort to the slower, less mobile machines which the British use for reconnaissance work over the German position.

Gibbs' story of a battle is interesting. This aviator was acting as escort to an aeroplane on reconnaissance duty when two Fokkers suddenly appeared behind that machine. The pilot, who was 2000 feet above them, dived immediately, and, picking out one of the hostile craft, opened fire. It was forced down and continued the nose dive for at least 6000 feet. By this time the second Fokker had climbed higher than his British adversary from behind, but the aviator chased up the sky and came to within 100 feet of the German, when he opened fire again.

After 30 rounds, this machine made a steep nose dive, followed down about 4500 feet by the British pilot, who saw him to earth at last in a plowed field. The pilot climbed again to about 11,000 feet and discovered a German Albatross aloft behind and above one of the scouts. It fled after a short encounter. But it was not the last adventure of the day, for on returning to the allied lines the British pilot saw another Fokker amongst a little group of British biplanes on reconnaissance, and scared it, and down went the third Fokker at a very steep angle, until it disappeared, still nose-diving, 3000 feet below.

The new British machine appears to be a match in speed and hunting qualities for the German type. Like that, it is designed specially for air combats, and carries its gun forward so that it can fire straight ahead. The proof of its efficiency is shown clearly enough if the achievement recorded above can be substantiated. Apart from that, according to Gibbs, the Fokker has often been challenged and beaten by aviators in the ordinary reconnoitering machines.

On Jan. 17, as mentioned above, one of the British pilots sighted a Fokker biplane flying over a wood at 10,000 feet, overhauled it and opened fire at close range. After some maneuvering a jet of flame was seen to come from the enemy's machine, and the Fokker dived steeply. On the same day a pilot on escort duty saw his reconnaissance machine attacked by a Fokker. With another British aeroplane in support, he dived at it and drove it off, and it was last seen going down in a spiral. On the homeward journey a British aeroplane was attacked by another Fokker, but it beat a hasty retreat when the British pilot opened fire. There was a rumor that a royal naval aviation

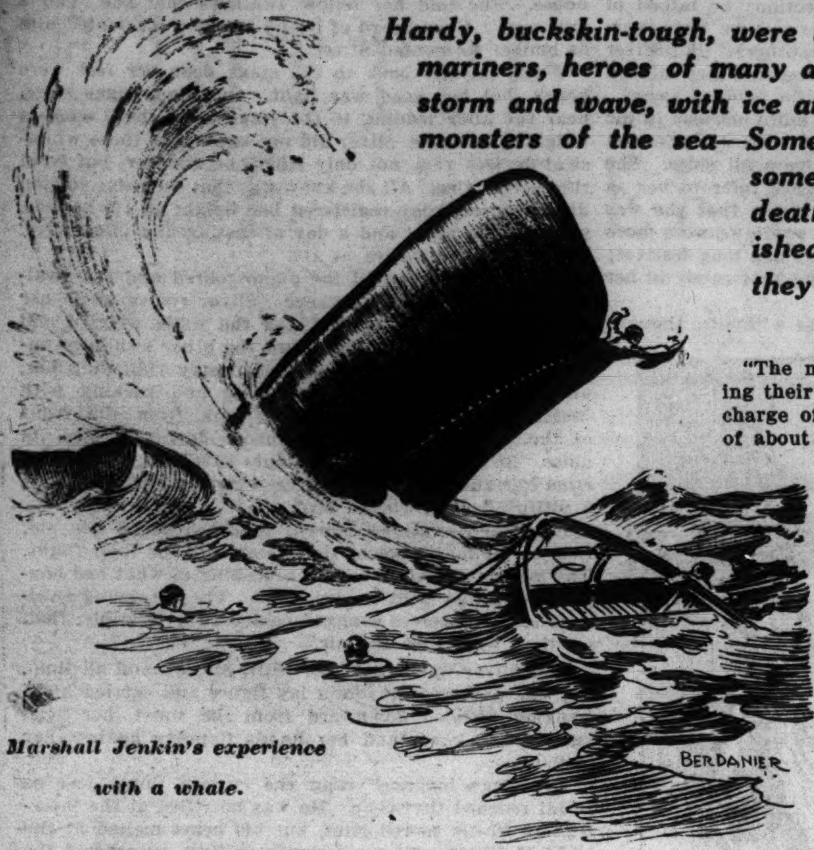
When Yankee Whalers Put Out to Sea

Hardy, buckskin-tough, were these old New England mariners, heroes of many an epic of battle with storm and wave, with ice and calm, with terrible monsters of the sea—Sometimes they drowned, sometimes they froze to death, sometimes they perished in mutiny, sometimes they furnished forth a cannibalistic feast.



Marshall Jenkin's experience with a whale.

FEW chapters in the history of American industries contain chronicles of such deeds of daring as those performed by the hardy Yankee whalemen of the past century. Now almost extinct as a class, as the result of modern appliances which make whale hunting a prosaic business with the elements of romance and danger almost entirely removed, the perils they faced and the hardships they encountered yet live in song and story.

When the United States was still in its infancy, these intrepid adventurers carried the Stars and Stripes to the remotest parts of the seven seas. Perils at which the stoutest-hearted sailor of the old-time merchantman would quail were a part of their daily routine. They braved the crushing ice and the cold of the Arctic, the blazing heat of the tropics, storms and uncharted reefs with only a thought of some day putting back at their home ports with full cargoes of oil. Sometimes they were victims of cannibals.

Though at all times at the mercy of the elements, these dangers were as nothing when compared with the risks the whaleman took when engaged in a life and death struggle with one of those monsters of the deep. In a twinkling one of the small boats in which he was forced to approach closely to his quarry might be smashed into splinters and tossed high in the air by the flirt of a huge tail. The frail craft might also be crushed in enormous jaws as easily as a person would break a toothpick in his teeth.

In New Bedford and Nantucket, Mass., the great American whaling ports of years gone by, the epic of the whaler has been preserved. In the former city a monument has been erected in his memory and museums have been founded to preserve relics and records of his calling. A few authors, long ago, were inspired to record his history for the benefit of posterity, but the latest and by far the most complete work has just been written by A. Hyatt Verrill, who has paid a glowing tribute to him in a volume entitled "The Real Story of the Whaler." (D. Appleton & Co.)

"Fire, collisions at sea, wrecks on rocks or reefs and vessels foundering in storms are the commonest of ocean tragedies in the merchant marine, even though the vessels sail on regular routes and through familiar seas and are hedged about with every care and precaution for their safety," the author says. "But among whalemen such perils were of little moment and were quite lost to sight amid the greater dangers peculiar to their calling.

"Of all dangers which beset the whalemen perhaps the least expected was that of a whale ramming the ship itself, and yet this happened many times and many a ship was sent to the bottom by a maddened whale smashing in her planks with the tremendous force of his massive bulk and enormous strength.

"Among the numerous records of such catastrophes is the case of the Nantucket ship Essex, in charge of Capt. George Pollard Jr. The Essex is probably the first known instance of a ship sunk by being rammed by a whale, as well as one of the most awful ocean tragedies of which we have authentic details.

"On Aug. 12, 1819, the Essex sailed from Nantucket for the Pacific grounds, rounded Cape Horn and bore northward, cruising for sperm whales, until Nov. 29, when the call of 'There she blows' rang from the lookout, the ship was hove-to, and the boats were lowered.

"The chief mate's boat was soon fast, but no sooner did the whale feel the 'iron' (harpoon) than with a stroke of his flukes (tail) he stove the boat and the men were obliged to cut loose. Stripping off their jackets they stuffed the garments into the gaping holes in the planking and by means of this makeshift and by constant bailing managed to reach their ship in safety. Meanwhile the captain's and second mate's boats were fast to a whale and the chief mate headed the ship toward them.

"The men were busily at work, repairing their stove boat, and the mate was in charge of the quarter-deck when a whale of about 85 feet in length breached from the water less than 20 yards distant. Without an instant's hesitation the monster headed for the Essex at full speed and with a terrific crash struck her just forward of the fore chains.

"For a few moments the creature lay as if stunned, and then recovering, started away to leeward. As the ship was leaking rapidly the pumps were at once started and signals were set recalling the absent boats to the ship.

"Suddenly the whale reappeared, rested for a few moments thrashing the sea with his flukes and opening and closing his gigantic jaws, and then gathering all his strength, once more dashed full into the vessel, staving in her heavy planks close to the catheads.

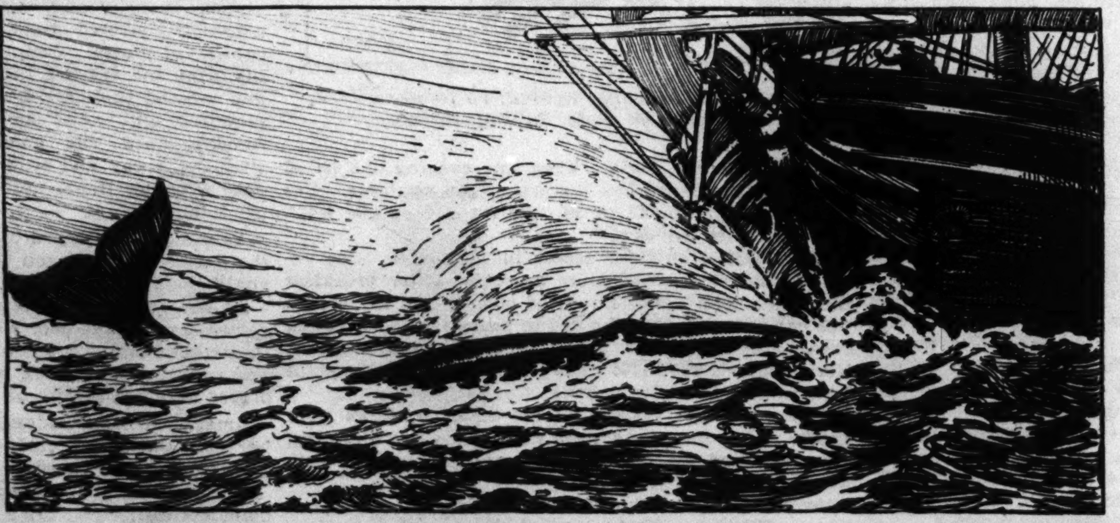
For three days the boats stood by their ship, repairing and building up their frail whaleboats, one of which had been stove. At the end of the third day the Essex was seen to be going to pieces very rapidly. In the three tiny boats the men headed for the coast of Peru—nearly 3000 miles away.

"Day after day the men toiled at the boats; scorched by a tropic sun, parched with thirst, and faint with hunger, for the provisions and water they had been able to secure from the ship were scarcely enough to preserve life.

"Five days after deserting the Essex, barren Ducie's Island was reached and the crews landed. Aside from a few shells and seabirds there was nothing to eat upon the place and no water could be obtained, and on Dec. 27 they again set forth, after leaving three men who refused to go farther, and who preferred to die upon this wave-washed islet rather than endure the tortures of hunger and thirst in the open boats.

"Great as had been their privations before reaching the island they were as nothing compared to the torments the men underwent on that long, terrible row of 2500 miles to Juan Fernandez. On Jan. 10, 1820, the second mate died, and two days later the boats became separated. One by one the members of the crew succumbed to their thirst, hunger and exposure, and as they died their companions fell upon their bodies, cut them to pieces and devoured the raw flesh like famished wolves.

"Two of the boats, those of the captain and the second mate, remained together until Jan. 29, by which time four men had died, and had been devoured and the survivors once more faced death by starvation, when the captain suggested they should draw lots to see who would be killed to save the others.



Without an instant's hesitation the monster headed for the Essex at full speed and with a terrific crash struck her just forward of the fore chains.

"But on Feb. 17 the chief mate's boat was sighted by the British brig Indian and the three survivors were taken aboard. Five days later the ship Dauphin of Nantucket sighted a weather-beaten, tossing whaleboat, and bearing down upon her found Capt. Pollard and Charles Ramsdale still alive, the sole survivors of their boat's crew.

"The third boat was never heard from and the story of her occupants was never known, but those who were saved ultimately recovered and Capt. Pollard, in later years, was employed as a deckhand on Fulton's famous steamboat, the Hudson.

"Somewhat similar, but with a far happier ending, was the case of the Ann Alexander of New Bedford, Capt. John S. Deblois, which sailed on a whaling cruise on Jan. 1, 1858.

"On Aug. 20 the mate's boat was fast to a whale when the creature suddenly turned, seized the boat in his jaws and smashed it to bits. The Captain at once hurried to the assistance of the struggling men, took them into his boat and headed for the ship.

"Meanwhile the waterboat had been lowered and sent to assist the captain with his overcrowded boat, the crews were divided between the two boats and once more the indomitable whalers attacked the whale, but again the monster turned and in an instant stove the second boat.

"The captain's boat was now loaded to the water's edge with 18 men, and as it was useless to attempt to capture the whale under these conditions, the boat was again headed toward the ship, now six or seven miles distant. Hardly had they started when the whale gave chase with open jaws and the men felt their last hour had come; but for some reason the creature veered off, passed the boat within a few feet and disappeared, leaving the boat to reach the Alexander unharmed.

"As soon as the men were on board, the boat was sent back to pick up the oars and fittings of the other boats and the whale again appearing, the chase was resumed, but when within 50 rods of the creature, he dived, and the attempt at capture was abandoned and the boat was pulled slowly towards the approaching ship.

"The captain was standing at the vessel's knightheads watching the boat draw near when suddenly the whale rose close at hand and before an order could be shouted dashed into the ship, staving a huge hole two feet from the keel and just abaft the foremast. Into the torn and started planking the sea rushed in a torrent and the men had barely time to toss a few provisions into a boat and launch it, ere the ship plunged beneath the waves.

"The predicament of the men, thus suddenly left afloat in mid-ocean, was a serious one indeed, for one of the boats had been badly stove and leaked rapidly and less than one day's stock of water and food was on hand for all the men. Undismayed, however, the crews started to pull across the sea toward land, but two days later, on Aug. 22, their troubles came to an end as the ship Nantucket of Nantucket was sighted.

"Strangely enough, the whale which attacked and sank the Alexander was afterwards captured by a New Bedford whaling ship, the Rebecca Simms. Five months after the foundering of the Ann Alexander a whale was killed by the Simms and pieces of ship's timber and planks were noticed embedded in its head and an examination revealed two of the Alexander's irons in his body.

"Still a stranger fate which befell several whalers and merchant ships as well, was running onto whales—the result being the same as if they had struck a rock or a reef—and while some were actually sunk in this manner, the majority of vessels which ran onto whales were brought into port, though leaking badly.

"Of all shipwrecks caused by running onto a whale, that of the ship Union of Nantucket, Capt. Edward Gardner, is the most noteworthy and interesting.

"The Union sailed from Nantucket for Brazil on Sept. 19, 1807, and when 12 days out and while proceeding under easy sail at a speed of seven knots she suddenly brought up against a whale. The shock was so great that those on board thought the vessel had run onto a rock until the animal was seen and a hasty examination showed that the planking on the starboard bow had been smashed in and two timbers had been broken. The pumps were started but the water rapidly gained and the crew prepared to leave the ship. The men were divided equally in two boats, which headed for the Azores, over 600 miles distant.

"By Oct. 2 the men managed to rig up sails, but during the next two days the wind rose to a gale, the extemporized sails were carried away and the two boats were lashed together and allowed to drift. Owing to the haste in which the men left the ship very few provisions and an insufficient supply of water had been put in the boats, and by Oct. 4 the men were put on rations consisting of but three quarts of water and 16 small cakes for the whole company for each 24 hours.

"Starvation was staring them in the face, their thirst, was terrible, and their case seemed hopeless, when on Oct. 9, they sighted the island of Flores and landed safely after being adrift for seven days and eight nights, during which time they had rowed, sailed and drifted for 600 miles.

"Sometimes stories of a 'mad whale' were spread among the whalers—tales of some monster of exceptional ferocity and courage—a whale warrior who destroyed lives and boats and invariably escaped, and when at last some vessel captured such a fighter and identified him by the irons found in his body the report was circulated among all the whalers far and near.

"Such an incident was reported by the ship Hector of New Bedford. In October, 1832, the boats were lowered and started after a large whale, but before they were within striking distance the creature turned, stove one of the boats and threw its occupants into the sea. The Captain's boat hurried to their rescue, but the furious, fighting whale dashed at it, seized it in his enormous armed jaw and chewed and smashed it to pieces. The mate, struggling in the water, was then seized by the creature and although bitten and chewed and badly wounded, he was finally released alive.

"Meanwhile the other boats had drawn near and fearlessly attacked the whale, and despite his ferocity and resistance the men succeeded in killing him. When he was cut up irons of the ship Barclay were found buried in him and he was thus identified as being a well-known fighter which had already destroyed several boats and men, among them the first mate of the Barclay, who had been killed three months previously.

"The danger of being seized and bitten by a whale was only one of the many perils of the chase and numerous instances of men killed and injured in this manner are recorded.

"The first instance of the sort recorded was in 1766, when a sperm whale rammed a boat, threw out the son of the captain and catching the unfortunate man, carried him off in his jaws.

"More remarkable was the case of Marshall Jenkins,

THE TEETH of THE TIGER

New Adventures of Arsene Lupin

By MAURICE LeBLANC

CHAPTER FIVE

The Iron Curtain.

ONE morning, a fortnight after the double murder in the Boulevard Suchet, Don Luis Perenna dressed himself and went the rounds of his house.

It was a comfortable and roomy eighteenth-century mansion, situated at the entrance to the Faubourg Saint-Germain, on the little Place du Palais-Bourbon. He had bought it, furnished, from a rich Hungarian, Count Malonyi, keeping for his own use the horses, carriages, motor cars, and taking over the eight servants and even the Count's secretary, Mlle. Levasseur, who undertook to manage the household and to receive and get rid of the visitors—journalists, bores and curiosity dealers—attracted by the luxury of the house and the reputation of its new owner.

After finishing his inspection of the stables and garage, he walked across the courtyard and went up to his study, pushed open one of the windows and raised his head. Above him was a slanting mirror; and this mirror reflected, beyond the courtyard and its surrounding wall, one whole side of the Place du Palais-Bourbon.

"Bother!" he said. "Those confounded detectives are still there. And this has been going on for a fortnight. I'm getting tired of this spying."

He sat down, in a bad temper, to look through his letters. When he had finished, he rang the bell.

"Ask Mlle. Levasseur to bring me the newspapers."

She had been the Hungarian Count's reader as well as his secretary; and Perenna had trained her to pick out in the newspapers anything that referred to him, and to give him each morning an exact account of the proceedings that were being taken against Mme. Fauville.

Always dressed in black, with a very elegant and graceful figure, she had attracted him from the first. She had an air of great dignity and a grave and thoughtful face which made it impossible to penetrate the secret of her soul, and which would have seemed austere had it not been framed in a cloud of fair curls, resisting all attempts at discipline and setting a halo of light and gayety around her.

She read the reports relating to Mme. Fauville; and Don Luis could see that the police investigations were making no headway. Marie Fauville still kept to her first method, that of weeping, making a show of indignation and assuming entire ignorance of the facts upon which she was being examined.

"It's ridiculous," he said aloud. "I have never seen anyone defend herself so clumsily."

"Still, if she's innocent?"

It was the first time that Mlle. Levasseur had uttered an opinion or rather a remark upon the case. Don Luis looked at her in great surprise.

"So you think her innocent, Madamoiselle?"

She seemed ready to reply and to explain the meaning of her interruption. It was as though she were removing her impassive mask and about to allow her face to adopt a more animated expression under the impulse of her inner feelings. But she restrained herself with a visible effort, and murmured:

"I don't know. I have no views."

"Possibly," he said, watching her with curiosity. "But you have a doubt; a doubt which would be permissible if it were not for the marks left by Mme. Fauville's own teeth. Those marks, you see, are something more than a signature, more than a confession of guilt. And, as long as she is unable to give a satisfactory explanation of this point"——

But Marie Fauville vouchsafed not the slightest explanation of this or of anything else. She remained impenetrable. On the other hand, the police failed to discover her accomplice or accomplices, or the man with the ebony walking stick and the tortoise-shell glasses whom the waiter at the Cafe du Pont-Neuf had described to Mazeroux and who seemed to have played a singularly suspicious part. In short, there was not a ray of light thrown upon the subject.

Equally vain was all search for the traces of Victor, the Roussel sister's first cousin, who would have inherited the Mornington bequest in the absence of any direct heirs.

"Is that all?" asked Perenna.

"No," said Mlle. Levasseur, "there is an article in the Echo de France"——

"Relating to me?"

"I presume so, Monsieur. It is called, 'Why Don't They Arrest Him?'"

"That concerns me," he said, with a laugh.

He took the newspaper and read:

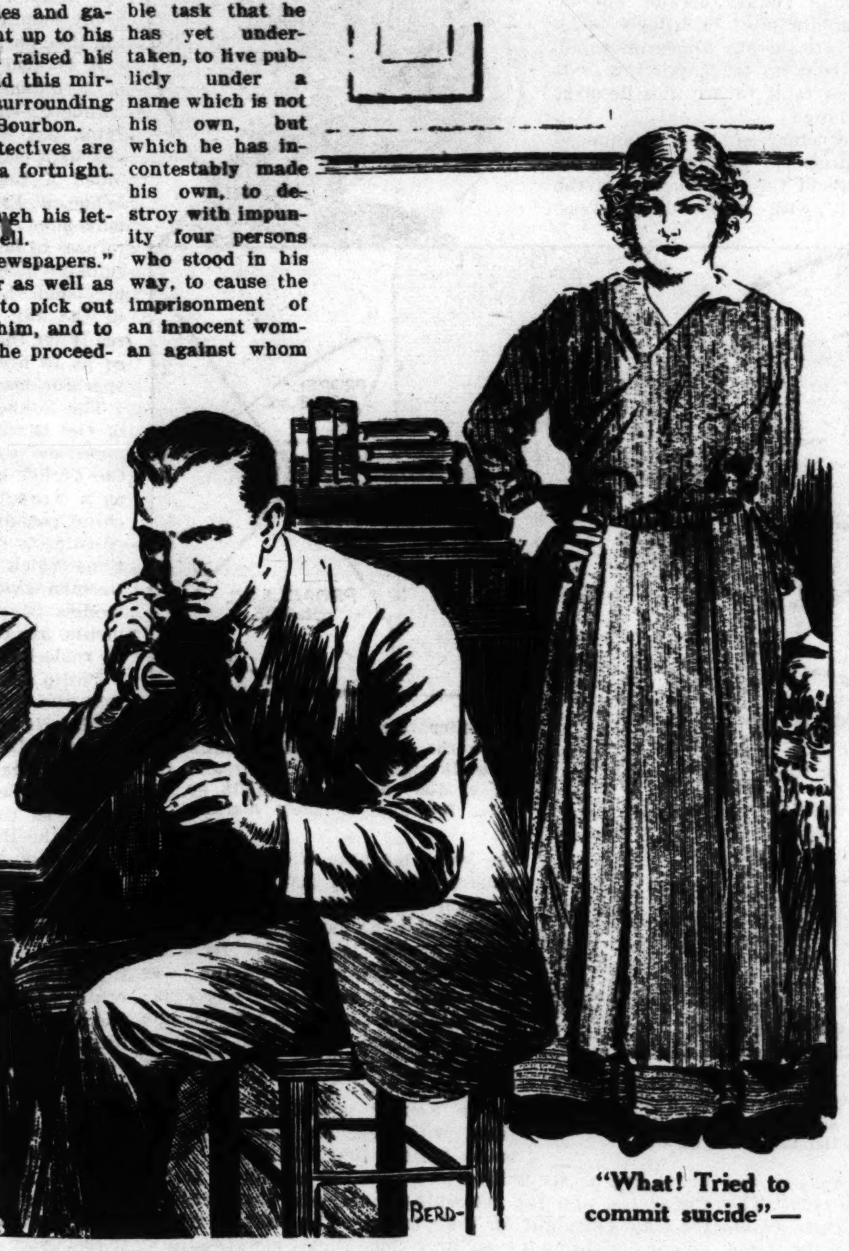
"Why do they not arrest him? Why go against logic and prolong an unnatural situation which no decent man can understand? This is the question which everybody is asking and to which our investigations enable us to furnish a precise reply.

"Two years ago, in other words, three years after the pretended death of Arsene Lupin, the police, having discovered or believing they had discovered that Arsene Lupin was really none other than one Floriani, born at Blois and since lost to sight, caused the register to be inscribed, on the page relating to this Floriani, with the word 'Deceased,' followed by the words, 'Under the alias of Arsene Lupin.'

"Consequently, to bring Arsene Lupin back to life, there would be wanted something more than the undeniable proof of his existence, which would not be impossible. The most complicated wheels in the administrative machine would have to be set in motion, and a decree obtained from the Council of State.

"Now, it would seem that M. Velanglay, the Prime Minister, together with the Prefect of Police, is opposed to making any too minute inquiries capable of opening up a scandal which the authorities are anxious to avoid. Bring Arsene Lupin back to life? Recommence the struggle with that accursed scoundrel? Risk a fresh defeat and fresh ridicule? No, no, and again no!

"And thus is brought about this unprecedented, inadmissible, inconceivable, disgraceful situation, that Arsene Lupin, the hardened thief, the impenitent criminal, the robber king, the emperor of burglars and swindlers, is able today, not clandestinely, but in the sight and hearing of the whole world, to pursue the most formidable task that he has yet undertaken, to live publicly under a name which is not his own, but which he has incontestably made his own, to destroy with impunity four persons who stood in his way, to cause the imprisonment of an innocent woman against whom he himself has accumulated false evidence, and at the end of all, despite the protests of common sense and thanks to an unavowed complicity, to receive the hundred millions of the Mornington legacy.



"What! Tried to commit suicide"—

"There is the ignominious truth in a nutshell. It is well that it should be stated. Let us hope, now that it stands revealed, that it will influence the future conduct of events."

"At any rate, it will influence the conduct of the idiot who wrote that article," said Lupin, with a grin.

He dismissed Mlle. Lavasseur and rang up Maj. d'Astrignac on the telephone.

"Is that you, Major? Perenna speaking."

"Yes; what is it?"

"Have you read the article in the Echo de France?"

"Yes."

"Would it bore you very much to call on that gentleman and ask for satisfaction in my name?"

"Oh! A duel!"

"It's got to be, Major. All these sportsmen are wearying me with their lubrications. They must be gagged. This fellow will pay for the rest."

"Well, of course, if you're bent on it"——

"I am, very much."

The preliminaries were entered upon without delay The editor of the Echo de France declared that the article had been sent in without a signature, typewritten, and that it had been published without his knowledge; but he accepted the entire responsibility.

That same day, at 3 o'clock, Don Luis Perenna, accompanied by Maj. d' Astrignac, another officer and a doctor, left the house in the Place du Palais-Bourbon in his car, and, followed by a taxi crammed with the detectives engaged in watching him, drove to the Parc des Princes.

The two adversaries took up their positions. At the second encounter, the editor of the Echo de France fell, wounded in the chest.

The doctors examined the injured man. Presently one of them rose and said:

"It's nothing. Three weeks' rest, at most. Only a third of an inch more, and he would have been done for."

Still followed by the detectives' motor cab, Don Luis returned to the Faubourg Saint-Germain; and it was then that an incident occurred which was to puzzle him greatly and throw a most extraordinary light on the article in the Echo de France.

In the courtyard of his house he saw two little puppies which belonged to the coachman and which were generally confined to the stables. They were playing with a twist of red string which kept catching on to things. In the end, the paper round which the string was wound, appeared. Don Luis happened to pass at that moment. His eyes noticed marks of writing on the paper, and he mechanically picked it up and unfolded it.

He gave a start. He had at once recognized the opening lines of the article printed in the Echo de France. And the whole article was there, written in ink, on ruled paper, with erasures, and with sentences added, struck out and begun anew.

He called the coachman and asked him:

"Where does this ball of string come from?"

"The string, sir? Why, from the harness room, I think. It must have been that little she-devil of a Mirza who"——

"And when did you wind the string round the paper?"

"Yesterday evening, Monsieur."

"Yesterday evening. I see. And where is the paper from?"

"Upon my word, Monsieur, I can't say. I wanted something to wind my string on. I picked this up behind the coach-house, where they fling all the rubbish of the house to be taken into the street at night."

Don Luis pursued his investigations. He questioned or asked Mlle. Levasseur to question the other servants. He discovered nothing; but one fact remained; the article in the Echo de France had been written, as the rough draft which he picked up proved, by somebody who lived in the house or who was in touch with one of the people in the house.

All the remainder of the afternoon Don Luis continued anxious, annoyed by the mystery that surrounded him, incensed at his own inaction, and especially at that threatened arrest, which certainly caused him no uneasiness, but which hampered his movements.

Accordingly, when he was told at about 10 o'clock that a man who gave the name of Alexandre insisted on seeing him, he had the man shown in; and when he found himself face to face with Mazeroux, but Mazeroux disguised beyond recognition and huddled in an old cloak, he flung himself on him as on a prey, hustling and shaking him.

"So, it's you, at last?" he cried. "Well, what did I tell you? You can't make head or tail of things at the police office and you've come to fetch me! Confess it, you numskull! You've come to fetch me. Oh, how funny it is! Gad, I knew that you would never have the cheek to arrest me, and that the Prefect of Police would manage to calm the untimely ardor of that confounded Weber! To begin with, one doesn't arrest a man whom one has need of. Come, out with it! Lord, how stupid you look!"

"But, Chief," spluttered Mazeroux, utterly nonplussed.

"What! Must I drag the words out of you? Come on! I'll make a start. It has to do with the man with the ebony walking stick, hasn't it? The one we saw at the Cafe du Pont-Neuf on the day when Inspector Verot was murdered?"

"Yes, it has."

"Have you found his traces?"

"Yes."

"Well, come along, find your tongue!"

"It's like this, Chief. Someone else noticed him besides the waiter. There was another customer in the cafe; and this other customer, whom I ended by discovering, went out at the same time as our man and heard him ask somebody in the street which was the nearest underground station for Neuilly."

"Capital, that. And in Neuilly, by asking questions on every side, you ferreted him out?"

"And even learned his name, Chief—Hubert Lautier of the Avenue du Roule. Only he decamped from there six months ago, leaving his furniture behind him and taking nothing but two trunks."

"What about the postoffice?"

"We have been to the postoffice. One of the clerks recognized the description which we supplied him. Our man calls once every eight or ten days to fetch his mail, which never amounts to much, just one or two letters. He has not been there for some time."

"Is the correspondence in his name?"

"No, initials."

"Were they able to remember them?"

"Yes: B. R. W. 8."

"Is that all?"

"That is absolutely all that I have discovered. But one of my fellow officers succeeded in proving, from the evidence of two detectives, that a man carrying a silver-handled ebony walking stick and a pair of tortoise-shell glasses walked out of the Gare d'Auteuil on the evening of the double murder and went toward Renelagh. Remember the presence of Mme. Fauville in that neighborhood at the same hour. And remember that the crime was committed round about midnight. I conclude from this"——

In time she learned to swim in the air, to keep her equilibrium and to take superlative joy in the new element she had gained. So Bruni told her the time and the train for the morrow's journey and left her to put off her celestial raiment and get back to her dingy self.

When she came down from the dressing room, she found Krug waiting for her. She made her nails ready for a cat-like defense, but to her stupefaction he lifted his hat to her! It was the first time she had ever received this tribute and it was overwhelming. And he said in his most sugary tones:

"You cert'ny slipped one over on me. Me nob is buzzin' yet. But I like a girl's got some fight in her. And you're light as a fedder, too. Gee, you're a pipe to lift. Dey's a lot o' tips I can give you dat'll help some. Supposin' you an' me was to have dinner together. You must be ready for de eats after all de work you done."

So she went with him to a restaurant a little less clean and a little more expensive than the dairy lunches that had marked her highest social arrival heretofore. Mr. Krug, as host, majestically went down the line: Oysters, soup, steak, fried potatoes, and pie. He urged Sliver to join him in a pitcher of beer, but she would not be persuaded. There had been too much beer in her environs. She had carried too many pails of it up too many stairs.

But oysters—these were almost her first, and they were as large as small hot-water bags. Each one of them was a problem. But she solved them all. She solved the soup, together with two slices of bread that she broke up in it, following Mr. Krug's example. She ate the steak with the eager fangs of a young animal, and hurried the potatoes down in single file. Of the pie she left not a crumb and she drained two cups of coffee.

Even Mr. Krug admired her triumph. He said:

"Girlie, you're the goods when it comes to the knife-and-fork dance. Dey won't make no hash out of what you leave."

She winced a little at this and flashed back:

"If you don't like my style you ain't gotta pay for it. I got the price of the check right here."

Krug was startled. "Gee, but you're the hair-trigger kid! Why, I love to see you wallop a plate. Dat other broad dat's leavin' de show used to turn up her nose at everything I bought her."

"Oh," said Sliver cannily, "you think you're trainin' me to take her place on the wire and off, do you? Well, you better change cars; we don't use them kind of transfers on this line."

She shook off Krug's further hospitality and went home alone. Her heavy feet could hardly lift her unusual weight up the long stairs. Her last strength went in the task of wresting off her shoes and folding up her pitiful finery. Her soul was asleep before her lean hands had finished drawing the quilt about her thin and ropy little throat.

The journey to New Jersey was the beginning of an era of travel. New Jersey, in the eyes of Sliver, had always been a foreign country. She gave herself a last good breakfast in New York, that she might have pleasant memories of America.

From the station at Paterson she and the other swallows lugged their heavy suitcases to a boarding house that was accounted the worst even in Paterson. After an hour in the theater to test the tackle and rehearse the music cues, the swallows flew boarding houseward for an early luncheon.

That week was the birth of a new Sliver. She had food, food, food—three foods a day and a smack of supper at a fascinating lunch wagon after the evening's work was over.

At her first matinee Sliver forgot most of her words, and the rest stuck in her parched throat. She could not keep step with the dancers, and when she was hoisted into the air she lost her balance and hung head down, kicking and sprawling till she was lowered.

This convulsed the small audience so completely that the house manager begged Bruni to keep it in. The old man was insulted at the suggestion. His birds were artists, not clowns. He expended so much wrath on the manager that he had none left for Sliver. But he explained to her that the sacrilege must not occur again and ordered Krug to give her a special rehearsal. On this account she could hardly refuse Krug's invitation to supper after the show. She was as hungry at 11:30 as she had been before dinner, and as Krug watched her his admiration was tempered with anxiety.

On the way home he carelessly slipped his arm about her waist and withdrew it promptly minus four or five small pieces excavated by her ready nails. He was so startled that he apologized. The next evening he was permitted to feed her only on condition that he quit what she called his "damnonsense."

This was the basest ingratitude in his eyes and the supper series ended. Lacking his support, she paid for her own suppers. In the mornings she bought herself beakers of ice cream soda, nut sundaes with maple syrup spread over and boxes of "chorklut pep'munts."

At the end of the week she found that her wealth was not so elastic as her appetite. She had no money to pay the small bill for her laundry when the stage door man brought it. She had nothing to pawn and she was forced to borrow from another swallow against pay day.

The fourth week found the swallows nested in Red Bank. The lonely Krug, watching the infuriatingly elusive Sliver, was startled to realize how pretty she was. He had understood the secret of the curves in her nether members; they had been stitched in, with results that might have bewildered an anatomist. But those pipe-stem bare arms of hers had grown actually round and full. Those dangerous elbow spikes were blunter.

His experienced arms tested her weight when the signal came to hoist. Yes, she was heavier. And so was his heart. He approached her again with a supper invitation. She accepted graciously with a round-cheeked smile that made him gasp. Her appetite was undiminished.

On the way home he said:

"Say, girlie, you're not so skinny as you was, are you?"

"So the other goils was tellin' me," she said. "Yesterday I had a let out me skoit at the waist and tonight I left off me plumpers."

"You're sure one armful now," he said, and made bold to prove it. She gave him her elbow in the solar plexus, and when he began breathing again he realized that she had not improved so much as he thought.

Sliver grew prettier as she grew plumper and Krug began to feel an awe of her, as if a little, tight-clenched bud were blooming into a young rose before him. He began to plead humbly for her affection; he talked of the joys of marriage. Two of the swallows were married and one had left a child at her mother's. But Sliver laughed him to scorn. She was as fleet and airy minded as a swallow when the mating season is farthest away.

Krug grew more lorn as she grew more luscious in his sight. But he grew tiresome to her. His compliments bored her. She was getting them from all sides. She was overhearing people in the audience refer to her as "that pretty one on the left." She knew that she was growing beautiful because the other swallows were more and more unpleasant to her. Life was one long festival; her appetite grew almost lyrical. She kept candy in her make-up box and in her bedroom.

—She was no longer upheld, no longer a bird, just a helpless body, falling, falling—

And so she romped across the weeks without a thought of trouble in her world. Then one evening she heard two men in a stage box discussing the swallows. She heard herself referred to as "the fat one on the left." She mistrusted her ears.

Sliver felt a knife of terror in her heart. She resolved that she needed more exercise. After breakfast she took a long walk. She tired quickly and her breath was gone so soon that she had to pause for an ice cream soda. She invested a penny in a weighing machine. Her 90 pounds were 115! The traditional limit of weight for a swallow was 100 pounds.

That night she noted that the other swallows were kinder to her than for a week past. This was alarming. Krug resumed his old insolence and patronage. This was convincing.

He invited her to supper, and somehow she dared not refuse. When he asked her what she wanted he said:

"Go easy on the heavy stuff, girlie. Take it from me, it's easier putting on weight than pushin' it off."

She ate heavily to prove that he could not coerce her with his advice. As they walked to her boarding house, his arm slid round her waist and she had a hard fight to tear it away.

"Stop it," she gasped breathlessly. "I hate it, and I hate you."

"That goes double then, girlie," he answered truculently. "I guess I won't trouble you long."

"You mean you're goin' to quit the show?" she said, all too hopefully.

"Me! It ain't me!" he laughed. "You ain't de first swaller dat's been crowded out because she weighed in too heavy. I've saw more'n a dozen of youse livin' skeletons swell out into fat ladies and then blow. I been doin' overtime histin' you and sayin' nuttin' to nobuddy. But it don't get me nowhere, and I'm goin' to lay down. It's me duty to me boss to wise him up to de strain you're puttin' on his tackle. Of course, if you was pal wit' me, I might go troo wit' it, but—well, sleep on it, kiddo, and gimme your answer tomorra. A woid to de wise is officious."

Sliver slept on it that night, but she slept ill. She fell to work on all the exercises she could remember from the newspaper accounts of how to get thin. She refused her breakfast and fled from the house, where the aroma of waffles seemed to have claws to clutch at her and hale her back. She walked and ran, sinking down to rest on packing cases or other sidewalk obstructions. She walked and walked till her feet outached her heart.

After the matinee she did not go back to the boarding house. She told her fellow swallows that she "had a date out." Krug heard of it and jealousy tormented him as hunger tormented Sliver.

When she got back to the stage door her feet were heavy, but her head was light. Outside a cigar store, near the alley leading to the stage door, there stood a weighing machine. Sliver did not know that these whimsical devices vary not only from one another, but from themselves also. All she knew was that the same solemn dial that yesterday registered her weight as 115 pounds, now, after a night and a day of fasting and pilgrimage, proclaimed her weight at 117.

The curtain rose and the piano roared and the swallows began to sing and dance. Sliver strove to do her part, but the floor writhed and the walls wiggled and the audience eddied. She heard the other swallows upbraiding her. The audience was openly ridiculing her, and a few women were whooping and rocking with laughter. Bruni was charging back from the front of the house, when the audience suddenly hushed its noise. Sliver collapsed; her joints gave way one by one from her ankles up, and she lay outspread on the stage, a pitiful, broken-winged bird.

The other swallows stared, then moved to her aid. But just at that moment the cué arrived for their flight. The men at the wires had seen nothing of what had happened and they bent to their task. The advancing swallows felt themselves dragged backward irresistibly, then up they went into the air.

And Sliver was lifted, too. Still aswoon and all limp, she was gathered up like a lay figure and carried high, hanging doubled downward from the waist, her head against her knees and her hands flapping against her feet.

The stage manager rang the curtain down just as Bruni reached the scene. He was horrified at the interruption to his sacred rites, but his heart melted at the sight of Sliver. Always a showman first, he ordered the rest of his flock to stand by to continue, and, taking Sliver in his arms as she was lowered to the stage, unhooked the wire from her belt. Her weight amazed him and he staggered under it to the wings, groaning:

"Per l'amor di dio; my swallow is a goose!"

He turned her over to Krug, who rushed to his assistance; then he made haste to the footlights to explain to the audience that the swallow was all right tomorrow and the leddies and jontlamen need not be alarmed. He backed off into the curtain wire and bowed himself slowly through a narrow crevice. The curtain went up and the Engagement Extraordinary went on.

She made haste to get away from the theater before the other swallows came off the stage to bombard her with questions. She darted down the stairs and out of the stage door as the swallows hopped from the stage. Krug caught up with her and took her well-filled sleeve. He suspected the cause of her distress; his first word was an irresistible plea:

"Looka year, kiddo, what you need ain't no medicine or no booze. Plain food and lots of it is what you want. Am I hep?"

"Yep," she sighed. And he steered her into a restaurant over whose door hung one electric word, a gleaming imperative "EAT."

Krug did not seek to lure Sliver with cocktails or liquors. He offered her a life of work and plenty of food. And she fell for it. He murmured to her gallantly that he didn't mind how heavy she got. He'd put on a double wire if necessary, and a block and tackle big enough to hoist a safe. If only she'd treat him white, he'd go into de bakery business.

There was a moon leering down at them as they left the restaurant; a well fed moon, like a great pie in the sky. A sense of luxurious well being filled Sliver's heart and she thought kindly even of Krug. Until they reached a heavily timbered street, where the walk led through a subway of gloom. And there he took his bargain into his arms and crushed her to him with gorilla violence, and pressed back her head and took the kiss she had promised him. And more than one, with increasing ferocity until she smothered and fought him and wrenched away and took four strips of skin from his nose with her finger nails and beat him on the mouth till it bled.

As she ran she heard him sputtering and calling into the dark: "I'll get you for this! You'll see! I'll get you!"

As she ran up the steps of the boarding house and darted through the door she collided with Mr. Bruni. At the sight of him she was overcome with guilt and shame and remorse. She flung herself into his arms and embraced as much of him as she could encompass.

Amazed by the onslaught and the outburst, he led her into the empty parlor, settled her in a chair, sat down by her and asked:

"Leetle keed, you are seek? You have bad news from home? Huh?"

"It's meself I've bad news from," Sliver whimpered, and with that beginning told him all; poured out the little history of her saccharine past, showed how the baleful habit of food had fastened its tentacles upon her till, now she was lost beyond redemption.

Poor, fat old Bruni, who had a smile for almost everything, did not smile at this tragedy; he did not make fun of Sliver or minimize her torment. He had gone through the same conflict and lost. There was no excuse she could have given that could have made so straight for his heart. He took Sliver's dimpled hand into the cushions of his and spoke with as much sincerity as if he were consoling and counseling a repentant Magdalene.

"Leetla keed, you have right to cry, for now your life commence-a to begin. You are goeen each day to make-a de beeg fight. When I am young like you, I am slim and graceful like-a de grayhound dog. I am de fines' dancer in all Eetaly. I do not say it. I know it. Averybody know it. Ask anybody, 'Who is fines' dancer in Eetaly?' He say, 'Carlo Bruni. So I am reech and proud and I begin to eat. I drink not mooch—a leetla Chianti, maybe; but I eat, and eateen kills more people as drinkeen. I dance, but I puff. I say, 'I am not well. I most eat more.' I eat. I grow soft. I grow fat. I say, 'Tomorra I begeen to stop to eat so moch. But what a man will not do today, he cannot do tomorra. Bine-by, you ask anybody, 'Who is fines' dancer in Eetaly?' He says, 'Carlo Bruni was.' Bineby I stop to eat. It is too late. I get fat jost de same. And bineby Mr. Bruni stop

"That will do; be off!"

"But"——

"Meet me in half an hour outside our man's place."

"What man?"

"Marie Fauville's accomplice."

"But you don't know"——

"The address? Why, you gave it to me yourself; Boulevard Richard-Wallace, No. 8. Go! And don't look such a fool."

He made him spin round on his heels, took him by the shoulders, pushed him to the door, and handed him over, quite flabbergasted, to a footman.

He himself went out a few minutes later, dragging in his wake the detectives attached to his person, left them posted on sentry duty outside a block of flats with a double entrance, and took a motor cab to Neuilly.

He went along the Avenue de Madrid on foot and turned down the Boulevard Richard-Wallace, opposite the Bois de Boulogne. Mazeroux was waiting for him in front of a courtyard contained within the very high walls of the adjoining property.

"Is this No. 8?"

"Yes, Chief. but tell me how"——

He passed his arm through the sergeant's.

"Listen, Alexandre, and profit by my words. Remember this, when a person is choosing initials for his address at a poste restante he doesn't pick them at random, but always in such a way that the letters convey a meaning to the person corresponding with him, a meaning which will enable that other person easily to remember the address."

"And in this case?"

"In this case, Mazeroux, a man like myself, who knows Neuilly and the neighborhood of the Bois, is at once struck by those three letters, 'B. R. W.' and especially by the 'W.,' a foreign letter, an English letter. So that in my mind's eye, instantly, as in a flash, I saw the three letters in their logical place as initials at the head of the words for which they stand. I saw the 'B' of 'boulevard' and the 'R' and the English 'W' of Richard-Wallace. And I came to the boulevard Richard-Wallace. And, that, my dear sir, explains the milk in the cocoanut.

"And what do you think, Chief?"

"I think nothing. I am looking out. I am building up a theory on the first basis that offers a probable theory. And I say to myself Mazeroux, that this is a devilish mysterious little hole and that this house—Hush! Listen!"

He pushed Mazeroux into a dark corner. They had heard a noise, the slamming of a door.

Footsteps crossed the courtyard in front of the house. The lock of the outer gate grated. Someone appeared and the light of a street lamp fell full on his face.

"Dash it all," muttered Mazeroux, "it's he!"

"I believe you are right."

"It's he, Chief. Look at the black stick and the bright handle. And did you see the eyeglass—and the beard? What a oner you are, Chief!"

"Calm yourself and let's go after him."

The man crossed the Boulevard Richard-Wallace and was turning into the Boulevard Maillot. He was walking pretty fast, with his head up, gayly twirling his stick. He lit a cigarette.

At the end of the Boulevard Maillot the man passed the octroi and entered Paris. The railway station of the outer circle was close by. He went to it and, still followed by the others, stepped into a train that took them to Auteuil.

"That's funny," said Mazeroux. "He's doing exactly what he did a fortnight ago. This is where he was seen."

The man now went along the fortifications. In a quarter of an hour he reached the Boulevard Suchet and almost immediately afterward the house in which M. Fauville and his son had been murdered.

He climbed the fortifications opposite the house and stayed there for some minutes, motionless, with his face to the front of the house. Then continuing his road he went to La Muette and plunged into the dusk of the Bois de Boulogne.

"To work and boldly!" said Don Luis, quickening his pace. Mazeroux stopped him.

"What do you mean, Chief?"

"Well, catch him by the throat! There are two of us; we couldn't hope for a better moment."

"What! Why that's impossible!"

"Impossible? Are you afraid? Very well, I'll do it by myself."

"Look here, Chief, you're not serious!"

"Why shouldn't I be serious?"

"Because one can't arrest a man without a reason."

"Without a reason? A scoundrel like this? A murderer? What more do you want?"

"A warrant. I haven't a warrant."

Mazeroux's accent was so full of conviction, and the answer struck Don Luis as so comical that he burst out laughing.

"You have no warrant? Poor little chap! Well, I'll soon show you if I need a warrant!"

"You'll show me nothing," cried Mazeroux, hanging on to his companion's arm. "You shan't touch the man."

Don Luis mastered his rage. He felt that all his arguments would be shattered to pieces against the sergeant's obstinacy, and that, if necessary, Mazeroux would go to the length of defending the enemy against him.

He went home, furious, sick of an adventure in which he had not had elbow room, and in which he had had to submit to the will, or, rather, to the weakness of others.

But next morning when he woke up his longing to see the police lay hold of the man with the ebony stick, and especially the feeling that his assistance would be of use, impelled him to dress as quickly as he could.

Just then Mazeroux rang up and asked to speak to him. He rushed to the little telephone box which his predecessor had fitted up on the first floor, in a dark recess that communicated only with his study, and switched on the electric light.

"Is that you, Alexandre?"

"Yes, Chief. I'm speaking from a wine shop near the house on the Boulevard Richard-Wallace."

"What about our man?"

"The bird's still in the nest. But we're only just in time."

"Really?"

"Yes, he's packed his trunk. He's going away this morning."

"How do they know?"

"Through the woman who manages for him. She's just come to the house and will let us in."

"Does he live alone?"

"Yes, the woman cooks his meals and goes away in the evening. No one ever calls except a veiled lady who has paid him three visits since he's been here. The housekeeper was not able to see what she was like. As for him, she says he's a scholar, who spends his time reading and working."

"And have you a warrant?"

"Yes, we're going to use it."

"I'll come at once."

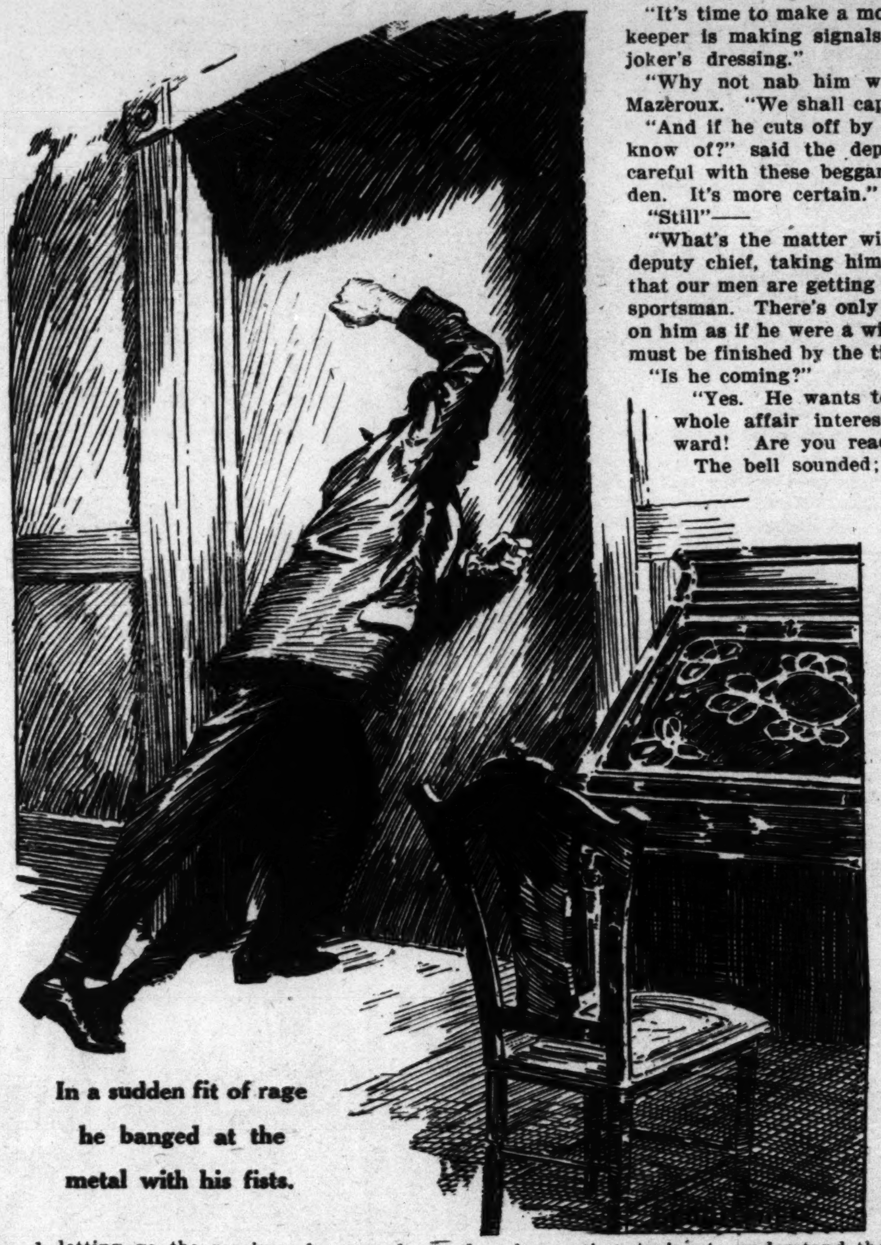
"You can't! We've got Weber at our head. Oh, by the way, have you heard the news about Mme. Fauville?"

"About Mme. Fauville?"

"Yes, she tried to commit suicide last night."

"What! Tried to commit suicide!"

Perenna had uttered an exclamation of astonishment and was very much surprised to hear, almost at the same time, another cry, like an echo, at his elbow. Without letting go the receiver, he turned round and saw that Mlle. Levasseur was in the study a few yards away from him, standing with a distorted and livid face. Their eyes met. He was on the point of speaking to her, but she moved away, without leaving the room, however.



In a sudden fit of rage he banged at the metal with his fists.

"What the devil was she listening for?" Don Luis wondered. "And why that look of dismay?"

"She said, you know, that she would try to kill herself."

"But how did she do it?" Perenna asked.

"I'll tell you another time. They're calling me. Whatever you do, Chief, don't come."

"Yes," he replied, firmly, "I'm coming. After all, the least I can do is to be in at the death, seeing that it was I who found the scent. But don't be afraid. I shall keep in the background."

"Then hurry, Chief. We're delivering the attack in 10 minutes."

"I'll be with you before that."

He quickly hung up the receiver and turned on his heel to leave the telephone box. The next moment he had flung himself against the farther wall. Just as he was about to pass out he had heard something click above his head and he but barely had the time to leap back and escape being struck by an iron curtain which fell in front of him with a terrible thud.

Another second and the huge mass would have crushed him. He could feel it whizzing by his head. And he had never before experienced the anguish of danger so intensely.

After a moment of genuine fright, in which he stood as though petrified, with his brain in a whirl, he recovered his coolness and threw himself upon the obstacle. But it at once appeared to him that the obstacle was unsurmountable.

It was a heavy metal panel, not made of plates or lathes fastened one to the other, but formed of a solid slab, massive, firm and strong and covered with the sheen of time, darkened here and there with patches of rust. On either side and at the top and bottom the edges of the panel fitted in a narrow groove, which covered them hermetically.

He was a prisoner. In a sudden fit of rage he banged at the metal with his fists. He remembered that Mlle. Levasseur was in the study. If she had not yet left the room—and surely she could not have left it when the thing happened—she would hear the noise. She was bound to hear it. She would be sure to come back, give the alarm and rescue him.

He listened. He shouted. No reply. His voice died away against the walls and ceiling of the box in which he was shut up.

Motionless now and silent, he thought once more of the girl's strange attitude, of her distraught face, of her haggard eyes. And he also began to wonder what accident had released the mechanism which had hurled the formidable iron curtain upon him, craftily and ruthlessly.

CHAPTER SIX

The Man With the Ebony Walking Stick.

A GROUP consisting of Deputy Chief Detective Weber, Chief Inspector Ancenis, Sergt. Mazeroux, three inspectors and the Neuilly Commissary of Police stood outside the gate of 8 Boulevard Richard-Wallace.

Mazeroux was watching the Avenue de Madrid, by which Don Luis would have to come, and began to wonder what had happened, for half an hour had passed since they telephoned to each other, and Mazeroux could find no further pretext for delaying the work.

"It's time to make a move," said Weber. "The housekeeper is making signals to us from the window; the joker's dressing."

"Why not nab him when he comes out?" objected Mazeroux. "We shall capture him in a moment."

"And if he cuts off by another outlet which we don't know of?" said the deputy chief. "You have to be careful with these beggars. No, let's beard him in his den. It's more certain."

"Still"——

"What's the matter with you, Mazeroux?" asked the deputy chief, taking him on one side. "Don't you see that our men are getting restive? They're afraid of this sportsman. There's only one way, which is to set them on him as if he were a wild beast. Besides, the business must be finished by the time the Prefect comes."

"Is he coming?"

"Yes. He wants to see things for himself. The whole affair interests him enormously. So, forward! Are you ready, men? I'm going to ring."

The bell sounded; and the housekeeper at once came and half opened the gate.

The meeting took place on the first floor. The man had come down, fully dressed, with his hat on his head; and the deputy chief roared:

"Stop! Hands up! Are you Hubert Lautier?"

The man seemed disconcerted. Five revolvers were leveled at him. And yet no sign of fear showed in his face; and he simply said:

"What do you want, Monsieur? What are you here for?"

"We are here in the name of the law, with a warrant for your arrest."

"But it's absurd!" said the man. "It's incredible! What does it mean? What for?"

They took him by both arms, without his offering the least resistance, pushed him into a fairly large room, containing no furniture but three rush-bottomed chairs, an armchair and a table covered with big books.

The man made no protest. While the two detectives held him by the collar, he seemed to be reflecting, as though he were trying to understand the secret causes of an arrest for which he was totally unprepared. He had an intelligent face, a reddish-brown beard and a pair of blue-gray eyes which now and again showed a certain hardness of expression behind his glasses. His broad shoulders and powerful neck pointed to physical strength.

M. Desmalions arrived and, while watching the prisoner's face, talked in a low voice with the deputy chief and received the particulars of the arrest.

The prisoner had not uttered a word, but still wore a thoughtful look, as though trying to understand the inexplicable events of the last few minutes. Nevertheless, when he realized that the newcomer was none other than the Prefect of Police, he raised his head and looked at M. Desmalions, who asked him:

"It is unnecessary to tell you the cause of your arrest, I presume?"

He replied, in a deferential tone:

"Excuse me, Monsieur le Prefet, but I must ask you, on the contrary, to inform me. I have not the least idea of the reason. Your detectives have made a grave mistake which a word, no doubt, will be enough to set right. That word I wish for, I insist upon"——

The Prefect shrugged his shoulders and said:

"You are suspected of taking part in the murder of Fauville, the civil engineer, and his son Edmond."

"Is Hippolyte dead?"

The cry was spontaneous, almost unconscious; a bewildered cry of dismay from a man moved to the depths of his being. And his dismay was supremely strange, his question, trying to make them believe his ignorance, supremely unexpected.

He repeated the question in a hoarse voice, trembling all over as he spoke.

"Is Hippolyte dead? What are you saying? Is it possible that he can be dead? And how? Murdered? Edmond, too?"

The Prefect once more shrugged his shoulders.

"The mere fact of your calling M. Fauville by his Christian name shows that you knew him intimately. And, even if you were not concerned in his murder, it has been mentioned often enough in the newspapers during the last fortnight for you to know of it."

"I never read a newspaper, Monsieur le Prefet."

"What! You mean to tell me"——

"It may sound improbable, but it is quite true. I lead an industrious life, occupying myself solely with scientific research, in view of a popular work which I am preparing, and I do not take the least part or the least interest in outside things. I defy anyone to prove that I have read a newspaper for months and months past

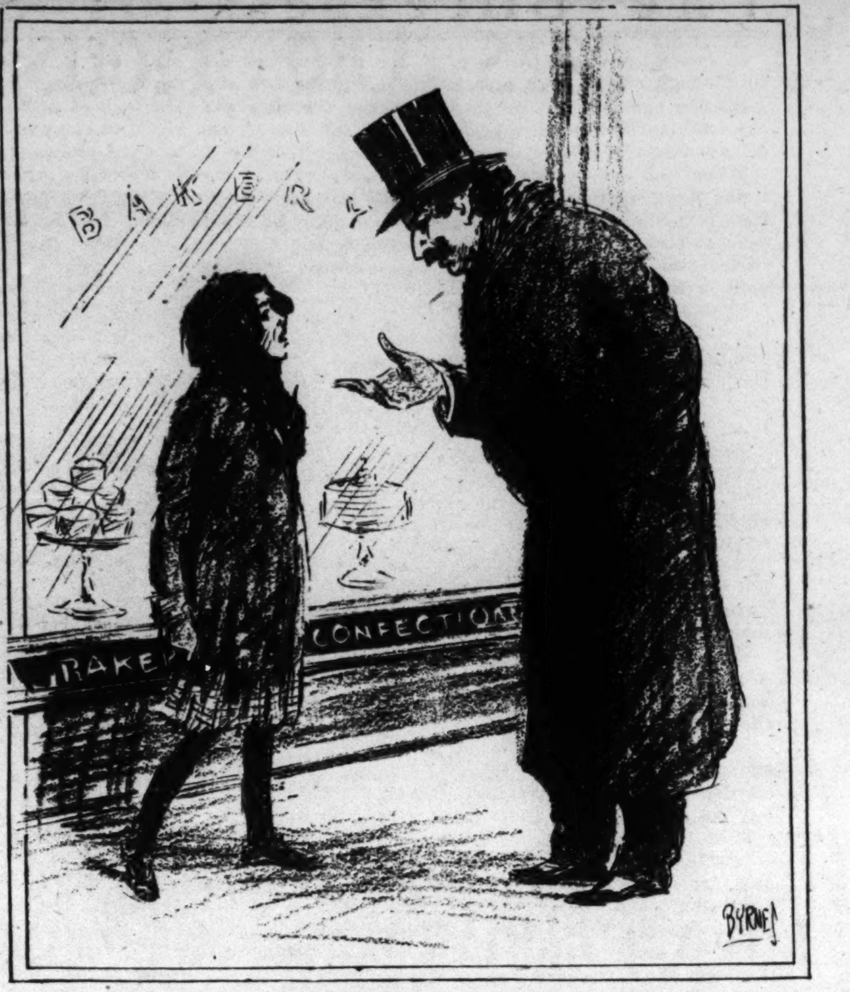
THE BITTERNESS OF SWEETS

By RUPERT HUGHES



"Say, keed, you wanta make big money, huh?"

LEAN little Mollie Finneran had just lost her job. It was not much of a job, but she was even less of a success at it.

It was not for lack of ambition on the part of her father and mother. They had wasted as little time on her education as the truant officer had permitted. They had not pampered her; they had not weakened her with luxuries and rich foods. In fact, they had almost trained her to the ideal point of getting along on nothing at all. But the best they could secure for her in the way of employment was this job as cash girl. She got $3 a week and didn't get it. Her parents got it.

But Sliver was not a success as a cash girl. If she had had food oftener, or had not been placed ironically in a parish of tinware bounded on one side by a delicatessen department and on the other by a candy counter, she might have had more soul to give to her business. The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts, and Sliver thought how long it was between meals.

For weeks the saleswoman scolded her, and the aisle managers yanked her by the ear out of her dreams. Then the slack season arrived and they asked for her resignation—offered her her portfolio.

She accepted the pay envelope with disdain, and promised to give it to the poor.

She wondered what her family would do now without her $3 and how she would kill time in the miserable streets or in the miserabler top floor back. She feared a beating, many beatings, and resolved not to go home at all.

Even as she planned revolt her feet, like a team of old horses, turned aside at a bakery window, where she always paused as before a roadside altar. If only she had some money of her very own! If only she could squander even a dime on doughnuts! She felt that she could do desperate deeds for a cream puff. What wouldn't she do for money enough to evoke that musical cry, "Brown the wheats; draw one!"

A young reporter hurrying down the ugly street paused to gaze at her. He had written verses in college and he still poetized everything, to the great wear and tear of blue pencils at the copy desk. So now he saw a prophetic wistfulness in Sliver's attitude, and in her overgrown eyes the darkling of a love-dawn.

As he made off on his errand he stopped short again, for he noted that the girl was observed by an elderly man whose swart and villainous mien was struck across with a black mustache and buried in a perfidious fur overcoat. This evident scoundrel halted and stared at the girl with approval.

But the swart knave moved on without speaking and the reporter went his way, too, looking back and wondering what dreams of love they were that must be thrilling the shabby little, thin little, quaint little creature poised in reverie before the baker's window. And so he passed out of Sliver's life. But the swart man came back.

The reporter had thought that Sliver was musing upon love. The swart man had thought she stared enviously at the lithograph in the window. This pictured "Carl Bruni's Flying Swallows," a sextet of girls appearing in a cheap vaudeville theater near at hand.

But Sliver was meditating neither love nor lithograph. Sliver had always been hungry. Never once in her life had she had enough to eat. As far back as she could remember, Sliver had known famine and nothing else.

It was at this crisis in her soul that the swart man returned upon his steps and drawing close to where she posed before the baker's window, murmured to her with a foreign accent. And as everybody who can read knows, a foreign accent is a proof of a villainous disposition.

"Say, keed, you wanta make big money, huh?"

Sliver's self-respect was militant at once. She whirled on the stranger with a fierce snap:

"Beat it, you big boob, or I'll holler for the bulls."

She resumed her contemplation of the baker's paradise. She wept with craving. A sniffling sob was cut in half by a sudden remembrance of the words "big money.' Big money meant big meals. Perhaps the voice had been from heaven instead of the other place. Some angel may have offered her big money, and she answered with insult!

Then, as if by a miracle, she seemed to have wished the angel back. Over her sob-shaken shoulder came that dulcet voice again:

"Dawn't git mad, keed; but dawn't you wanna make da beeg money queeck?"

Sliver turned and studied the angel. He wore little glossy shoes and a fur-lined overcoat and a shabby silk hat. This was plainly no angel; and if he were a devil, Sliver felt that she could exorcise him with one swift kick on the shins or an elbow drive in his stomach. Reassured, she mocked him with skeptical contempt.

"Ah, go ahn! Whaddaya mean—beeg money queek?"

The Italian took courage; he pointed with a much-ringed hand at the lithograph in the window.

"See dat pitture, huh? 'Bruni's Fleen Svallows,' huh? I am Bruni!"

"Ah, go ahn!" said Sliver, masking her awe.

"Sure, I am Bruni. I invent dose svallows, and bring to America from Eetaly, yas! Ve play now at dees t'ater right here, huh? You have not see my svallows, huh? You come see, now."

"Ah, go ahn! You said I could make big money."

"Sure! One of my svallows she is get seeck; she cannot make de jomp to Patersona. I most get a new svallow. I offer you de job."

"Ah, go—what would I have to do?"

"Awnly to fly—fly in de air."

"Ah, go ahn! I can't fly. I never learned to fly."

Mr. Bruni laughed with indulgent patience. Sliver came back to the main issue. "You was talkin' big money. How much do you slip your swallers?"

"Six"——

He was going to say "sixteen." She thought he was about to say "six," and her heart leaped with joy. He slyly fell to "twelve," not knowing that he had doubled the sum in her eyes and quadrupled her latest wage. Twelve dollars a week! Was he offering her as much a week for floating in the air as she had earned in a month for lugging her feet along the department store Marathon?

"Twelve dollars," she sneered. "Twelve nothin'. Ah, go ahn!" Mr. Bruni nodded violently. Sliver would have fainted if she had known how.

Mr. Bruni, seeing that she was wavering, pressed his cause.

"You come see my svallows, now—right here, huh?"

It is believed that no layman exists so rich as not to be elated at the thought of entering a theater on a pass. To Sliver it was just a little more flattering than if St. Peter had invited her to walk into heaven without penance.

She found herself in a cave of gloom, at whose further end a Niagara of pictures was cascading. She felt the little hand of the old man take her arm. It was like grasping a rolled-up umbrella.

After a thousand feet of cowboy adventure had reeled past the fascinated eyes of Sliver a melancholy youth set out a placard announcing the "Engagement Extraordinary of the World Famous Bruni's Swallows, by Carl Bruni." The pianist chopped the piano with the vigor due to an engagement extraordinary and the tarnished old curtain went up with importance, disclosing six young girls, all of a size, all slim and sprightly, all clad in feathers, with the heads of birds for caps, with wings for sleeves and swallowtails for trains.

They sang and danced and to Sliver they were a choir of seraphim. Suddenly at the end of their dance they rose straight in the air, with their wings outspread and their pink legs and slippered feet far back.

When the curtain fell on the birds, all lyrical and afloat in the air, Sliver beat her palms raw in applause.

In the lobby of the theater Bruni said:

"Vell, you like my svallows—huh?"

"Great, Mr. Bruni," said Sliver with the manner of an expert; "they're simply great."

"You like to be one—huh?"

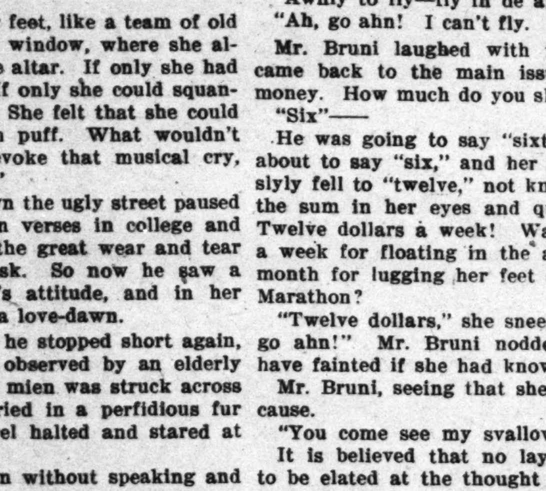
"I'm going to be one," said Sliver.

Mr. Bruni, like many another villainous looking man, had a matronly soul. He said: "Your mawther geeves her consent—huh?"

"Me ma?" said Sliver. "Sure she will." She knew that her mother would refuse—less because she feared for Sliver than because she feared for the pay envelope. But Sliver was determined that nothing should stop her from realizing this opportunity. It was so inconceivably beautiful that she said:

"Say, why did you pick me out for this when so many goils are so much classier?"

Mr. Bruni was too gracious a gentleman to confess that he chose Sliver because she was a sliver, and becuse she was at hand and looked cheap. He explained that he had an eye for genius and could tell a born swallow the moment he saw one.



"You ain't the first swaller dat's been crowded out because she weighed in too heavy."

She ran home to bid her mother farewell. She found the flat empty; she judged from the signs of struggle that her parents had had another argument. The flatiron had left another dent in the wall and its nose was covered with plaster. A neighbor informed Sliver that her father and mother had left the house for a ride in the picnic wagon the city kept at their disposal. The neighbor guessed that they would doubtless "get the island for another thirty." So Sliver did not leave the $3, but merely a little note:

"dear ma I been fired at the store but got another Jobe in Nu Jearsie wil rite soon your loveing doughtre."

Then she sped to the theater and asked for Mr. Bruni. She was referred to the stage door. This was too glorious. She found Mr. Bruni and he led her up an iron stairway to a tenement of dressing rooms and introduced her to his flock. The swallows sat about in their feathers and their unmitigated make-up. Some were mending their plumage, one was reading a book, one was sewing at a child's clothing, and one was industriously masticating gum.

At Mr. Bruni's request the gum-chewer, who was about to leave the troupe, permitted Sliver to try on her costume. An extra pair of tights was found and Mr. Bruni withdrew while Sliver made the change behind a chair.

With her arms bare and her shanks in hose a world too wide, she was unimaginably thin.

When she doffed her splendor Sliver was permitted to sit in the wings and watch the swallows do their supper-turn to an almost empty house. It astounded her to see the mechanism at work and to realize that the lightly flitting swallows were raised and lowered on wires and pulleys controlled by stagehands in overalls. Such romance in front of the scene, such realism back of it!

She slept that night in the deserted flat, and the next morning she was awake at the first streak of soiled daybreak that pierced the dirty window. She leaped from her slumber and pirouetted and danced, took flying leaps from the edge of the bed and from the table, and practiced aviation till the neighbors thought her father and mother must have escaped from the law and resumed their debates.

Sliver heated as much water as the clothes boiler would hold and bathed in it, and made the neatest toilet she could. She borrowed an old telescope bag from a wealthy neighbor and packed what little wardrobe she possessed.

She reached the theater before the nightwatchman was awake. The hours she must survive before Mr. Bruni arrived seemed unendurable.

When Mr. Bruni finally arrived and knocked at the door she felt gusts of fright sweeping across her skin. She was ashamed to go out before him. But no one was present save Mr. Bruni and the youth who had hoisted the swallow she was to supersede. This youth Mr. Bruni introduced as his "asseestant, Ned Krook."

Mr. Krug looked Sliver over brazenly and snickered. She flared with modesty at his gaze and with wrath at his smile, but she said nothing. Mr. Bruni laid off his hat and his fur coat and his other coat and taught Sliver the dance steps. It needed all her reverence for him to keep down her amusement at his appearance as he flung his barrel-like body this way or that and kicked up his short, fat, almost kneeless legs. She was a trial to his temper, for she had no tradition, instinct or training in the dance and he had no breath or agility.

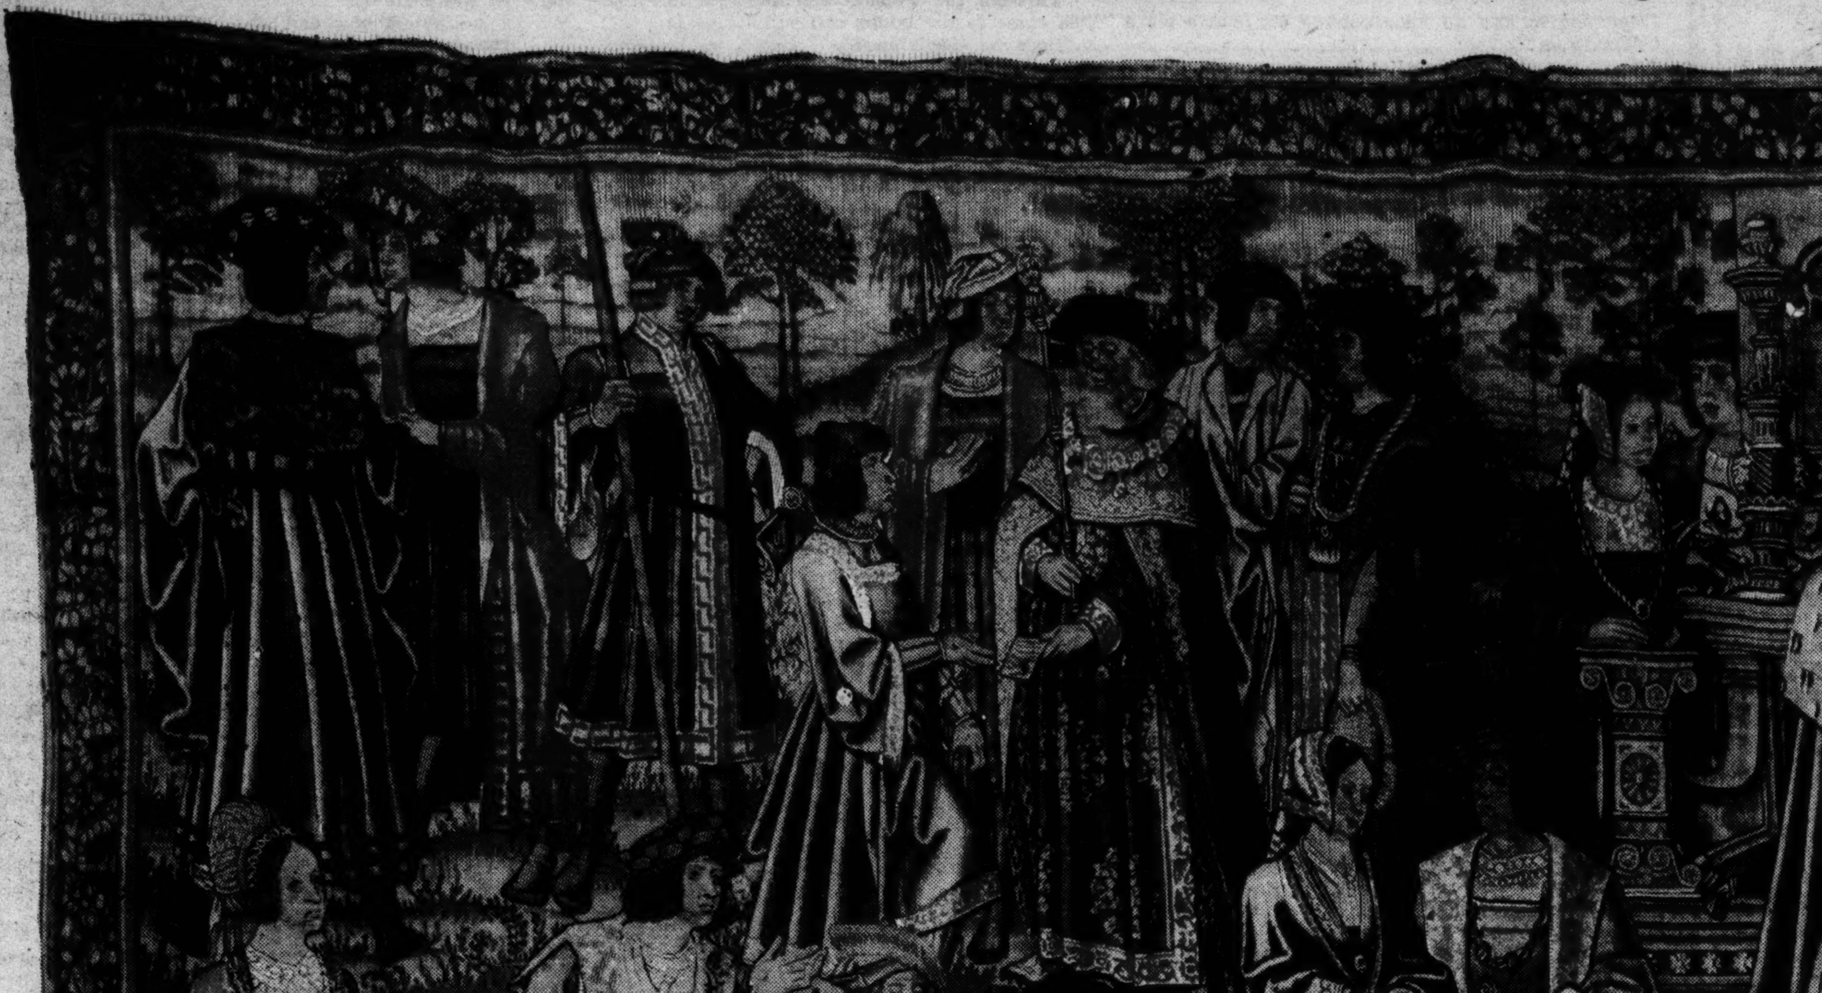
As Ned Krug was buckling the harness on Sliver he murmured, "You two was cert'ny some scream; fat old gander tryin' to learn a squab to dance a turkey trot. But you're all right, girlie; you and me's a sketch. We'll have some swell times togedder, won't we?"

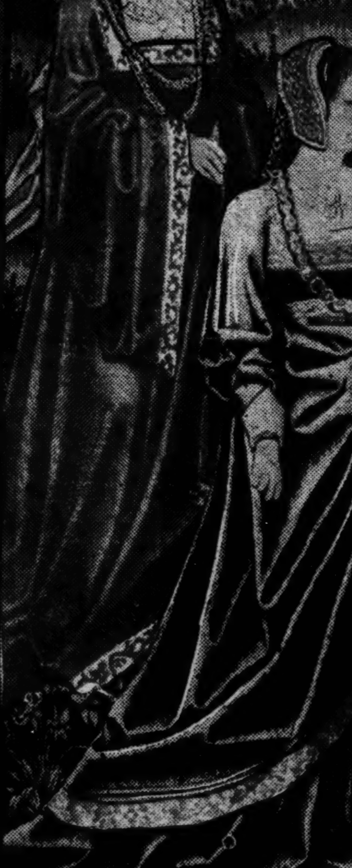
"Yes, we won't we!" was Sliver's only answer. Krug liked her haughty manner. He mumbled, "Sure we will. I'm batty about you and you'll find me a regular feller."

He kept his hands about her waist longer than seemed necessary and Sliver gave him a smack in the face. It was so loud that Mr. Bruni, at the opposite side of the stage, turned to see if a pulley had broken.

She went up kicking and swirling. She was out of Krug's reach, but more than ever in his power. He gave her one or two sickening lurches to emphasize this fact and she was frightened beyond screaming. But she was even more afraid of being returned to her old life.

Famous and Priceless Flemish Tapestry 50





PROBABLY the most valuable tapestry anywhere in the Middle West is now in the new annex living room of the Edward A. Faust mansion, 1 Portland place. Woven in Flanders in the fifteenth century for the royal house of Spain, it has passed through many hands until Mr. Faust obtained it.

It is 21 feet 5½ inches wide and 11 feet 10½ inches in height and includes 38 figures, some of them being of life size. It portrays one of the most thrilling dramas of the Old Testament, the story of King David and Bathsheba, beautiful wife of Uriah, the Hittite soldier.

The tapestry originally formed part of a collection of Flemish art treasures belonging to the Kings of Spain, and for a long time was in the royal palace at Madrid. About 50 years ago, a M. Le Francois, a French engineer, bought it and took it to France where it remained in his chateau at Vierville (Calvados) until recently.

Its value is not easy to learn. Among connoisseurs it is said that $100,000 would be a fair figure. Its present owner, however, declines to discuss the matter of cost in connection with his treasure.

Old as it is, it is still remarkable for the richness of its coloring and for the limning of the figures. They seem almost to stand out in high relief against the background. In composition it is a masterpiece. Silk was employed in its construction and gives it a brilliant appearance.

It is one of the most perfect of the fifteenth century tapestries in existence. Another of the same set, depicting scenes in the life of David, has long been considered one of the choicest treasures of the museum at Brussels.

The Biblical narrative of this ancient romance is to be found in the second book of Samuel, beginning with the eleventh chapter. It will be remembered that King David was walking on the roof of his royal house one evening when he observed Bathsheba at her bath and became so enamored of her that he lost no time in ascertaining who she was and having her brought to him.

When the amour could no longer be concealed, David sent to Joab, commander of his army then fighting the Ammonites, and ordered that Uriah be sent to Jerusalem at once. The wily monarch tried twice in vain to reunite Uriah and his wife, but Uriah was a bluff soldier of the time, and refused to go to his own home while his companions were suffering the hardships of the field.

David sent him back to Joab with a letter, instructing the commander to put Uriah in the forefront of the battle so that he might be slain. The thing fell out as arranged. When David learned of Uriah's death, he again sent for Bathsheba and made her his wife. A child was born to them soon after.

The King was not, however, to go unpunished for this great sin. Nathan, the prophet, denounced him for it to his face and promised him that the child would die. David supplicated the Lord in vain, for the child did die. Yet there was a measure of consolation in it after all, for Bathsheba bore David another son, destined to become the most brilliant ruler of all Israel, Solomon.

The tapestry is really divided into three sections. In the center of the composition, David and Bathsheba are standing on a flowered carpet in front of a richly decorated double throne. The King's face is bearded; his hands are clasped together with the fingers interlaced, the head raised towards heaven. He is clad in a heavy mantle lined with red over a blue doublet, ornamented with gold embroidery of a large pattern, and round his waist is a belt of gold work. A collar of precious stones crosses his breast. The shoes are of cloth of gold, ornamented with pearls. A richly decorated cap covers his head. On the border of the garment, where it touches the left leg, is written the word, "David."

Bathsheba stands near the King, her arms crossed over her breast in a submissive manner, her head slightly bowed. She wears a robe with large sleeves, lined with red, which is covered by a mantle with an ermine collar and bordered with the same fur. The collar is fastened with a gold chain and two clasps. A similar clasp fastens her girdle. On her head she wears a padded cap covering a veil.

Important as are these two personages, even more important is the figure of Nathan, standing in the foreground, his right hand upraised in a sweeping gesture, his face looking upward as if he were reading the heavens. There is a paper in the left hand. Seated near him is a young woman, apparently looking at the prophet with astonishment. It is this group which gives the tapestry its title, "The Prophecy of Nathan."

Uriah is simply dressed and is bowing before the King in proper humility. Behind and surrounding the pair are four men-at-arms in different dresses.

The right-hand section shows Uriah delivering the fatal message to Joab. The latter, that stern, obedient soldier, who never faltered in his duty as he understood it, and who afterwards rebuked David to his face for his leniency towards his traitorous son, Absalom, is clad in armor, over which is a sober-colored but rich costume. He has just left his tent and is escorted by two men-of-arms, bearing lances, and two nobles. He has advanced towards Uriah courteously and, bareheaded, is shaking hands with him.

These two subordinate panels are merely set as contrasts to the principal picture, which they serve to accentuate. Manifestly everybody present is more interested in what Nathan has to say than in the royal lovers. In a group to the right, near the center, is a young woman, gorgeously appareled, sitting in an armchair of blue velvet decorated with gold. Another young woman leans towards her; seated in front of them is a lord, who appears to be explaining the words of the prophet. Behind this group a lord and lady have fixed their eyes on Nathan. Further to the right are four other persons in rich costumes, two men and two women. To the left of Nathan there is a couple standing a little back of him and between them and the end of the tapestry are three more lords and three ladies. The foreground is covered with plants and flowers. The whole is enclosed in its original border, composed of garlands of foliage, forming part of the design.

Outside of the wonderful workmanship, the tapestry is unmistakably the creation of a genuine artist. His figures make the whole story vivid. The courtiers have surrounded the royal pair to render them the homage of adulation. The bride is happy and proud and the bridegroom has led her out with the air of a conqueror.

Into the crowd of merrymakers stalks the stern figure of the Man of God. He does not note the graciousness of the new Queen or the majesty of her husband. He only sees a poor, wronged man, treacherously sent to his doom. His duty is clear. A black sin has been committed and he must rebuke it. Stretching his hand towards heaven, he utters bitter words of condemnation; he pronounces the doom that shall blast the first fruits of this wicked marriage. Truly a strange greeting for a bridal! Of all the personages in this group, old Nathan is by far the most striking and well he should be. It was not a safe thing to rebuke a mighty King of Israel in those days, as the Biblical annals of the time so fully show.

THE SWEETEST MUSIC YOU EVER HEARD
Anyone Can Play It—You Can Get It Free

The Harmonette is something new among musical instruments and is meeting with great popular favor as any person, man, woman, boy or girl, can play on it all their favorite hymns, songs, etc. without previous experience or the knowledge of musical notes. You will be surprised to see how easily you can play it.

The Harmonette is a very clever imitation of a miniature harp. It is a sweetly toned tremlo harmonica attached to a highly polished resonator or sound box of mahogany finish with silver pressings. It has 32 holes, brass plates with finely nickel-plated covers and turned in ends. It really is a beauty.
